TUMULTUOUS HOUSE APPROVES ECONOMY BILL AFTER DEMOCRATS SPLIT ON ISSUE IN CAUCUS

OTHERS IN STATE TO OPEN TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

First, Citizens & Southern, Fulton and Trust Company of Georgia Ready To Resume "Full Time" Operations.

AUTHORITY IS GIVEN BY TREASURY HEAD

Woodin Telegraphs Permission Here After Roosevelt Program Is Made Public.

Four Atlanta banks—the First National, the Citizens and Southern National, the Fulton National and the Trust Company of Georgia—will reopen for unrestricted business at the usual hour Monday morning for "full time operations" under telegraphic authority of the secretary of the treasury given Saturday night to banks in the cities where the 12 Federal Reserve banks are located.

Telegraphic authority for the reopening came after President Roosevelt's program for reopening the doors of state and national institutions by Wednesday had been announced in Washington Saturday night.

There will be no restrictions thrown around the operation of the four banks here, federal reserve officials said Saturday night after a meeting to discuss the treasury ruling. On Tuesday, licensed institutions in cities where "recognized" clearing houses are in operation will be permitted to reopen.

Others Open Wednesday.

A virtually complete lifting of the banking moratorium throughout the country will follow on Wednesday when banks that are given approval and are located in cities having no federal reserve bank or recognized clearing house may be opened for unrestricted operations. In this connection, R. E. Gormley, Georgia superintendent of banks, said Saturday night:

"State banks that are located in those towns as classified under the presidential proclamation will be permitted to open for business simultaneously with national banks and federal reserve member banks located in the towns of the respective classifications.

The Roosevelt program for reopening the banks, both state and national, will be in the final stage of execution on Wednesday when the new issues of currency will be circulating from all banks which are officially approved as solvent and stable.

Names of Banks Withheld.

President Roosevelt's program for the resumption of normal deposits and withdrawals was disclosed Saturday night but officials did not make public the names of approved banks. Treasury and federal reserve officials worked overtime in technical preparations for the reopening Monday in reserve bank cities, on Tuesday in the 250 or more cities which have recognized clearing house associations and on Wednesday in the other cities and towns.

State authorities were charged with regulating the opening of banks which are not connected with the federal reserve system. Delays were caused by the necessity of thorough preparations, the president stressed, and constitute no reflection upon banks slow to open.

6 State Bankers Meet.

At a meeting attended by 700 state bankers of Georgia in the Wesley Memorial church here Saturday, State Superintendent Gormley said the banks would reopen the day after the national institutions are permitted to unrestricted business.

The same mass meeting urged Governor Eugene Talmadge to sign the bill which gives to Gormley dictatorial powers over state banks in emergencies.

Committeemen conveyed the expressions of the convention to the governor at the capitol and remained in a closed conference for more than an hour. When the conference ended, Governor Talmadge said he had no statement to make.

Gormley told the convention his discrimination in permitting withdrawals would be based on statements required of the banks setting out their amount of cash and the nature of their securities.

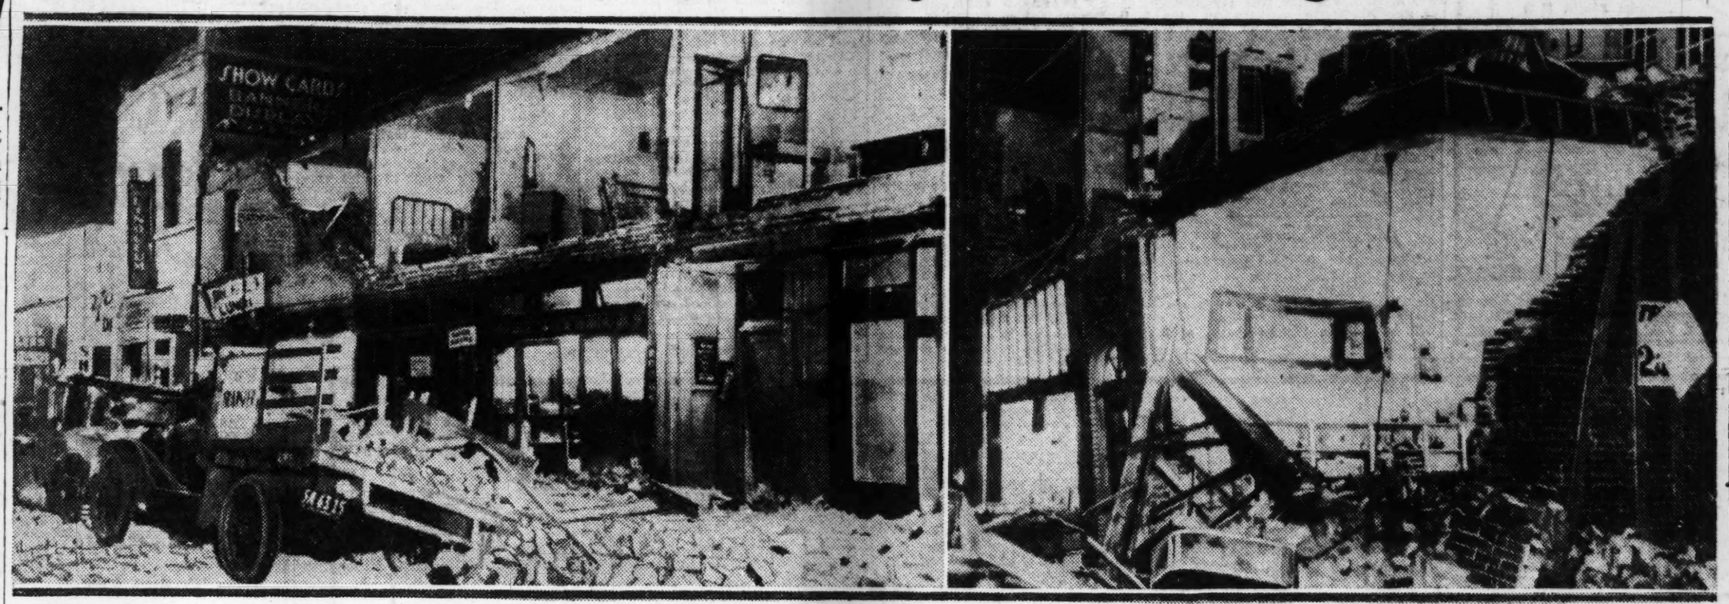

"Our problem now," Gormley said, "is to start the Wheels of trade turning. It will take some time to work that problem out."

Application Made Friday.

Request of Atlanta banks to reopen on a normal basis was placed before Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin Friday and at the same time a similar request was made by banks

New Shocks Add Terror To Los Angeles Earthquake Area; 130 Known Dead, 5,000 Injured, Damage 45 Millions

These photographs were made in Long Beach, Cal., March 10 where the most severe temblors of the California earthquake struck, killing 130 persons and causing millions of dollars damage. The view at the left shows the front of this hotel has been neatly removed, revealing the inside, and scattering debris on the sidewalk. At the right is a photograph of the wreckage of a Long Beach apartment and store where three persons were killed. The pictures were telephotoed to New York and sent to Atlanta by airmail. They were taken by the Associated Press. Additional pictures in page 4.

Greatly Reduced Shocks Continue as Los Angeles Area Turns to Plans for Rebuilding and Measures To Care for Injured and Lessen Suffering.

By the Associated Press.

As southern California counted the toll of 130 dead from its devastating earthquake, recurrent shocks last night rasped the raw nerves of the two million persons who escaped injury. A severe shock hit Long Beach and Los Angeles at 10:18 Pacific time.

The list of injured was placed at approximately 5,000. Property damage was estimated at more than $45,000,000.

In Long Beach, which bore the brunt of the destruction, there were 70 dead and some 2,500 injured. Additional bodies were being sought in the ruins. At least 75 per cent of the buildings in the city were damaged, and the loss was put at $25,000,000.

Deaths and property damage, by cities, as reported late Saturday night, stood:

Long Beach, 70; Compton, 17; Huntington Park, 8; San Pedro, 2; Los Angeles, 5; South Gate, 2; Santa Ana, 3; Watts, 7; Artesia, 4; Bellflower, 3; Wilmington, Hermosa Beach, Norwalk, Garden Grove, Walnut Park and Lynwood, one each; Santa Monica, 3. Total, 130.

Property damage: Long Beach, $25,000,000; Compton, $12,000,000 to $15,000,000; Huntington Park, $2,500,000; Lynwood, $1,000,000; South Gate, $600,000; Los Angeles, $1,000,000.

The remainder of the death list was scattered in various sections of the metropolitan area.

Swift action was taken to supply food, temporary shelter and medical care in the stricken area.

Thousands of United States sailors and marines from the battle fleet at San Pedro, national guardsmen and American Legionnaires joined police in patrol duty to prevent possible vandalism and looting.

ROOSEVELT PLAN FOR HEAVY CUTS WINS BY 266-138

91 Democrats Desert New Chief Executive's Move To Drastically Reduce Ex-Service Men's Pensions and Salaries.

SENATE TO ACT FIRST OF WEEK

Hines Ready To Speed Through Program as "Only Possible Method of Balancing Budget."

By CECIL B. DICKSON.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's economy bill was rushed through the house to a divided senate today in a spectacular battle that split the big democratic majority into two fighting factions.

The opposition was led by insurgent democratic forces, which refused at a party caucus earlier in the day to be bound to support the president in his proposal to bring about economies to balance the federal budget and restore the nation's credit.

Despite this, the leaders, aided by the conserative wing and a majority of republicans, stamped house approval on the emergency legislation, 266 to 138. On a roll call vote, Speaker Rainey broke precedent and voted for the bill. The speaker usually votes only in case of a tie.

Senate Is Confident.

Sixty-nine republicans joined 197 democrats in support of the measure, while 92 democrats, 41 republicans and five farmer-laborites voted against.

On the senate side, meanwhile, the democrats began to split on the proposition. The senate finance committee, headed by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, reported it favorably and without major change for action Monday despite the opposition of Senators Connally, of Texas, and Clark, of Missouri, democrats.

No party caucus is planned by the senate democratic majority, Harrison said. With republican help they are confident of passing the measure and beating off an unexpected effort to emaciate the bill with amendments.

After two hours of debate in which Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, chairman of the special economy committee, led the fight for the measure, the house defeated, 272 to 90, a motion by Representative Connery, democrat, Massachusetts, to send the bill back to committee, which would have killed it temporarily.

Leaders Beat Own Caucus.

This action blocked an attempt by Representative Browning, democrat, Tennessee, to force the inclusion of an amendment limiting the president's authority to cut veterans' pensions,

PRESIDENT ORDERS OPENING OF BANKS TO BEGIN MONDAY

Institutions in Twelve Federal Reserve Cities First To Open; Others To Follow Quickly.

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—A progressive plan for opening of the sound banks of the nation beginning Monday was announced tonight by President Roosevelt.

The program calls for full-time operations by licensed banks—both state and national—on Monday in the cities where the 12 federal reserve banks are located.

On Tuesday the licensed institutions located in places where clearing house associations, including more than 250 cities, are in operation, will be permitted to resume full activity.

Banks that win approval and are located elsewhere are given authority to proceed on a normal basis on Wednesday.

President Roosevelt said the progressive opening plan "does not mean that anyone should draw the inference" that the banks opening first are in any different condition as to soundness from institutions licensed to open on any subsequent day.

The progressive program was employed by the president to provide time for the shipments of the new currency just authorized by congress to get to the clearing house cities and banks in the smaller communities.

Restrictions Clear.

The 12 federal reserve bank cities where operations will be resumed on Monday are:

Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis Kansas City, Minneapolis, Dallas and San Francisco.

Secretary Woodin late tonight called upon state authorities having supervision of banking institutions located in Federal Reserve bank cities to co-operate with the government by permitting the institutions to open for business Monday in all cases where they are qualified to do so on an unrestricted basis.

At the same time, the secretary of the treasury said no licenses would be issued to any bank located outside

Roosevelt To Speak On Radio at 9 Tonight

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—President Roosevelt tonight announced that he would speak to the nation Sunday night at 10 o'clock (9 o'clock Atlanta time) on the subject of the bank situation. The president said that he would outline the steps the government has taken and will talk in simple language so that all may understand.

SALESMAN SLAYS ATLANTA WOMAN, THEN KILLS SELF

Mrs. Fannie B. Wills and Arthur C. Reece Dead After Tragedy on Oglethorpe Avenue Here.

Mrs. Fannie B. Wills, 36, of 1058 Oglethorpe avenue, was killed Saturday afternoon by Arthur C. Reece, automobile salesman, who then turned a .32 automatic pistol to his mouth and killed himself.

According to police reports, Reece, who has been living in Gainesville with a brother, and Mrs. Wills were former sweethearts and had recently separated. Reece came back Saturday morning to try and effect a reconciliation.

Under the influence of whisky, detectives reported, he went to the Oglethorpe avenue home, into which Mrs. Wills and her three children had only moved Saturday morning, and opened fire on his former sweetheart. With the second of three bullets in the pistol, he shot himself.

Mrs. Wills, it was said by neighbors, had moved several times in order to prevent Reece from locating her. She moved to the Oglethorpe avenue address from 1172 Lucille avenue. Neighbors said that she was employed as a pianist at a Riverside dance hall.

Reece's body was removed to the undertaking parlors of Sam Greenberg & Company and that of Mrs. Wills to the parlors of the J. Austin Dillon Company. Mrs. Wills is survived by three boys.

The shooting took place in the kitchen while one of Mrs. Wills three children was at the home of an uncle. The third boy was in Kentucky visiting relatives there.

There were two witnesses to the shooting, police said. They were Cecil Wills and Miss Margaret Winters.

L. & N. FARE CUT GIVEN APPROVAL

One-Way Rate of Two Cents in Coaches, Three in Pullmans Ordered.

Authority for the Louisville & Nashville railroad to place in effect its proposal for intrastate fares of two cents a mile in coaches and three cents a mile in sleeping cars, on a one-way basis, was granted Saturday by the Georgia public service commission subject to a hearing on a general passenger fare reduction case set for March 20.

The commission, in an order signed by James A. Perry as chairman, and Robert N. Springfield as secretary, said that "this approval is not intended as an approval of the reasonableness of the fares." In a statement, Chairman Perry said that "since action of the commission yesterday (Friday), I have become convinced that failure of other railroads to agree with the L. & N. is due to the fact that they want to maintain the present passenger fares as nearly as possible."

The commission's order said that the commission is in accord with the railroad's petition to remove the surcharge for sleeping or parlor cars and that "the exhibit attached to this petition confirms the opinion held by our commission in December, 1921, to the effect that the surcharge would not serve to increase the earnings of the carriers." However, in view of the outstanding mandatory order of the interstate commerce commission, it will be necessary for the I. C. C. to revoke that order before the L. & N. can cancel the surcharge on any approval of the Georgia commission, the commission said.

The commission, in the order, explained that the surcharge was approved by the I. C. C. for interstate application in increased rates in 1920, and that after full hearing the surcharge was approved by the Georgia commission for intrastate traffic.

KEY, BAIRD IN ROW ON SCHOOL SURVEY

Mayor Insists Probe Will Be Made, Board Head Refuses Permission.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

While Mayor James L. Key and Dr. Noah W. Baird, president of the Atlanta board of education, Saturday wrangled over whether W. Evans Chambers, city survey expert, shall investigate the school department and file recommendations for economies, preparations were being made to air the row on the floor of the board session Tuesday afternoon.

Key Saturday addressed a letter to Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, advising him that he had directed Chambers to begin his survey this week. Sutton turned the letter over to Baird, and the latter countered with a heated refusal to permit Chambers to conduct the probe.

For the first time since establishment of the present board, there will be 16 qualified members sitting in board Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of council's finance committee, and B. Graham West, city comptroller, in addition to Alderman W. W. Waits, who, as chairman of the schools committee of council, has a place on the board. There are 13 members representing each of the 13 wards of the city.

Baird Bans Survey.

Baird advised Key that Sutton had been directed "to permit no such survey as you contemplate until the board of education has so ordered."

Although the mayor had not read Baird's letter, as it reached his office after he left Saturday afternoon, he said "I shall be glad to discuss any matters with Dr. Baird after the survey is completed and Mr. Chambers' recommendations have been filed."

The mayor's statement was in answer to a charge by Baird that the mayor would not discuss school affairs with him in a harmonious effort to prevent a "constant wrangle between holders of public offices."

Key's statement regarding the Chambers' survey also was taken to mean that he will insist that records of the school department be made

Atlantan's Grandmother Escapes Quake in Auto

Mrs. Janet H. Chapin, grandmother of Hunter Phelan, whom her relatives feared was injured Friday night in the earthquake, was reported Saturday as uninjured.

Mrs. Chapin, who is 96 years of age, lives in Long Beach, Cal., where many persons lost their lives. When the first temblor occurred, Mrs. Chapin left Long Beach in a car with her companion and drove to Pasadena, where a daughter resides.

The fact that Mrs. Chapin could not be reached at her Long Beach home early Saturday morning caused Mr. Phelan to fear she was injured.

SWEEPING POWERS WILL BE SOUGHT FOR FARM HEAD

Organization Leaders Agree To Urge Authority for Wallace To Control Production, Prices.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Farm organization leaders today agreed to ask congress to confer sweeping powers on Secretary Wallace, of the department of agriculture, to control farm production and increase prices.

The leaders presented their proposal to President Roosevelt, from whom the group said they expected approval or disapproval early next week. Secretary Wallace, they said, had indicated his willingness to accept the responsibility of the program.

The plan, announced after the visit to the White House, proposed that congress confer these emergency powers upon the president and the secretary of agriculture:

"Authority to lease agricultural land and to enter into contractual agreements for the control of agricultural production.

"To regulate and supervise the marketing and processing of agricultural and competing products in domestic and foreign commerce.

"To take such action and to make such settlements as are necessary in order to acquire full legal title to all cotton or other farm commodities on which the government has made loans or advances, upon such terms as may seem fair and just, and to

ADAMS' PROBERS CHARGE ATTEMPT TO 'BUY' REPORT

Two Committeemen Say Preferment, Money Offered; Farm Head's Impeachment To Be Asked.

By L. A. FARRELL.

Charges of attempted bribery and intimidation of its members were made by representatives on the special joint committee investigating alleged jobselling in the department of agriculture and laid before the house Saturday afternoon simultaneously with the filing of the committee's report and formal notice that impeachment of Commissioner of Agriculture G. C. Adams will be asked at Monday's session.

The charges were made by Representative A. S. Johnson, of Montgomery county, and Representative D. S. Strickland, of Douglas county. They asserted on the floor of the house that a member of the committee, who was not named, had been approached with promises of political preferment and even money "if a certain kind of report was submitted," and further charged that the member had been threatened with political harm if he failed to meet the wishes of those pressing him.

Immediately after the findings of the committee were laid before the house, Representatives Stonewall Dyer, of Coweta county, and J. M. C. Townsend, of Dade county, announced from the floor that the articles asking impeachment of Adams would be filed Monday morning, explaining that the necessity of incorporating part of the committee report in the articles made it impossible to complete the articles before adjournment Saturday afternoon.

Representative Orville A. Park, of Bibb county, one of the state's best known constitutional lawyers, has been assisting Dyer and Townsend in drawing the articles. Judge Park said Saturday he did not know whether he would become a co-author of the impeachment articles, pointing out that at the time he was merely aiding those who have announced themselves determined to ask that Adams be brought before the senate for trial.

Two reports were laid before both the house and senate as a result of the inquiry into alleged job-selling in Adams' department. One, the ma-

Weird Sensations of 'Quakes Described by Grantland Rice

By GRANTLAND RICE.

(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 11.—Several million persons in southern California still carry the feeling of those who have just finished a long, rough ocean voyage, in the wake of an earthquake that left approximately 200 people dead, 5,000 injured and wreckage strewn up and down the coast.

All these millions still carry sea legs from the first shock of the rocking, rolling motion that was followed all night long by other tremors which did little damage, but gave one the feeling of impending disaster.

Only those who have been in the middle of a real earthquake can realize the weird, strange and startling sensations that accompany a rocking, reeling world beneath your feet.

I happened to be working on the fourth floor of a Los Angeles hotel when there came first a far-away rumble, something that might be presaging a coming storm. It was dull thunder moving up the land. A moment later the window panes began to rattle, the window curtains to flap, chairs and tables to slip and slide. Then pictures on the wall started tilting right and left. This was the start.

Two or three seconds later the floor

Ochs, Dean of Publishers, Sees Bright Future for U. S.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—America is recovering from a "wild debauch of frenzied finance, crazy speculation and insensate greed," but "never has the country had brighter prospects ahead than at present," Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, said here today on the eve of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary.

Mr. Ochs, also the owner of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, and for 30 years a member of the board of directors of the Associated Press, will spend the day in quiet observance with his wife and Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, his daughter, to review economic conditions that have gripped the nation.

"I am in full sympathy with President Roosevelt's program that only the federal reserve banks issu currency and that banks of liquid assets of the banks, mobilize the gold of the country and maintain the gold standard," said the dean of American newspapermen.

"There is no need of gold currency in this country, and what we have, as we have plenty, should be held to preserve our credit throughout the world.

"Never in its history was the United States so rich, so strong, so powerful and with brighter prospects ahead than it is at present. We have barely scraped the soil of our opportunities, our illimitable resources, our

Hundreds of Children Made Happy By Avalanche of Jig-Saw Puzzles

An avalanche of cheer for sick and orphan children swept through the offices of The Constitution Saturday as Atlanta responded to the request for jig-saw puzzles for the youngsters in hospitals, homes and other institutions. From early morning until night the picture toys were brought by scores and hundreds.

Answering the appeal made by the morning newspaper, Atlanta citizens began Friday to bring in the puzzles, and by Saturday morning the cut-up pictures were being unloaded in various parts of the building. By afternoon several hundred had been received.

After the puzzles began pouring in in such great numbers, the task of distributing them to institutions was started. Baskets full of the puzzles had been collected in aisles of the editorial rooms and were loaded into an automobile for distribution.

At Grady hospital, at the Egleston Memorial hospital, at the Scottish Rite hospital in Decatur, at the Hillside Cottages and at Battle Hill sanitarium the inmates received the jig-saw sets enthusiastically.

When a representative of The Constitution arrived at Hillside Cottages with an automobile filled with the puzzles about fifty children crowded around the car to receive the toys. Their interest excited by a score or more sets distributed Friday, they were anxious for the new puzzles.

At Grady hospital Miss Durice Dickerson, superintendent of the children's ward, reported an enthusiastic response. Several homesick children, she said, were made happy by the new amusement. Care was exercised that the puzzles did not go from children with communicable diseases to others.

All citizens who wish to contribute discarded puzzles to the various institutions should bring or send them to The Constitution offices, where they will be assembled for distribution. If sufficient quantities are received, the scope of distribution will be widened to include several other institutions.

WOMAN'S GROUP WILL SEEK TESTS FOR STUDENTS

Reversion to general and cultural education for young school students and a systematic clinical examination of those aspiring to enter commercial fields with a view of ascertaining their fitness and their prospective success are the aims of the Atlanta chapter of the National Business Women's Association.

About 100 attended the observance of the close of National Business Women's Week Saturday at the Henry Grady hotel, over which Mrs. Flora Ozburn, chairman of the research committee and second vice president of the local chapter, presided.

Vocational training in junior high schools and early training for commercial fields should be discouraged in order that the supply shall not exceed the demand for employes, it was decided. The fact that 17,000,000 of the 70,000,000 workers of the United States are out of jobs was cited.

The following two plans were approved:

1. Establishment of a vocational and guidance council here to aid in selecting jobs for persons to suit their temperment, their ability.

2. Establishment of a vocational clinic to make such tests as will insure success of individuals in their chosen fields through making tests of their abilities.

If anyone had offered the information two weeks ago that Mrs. W. L. Blackett and Mrs. Ralph Smith would play in a duplicate tournament I would have been stunned. But both eventualities have occurred.

What is more to the point, the above mentioned Mrs. Ralph Smith and Mrs. W. L. Blackett turned in a good enough score at the Vretman-Knowles tournament to come second in the north-south division. The final standpatters against duplicate have fallen. The last of the rubber bridge advocates have become converts to the real game. Mark a triumph for duplicate. Record a sensible decision opposite the names of Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Blackett. They all have to come to duplicate sooner or later.

Southeastern Tournament.

The final echo of the Georgia state tournament had hardly died on the March air than comes the announcement that the Florida state and Southeastern will be held in Jacksonville the week of March 27. Monday and Thursday of that week will be devoted to the Florida state mixed team-of-four, women's pair and men's pair championships. Wednesday will see the Southeastern get under way with the pair championship down for decision. The mixed pair championship will be held on Thursday and the team-of-four championship on Friday. Saturday will be given over to the woman's club state championship for teams of four and individual match for winners of state and Southeastern events. All save the woman's club championship will be held in two sessions, afternoon and evening.

The entrance fee for each session is $1. All tournamnets will be held at the Carling hotel. Special rates will be made to those attending the tournament.

The tournaments are under the auspices of the American Bridge League and the Florida Bridge League and under the management of the Junior League of Jacksonville. Address all inquiries and entries to Mrs. H. B. McEuen, Carling hotel, Jacksonville. All the events are open to players from any section of the country.

Planes Offered To Aid Earthquake Relief

Atlanta offices of the American Airways were notified Saturday by President Lester D. Seymour that Southern transcontinental planes of the company had been offered gratis to the Red Cross for rushing shipments of medicine and medical supplies to the California earthquake sector.

Willis Haviland, traffic manager, said pilots and personnel were under instructions to serve the Red Cross in the emergency and to transport supplies in the swiftest possible time.

Gift for Atlanta U.

A gift of the College Art Reference Set from the Carnegie Corporation to Atlanta University has just been announced by Dr. John Hope, president of the University. The set, which comprises several thousand magnificent photographic reproductions of paintings, sculpture and architecture, and is valued at $5,000, was prepared by a committee of the College Art Association and designed to cover all the significant art movements. Each reproduction bears the notation of the title, artist, date, material used, and location of the piece. The collection thus forms a complete history of art. The set is housed in the exhibition room of the Atlanta University library for the use of students of art.

FORMER ATLANTAN MAY WIN FORTUNE FROM OLD SONG HIT

The old song, "The Wreck of the Old '97," may win a belated fortune for David C. George, formerly of Atlanta, under an injunction handed down by Judge John Boyd Avis in the federal district court at Camden, N. J., an Associated Press dispatch said Saturday.

The court granted the injunction against the Victor Talking Machine Company and ordered an accounting of profits in connection with the use of the song. George claimed authorship and filed suit nearly two years ago. He alleged his rights had been infringed upon.

The company contended the song was written in collaboration by two other authors, but the court held that George was the original composer. He said he had never surrendered his rights in the composition.

George lived in Atlanta until several years ago. His present address is in Detroit. His song formerly enjoyed wide popularity. Samuel Spencer, an early president of the Southern Railway, was killed in the wreck mentioned in the song, and later a statue was erected to him on the Terminal Station plaza in Atlanta.

Cloudy and Warm, Forecaster Says

Cloudy skies, warmer temperatures, accompanied by the probability of light showers is the weather forecast for Sunday in Atlanta, according to George Mindling, meterologist.

Saturday's mercury ranged from a low of 32 degrees upward to 49 degrees by noon, when the weather bureau closed for the day, and was heading for a maximum of near 60 degrees. Today the lowest temperature will be 38 degrees, said Mr. Mindling, and the maximum will be in the low 60's.

You Cannot Turn THE UNITED STATES Into Cash

CURRENCY is not a measure of the Nation's wealth, nor of the stability of our banking system. Currency is only a medium of exchange. Bank deposits throughout the country are approximately forty-three billion dollars. There are only about seven billion dollars of currency in circulation. Clearly this country cannot operate on a cash-and-carry basis.

Ninety per cent of the country's business is transacted by check. When the circulation of checks stops, business is at a standstill. It is essential that this country return to the use of checks.

THE TIME FOR ALARM IS OVER!

Keep on buying, using credit—pay by check.

The purpose of the new currency is not for hoarding, but is to make possible the prompt resumption of normal use of bank checks. This advertisement is an expression of our confidence in the soundness of the President's leadership; it is a reaffirmation of our faith in the American people.

This company will carry on its business in the usual manner. Checks will be accepted in payment from old or new customers to whom the company would normally extend credit.

Economic Stand of Roosevelt Is Backed by Admiral Byrd

Virginian Asks People to Support President in His Effort to Reduce Governmental Cost.

By ADMIRAL RICHARD E. BYRD, Chairman National Economic League.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The president has shown extraordinary courage in asking congress to give him the responsibility and authority to cut the cost of the federal government.

The most thankless and unpopular task that a statesman can undertake is that of reducing the cost of government. But it must be done to balance the budget and balancing the budget is essential to the return of economic stability and to the relief of unemployment.

We can be sure that the president will cut out only those governmental costs that are unwarranted under the circumstances that prevail. He will reduce expenditures with wisdom and that is vital, for reductions must not destroy such things as the protection of life and property, health, education, defense and other activities which go to make our civilization what it is and which we think should endure.

The people need have no fear that there will be any ruthless cuts to enforce economies. The president will reduce the inordinate costs of veterans not only with wisdom but with consideration, mercy and sympathy.

He will take no chances that the war disabled or service disabled veterans will lose their pensions. He will make doubly sure that they will be adequately cared for by a grateful nation.

When the congress gives the president authority to cut out dangerously high cost of government it will be taking the second necessary step to bring about recovery. But the people in their confidence in the president will be placing upon his shoulders as great a burden as any one man has had to bear.

The people must share this burden with him every day of the week and every minute of the day. And the congress that gives him the authority must be backed up and encouraged to the limit by the people and must be protected from the selfish minorities by the overwhelming will of the people.

One of the greatest happenings that I can imagine would be for the two great legislative bodies of congress to receive by letter and telegram from every quarter of the land individual and group expressions of approval of the president's requests for prompt co-operation from congress.

One of the greatest attributes of the democratic form of government is that in times of peril people are willing to accept a self-imposed discipline to meet danger. In such danger there is no time for cavil about this or that method. The only thing that counts is unity followed by action to save the nation's credit and this action can only be obtained quickly through the executive.

Ex-Georgian To Get Post in Canal Zone

WASHINGTON, March 11.—President Roosevelt sent to the senate the nomination of Lieutenant Colonel Julian L. Schley, formerly of Savannah, Ga., as governor of the Panama Canal zone.

Colonel Schley, who is with the corps of engineers of the regular army, is a grandson of a former governor of Georgia bearing the same name and after whom Schley county, Georgia is named. His nomination for the post was originally sent to the senate by President Hoover during the closing days of his administration but was one of those not acted upon.

PRESIDENT PUSHES JOBLESS AID PLAN

Confers With Senate Advocates; Another Parley Scheduled for Today.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today rushed ahead with the third measure of his emergency program—a $500,000,000 bond issue for widespread unemployment relief.

The bill to make jobs by reforestation and other inland improvement projects for an estimated 500,000 workers neared completion at a White House meeting in which Senators Wagner, of New York, and Costigan, of Colorado, democrats, and La Follette, republican, of Wisconsin, participated.

The message calling upon congress for this legislation on an urgent basis will go forward early next week but probably not until the legislators have disposed of the pending economy bill.

The senators at the White House today are all leaders in the unemployment problem but represent conflicting schools of thought. Progress was reported by the group as it left the president.

"We had a very satisfactory discussion of the questions involved in unemployment relief," Senator La Follette told newspapermen. "No definite conclusions were reached and further conferences will be held."

"But there is every indication," interposed Senator Wagner, "of satisfactory conclusions. The prospect for agreement is very encouraging."

The broad scale Roosevelt plan which contemplates jobs and not "doles" carries provision for a vast recruiting of the idle in the unemployed camps by the army with provision for keeping the men now roaming the streets available for work as it develops.

The reforestation scheme would be put into effect probably in every section of the country. Immediate development of the idle war-time Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant with construction of the proposed reservoir dam at Cove Creek in the Clinch river in Tennessee will be a part of the program.

Liberalization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act to permit extension of funds for distress and for self-liquidating projects also is contemplated.

Another conference between the president and congressional leaders on the proposal is in prospect for tomorrow.

Illinoisian Falls to Death In Attempt at Suicide

EVANSTON, Ill., March 11.—(UP)—John P. Barrett, 50, public utilities official, fell to an accidental death today as he sought to commit suicide by hanging.

Barrett's body was found on the rear porch of his home. He had knotted a bed sheet about his neck but the weight of his body caused the sheet to give way. He was killed in falling to the concrete below.

Tammany Delegation Splits Wide Open

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(UP) The so-called Tammany "bloc" in the house of representatives, which usually votes as a unit on important legislation, split today in balloting on President Roosevelt's economy bill.

The recognized leader of the New York group, Representative Cullen, and several others of the Manhattan group voted against the measure. Several others were absent, while voting in favor of the drastic legisltion were Representatives Roylan, O'Connor, Sullivan, Oliver, Bloom, Fitzpatrick and Griffin.

Failure of the bloc to swing entirely behind the measure surprised observers, inasmuch as after the party caucus it was indicated that the group had voted at the democratic meeting in favor of forcing the party membership to support solidly the administration bill.

Appearance Papers Are Filed for Walker

MIAMI, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Appearance papers for James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, in the divorce action brought by his wife, Janet Allen Walker, were filed in circuit court here today.

Attached to the papers was a copy of a cablegram from Walker in Cannes, France, to Benjamin Cohen, local attorney, which read:

"You are authorized to make immediate appearance, file answer and represent me at hearing generally in case brought by my wife."

Cohen could not be reached immediately for a statement as to whether the wording of the cablegram meant that Walker intended to contest the divorce action.

Mrs. Walker, a winter resident of Miami Beach, filed the divorce suit earlier this week, charging desertion.

City of Memphis Sued.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 11.—(AP) The city of Memphis was sued for $57,146.29 in federal district court today by the National Surety Company, which charged that the company paid that amount because the city forced the use of allegedly faulty sewer material on a recent municipal project.

ROOSEVELT'S STAND GIVEN VETS' SUPPORT

130 KNOWN DEAD IN 'QUAKE AREA

the communities in the earthquake zone revealed duplications in reports of deaths, and lowered the total from the earlier list of 140. Further changes were expected.

SHOCKS CONTINUE IN LOS ANGELES AREA

By BENNIE TAYLOR.

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(AP)—Southern California trembled tonight as she measured her earthquake dead in scores, her injured in thousands and her property damage in the tens of millions of dollars.

Recurring earth shocks, in addition to the 23 major convulsions that killed many and maimed and harassed the densely populated metropolitan area, kept rasping at the already raw nerves of the 2,000,000 persons who escaped unscathed.

As afternoon wore on into night the less severe shocks got beyond count. Grief, suffering and fear edged into the wide picture of death and destruction as the citizenry watched the corpse hunters fill the marble slabs of the morgues, read the casualty list and inspected the far-flung ruins, all the while keeping on edge for the shocks which scientists said might continue for days or even weeks.

Hospitals Treat Thousands.

The ever-changing casualty figures stood unofficially tonight at 130 dead and possibly 5,000 injured, including everything from scratches and bruised heels to cases that may prove fatal. The number of persons requiring actual hospital treatment was estimated at 1,000 for the entire area.

Frequent changes in reports from the stricken communities, revealing duplications in reports of deaths by near-by towns, lowered the total from 140 to 130, while further changes were expected. There was no means by which the actual number of reported dead could be ascertained for the area, except by the growing partial list of identified dead. The task of caring for the injured and those needing relief, found the work of maintaining an official list of dead shoved to one side in most of the communities.

Property damage was estimated at at least $45,000,000, including wrecked business buildings and schools, broken utility lines, damaged streets and harbor channels.

Bodies Still Being Sought.

Bodies were still being sought in ruins at Long Beach, which bore the brunt of the quake.

Alert to prevent possible vandalism, looting and ghoulish acts, United States sailors and marines from the battle fleet at San Pedro, national guardsmen and American Legionnaires joined police in preserving order in the stricken regions.

Centralized control of emergency measures was invoked when Governor James Rolph Jr., who flew here today, appointed Colonel O. C. Wyman, of the California National Guard, to head the relief work.

Swift action to alleviate grief, pain and privation was taken when relief authorities decided that a portion of the more than $4,000,000 allotted to the state March 3 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation might be divided quickly to that end.

The application of martial law was deemed unnecessary at Long Beach, and E. S. Dobbins, city manager, was designated to direct the policing of that vicinity. The governor ordered the condemnation of all buildings unsafe for occupancy.

Long Beach had 70 dead and reported injuries to 2,500 persons. Compton, a small suburb of Los Angeles, reported 17 deaths. Huntington Park's death toll was eight, with property damage of $25,000,000. Watts had seven deaths and the remainder of the mortality list was divided among various sections of the metropolitan area.

Twelve Die of Excitement.

Twelve of these deaths were attributed to heart failures from fright induced by the earthquakes. Coroner's officers said fear that each succeeding shock would be worse than the preceding ones finally became powerful enough to kill.

For once, Hollywood, Beverly Hills and Culver City looked out upon a tragedy not of their own making. Stars and supers alike of the films rushed from their sets when fright got the upper hand, but there was no appreciable damage there.

Four hours, while chaos prevailed, the unrecovered dead had debris for their graves, crumbling, shaky or broken walls for monuments and fog for their shrouds. Then there was a lull as the earth quieted somewhat and rescue and relief operations got under way.

The fog lifted and a tense citizenry looked upon the stark picture of devastation.

Cars were crushed by the hundreds as wreckage showered down upon garages and the streets. Cracks appeared in great buildings. Hundreds of weaker structures collapsed as the earth writhed and heaved with immeasurable force. Plate-glass, brick concrete, tile and plaster were pulverized by the thousands of tons.

There were 23 major shocks from 5:55 p. m., Friday, until noon today. Even the scientists failed to keep count of the many minor tremors. In such a shaking the populace steered clear of swaying walls. Some refused to remain in their hotel rooms downtown. Many slept in hotel lobbies, ready to run at the first crack of threatened disaster.

Dreaded Cry of "Tidal Wave!"

Thousands sought safety in the parks of Long Beach. Some of these lined up to receive food from relief workers, but others sat silent, without appetite. Virtually all stores there were closed. The cry of "tidal wave" sent about 2,000 Long Beach residents to higher ground last night, but they returned cautiously today, their fears groundless in that respect.

Police blocked all incoming motor traffic but a few ambitious and anxiety-ridden persons chartered planes to fly there to learn about their friends and relatives. Airport officials said the visitors came by air from as far away as El Paso, Texas. Three men were killed when their plane, en route to Long Beach, crashed near Compton.

Los Angeles, Compton and Huntington Park suffered extensive damage to buildings. The 27-story Los Angeles city hall, highest building in the metropolitan area, had plaster cracks on its walls today and Mayor John C. Porter ordered it closed to visitors. Architects said it apparently had earned the appelation "earthquake-proof." The old Los Angeles courthouse building was condemned as unsafe and employees and records were taken out.

Countless fires harried the people and kept firemen busy. High school buildings in Huntington Park and Norwalk were destroyed. Homes by the score went up in flames.

Most of Los Angeles' steamship docks were damaged. Catalina island apparently suffered no ill effects, although the 'quake was centered not far from there.

Relief operations began to assume gigantic proportions tonight. After touring the stricken area Governor Rolph called all relief agencies into a meeting and arrangements were made to put the work under the directions of the naval authorities, the Red Cross and other organizations.

Bellflower, one of the badly shaken suburbs, reported a water shortage because water mains had been turned off. An appeal to Los Angeles police brought a promise that water would be transported to the town.

LONG BEACH DESCRIBED AS "CITY OF TERROR"

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Recurrent earth shocks, many of them so severe they rocked the remaining buildings, made Long Beach a city of terror today as the death toll was officially reported at 68 and the injured at approximately 2,500.

Crowds wandered the streets aimlessly, gazing awe-stricken at the tremendous damage done to this once beautiful sea-side community. City officials placed the damage conservatively at $25,000,000.

Sixty of the dead were identified after a careful recheck. It was expected it would be a matter of hours before the remaining eight would be named. The armory was converted into a temporary morgue and was beseiged by thousands of relatives of the dead and missing. There was no martial law, although 4,000 sailors, soldiers and marines kept the crowds moving and would not allow them on the sidewalks, keeping them in the middle of the streets.

Huge Property Damage.

At least 75 per cent of the buildings and residences in the city were damaged, possibly 25 per cent of that number beyond repair.

Most residents of the city refused to return to their homes as shock after shock, some severe and others less intense, rocked the buildings.

The fire department was kept busy answering alarms in various portions of the city. Ambulances were called into service as several persons venturing too near to partially destroyed buildings were injured by falling debris loosened by later shocks.

Bonfires were kept burning in vacant lots and residents planned to spend a second night in the open, with seemingly no let-up in the earth's convulsions.

No Evidence of Looting.

Although the streets were crowded with thousands of persons, there had been no looting up to tonight and Chief of Police J. S. Yancey said he anticipated none. A soldier, marine or sailor guarded the open buildings every few feet.

Anaheim boulevard, one of the main thoroughfares of the city, suffered the brunt of the damage. Practically every building on the street was damaged in the business area. The larger buildings of height limit seem to have withstood the shocks better than the smaller ones, although many of the 13-story buildings were cracked.

Until a thorough check of the Pacific Coast Club building and the city hall could be made, all persons were barred from the structures. Engineers were to inspect the buildings before allowing them to be occupied.

Most of those killed in Long Beach were caught by falling masonry or bricks as they rushed from buildings in the business district just as offices and stores were closing last evening.

Business at Standstill.

Few business establishments were open today. The few restaurants which were not damaged seriously did a land office business. There was no evidence of profiteering.

One enterprise upon which the people depended most for their information, the Long Beach Press-Telegram, operated under difficulties. Its reporters were stationed in Long Beach and their copy sent to Pasadena, 30 miles away, and printed in the plant of the Pasadena Star News, associated in ownership with the Press-Telegram. The newspapers were then brought back to Long Beach and distributed.

Hundreds of special police officers blockaded all roads to Long Beach, preventing thousands of sightseers and others who had no urgent business in the stricken city from entering.

Relief plans were placed into effect when the city council gave E. S. Dobbin, city manager, blanket power to take whatever steps he deemed necessary for the welfare of life and property.

The Chamber of Commerce immediately formed a citizens' rehabilitation committee to meet tomorrow to plan a co-operative movement for the removal of debris and to start reconstruction.

"We hope to make this disaster a stepping stone to a more beautiful city," said Bruce Mason, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mason announced selection of E. F. MacDonough, consultant employed by the city of Santa Barbara following the devastating earthquake in that city several years ago, to work out a harmonious plan of architecture to replace damaged buildings.

COMPTON BUSINESS AREA DEVASTATED BY QUAKE

COMPTON Cal., March 11.—(AP) Property damage here from last night's earthquake was estimated by police and firemen today at $12,000,000 to $15,000,000, and 10 per cent of the population of 12,300 is under the care of the Red Cross. The death list is 17 and 20 persons are seriously injured.

The officials estimated that 99 per cent of the town's business property is ruined. Martial law is in effect.

The greater part of the population has abandoned its homes, although damage in the residential sections was relatively small.

The refugees are living in the public square and other vacant places, but are being well cared for by relief agencies, notably the Salvation Army.

The town is strictly policed, with the aid of marines from the battle fleet at San Pedro, and there has been no looting. Officers considered the general morale of the population extremely good under the circumstances.

EIGHT REPORTED DEAD AT HUNTINGTON PARK

HUNTINGTON PARK, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—A death list of eight, with five persons seriously injured and property damage in excess of $2,500,000 was the earthquake toll here.

The population of 30,000 was well provided for and authorities say the spontaneous relief from all sources has alleviated any possibility of suffering.

Practically every business house suffered in some degree, although the damage in most cases was not extensive.

The city hall and the new Christian church building are in such shape that they are considered a total loss. The property valuation of Huntington Park is $33,000,000.

Police said all of the deaths resulted from falling debris in the downtown area. Fire damaged the Huntington Park high school and a tire warehouse.

2 KILLED, 7 INJURED IS TOLL AT LYNWOOD.

LYNWOOD, Cal., March 11.—(AP) More than $1,000,000 damage, two deaths and seven persons seriously injured was the earthquake toll of this community of 8,000 inhabitants.

The five largest buildings in town were destroyed. There was considerable damage to the smaller stores and loss of merchandise, with practically all the plate glass in stores shattered.

Police report relief, sanitation and hospitalization are amply provided and no disorders have occurred.

LEGION TAKES CHARGE AT SOUTH GATE.

SOUTH GATE, Calif., March 11. (AP)—Eight thousand persons of South Gate's 20,000 population were being cared for today by relief agencies under supervision of the American Legion.

One death and 14 serious injuries were reported.

Property loss, out of an assessed valuation of $12,000,000 for the community, was estimated at $600,000 by Mayor Harold Pomeroy.

"Fifteen minutes after the earthquake disaster we had the amazing scene of American Legionnaires taking over complete control of police and relief," said Mayor Pomeroy.

"That there were no fires and the low casualty list was due to the quick action of the Legionnaires in turning off the main sources of electric and gas service.

"Most of the store buildings suffered extreme damage, but the public buildings and hospital, which are one story frame and stucco construction, were unharmed.

"The most spectacular sight of the disaster was the crash of one of our large, high water tanks. It twisted and collapsed with a roar like a great dynamite blast as it fell to the ground and burst. This occurred within a block and a half of the city hall. Fortunately no one was near enough to be injured.

"Our other tank remains unharmed and the water supply, sanitation, food, relief and hospitalization conditions are amply sufficient to meet our needs."

ANAHEIM EMERGES WITHOUT LOSS OF LIFE

ANAHEIM, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Damage here from Friday's earthquake was unofficially estimated today at $250,000 but authorities said it might eventually be much higher. Four business buildings, one a four-story structure, were condemned.

The city came through the earth tremors without a human casualty.

Unofficial estimates of damage in nearby towns was: Artesia, $100,000; Garden Grove, $50,000; Buena Park, $45,000; Fullerton, $200.

Garden Grove had the only casualty, Elizabeth Pollard, 13, who was killed when struck by a falling sign as she rushed from a school building.

EXPERT SAYS 'QUAKE EXPECTED 20 YEARS

HILO, Hawaii, March 11.—(AP)—Dr. T. A. Jaggar, volcanologist of the Hawaii national park, said today "for 20 years geologists and seismologists have known the Los Angeles district eventually must have serious earthquakes."

Jaggar said the coast survey recently installed motion instruments at many places in California and if these recorded the actual earth movement last night the data would be valuable for building safely in the future.

"The whole region between San Diego and Santa Barbara," he said, "is subject to these earthquakes because it is an extension of the same coast range where destructive quakes have occurred in the past."

A large fault map of Californin, made by geologists, Jaggard added, showed an active fault running northwest to southeast on land just northwest of Long Beach, extending along the water adjacent to Long Beach, then to sea southward.

"This is the only fault marked by geologists as alive through this densely populated district," Jaggar said. "It is remarkable the earthquake-hit places almost parallel with the fault."

PRESIDENT DIRECTS FEDERAL RELIEF WORK

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Under alert leadership from President Roosevelt, navy, treasury, and Red Cross heads today mobilized aid for earthquake-devastated southern California.

Because of quick work by relief forces on the spot, their task was largely one of backstopping and organizing to assure the damaged communities and their inhabitants of adequate funds and supplies.

But to launch these efforts President Roosevelt was out of bed and busy on the telephone in the early hours, Mrs. Roosevelt helping to relay messages together with his secretaries. After the orders the president gave, telegrams went out from the relief heads.

Empowers Banks To Aid.

By mid-morning the treasury announced it had authorized California banks to advance cash needed by victims, called attention to the authority of federal reserve banks to make direct loans to individuals, and promised that if more was needed it would be forthcoming.

The Red Cross withheld financial policy plans after assuring itself the California branches were on the job for the immediate steps. Later a decision is to be made on what money to send in. William De Kleine, director of disaster relief, sped west by airplane.

The earthquake had an echo in congress, where the house directed a resolution of condolence to the people of the stricken area. Another reaction was at the state department, where Ambassador Debuchi, of Japan, presented in person the sympathy of his government, recalling Japan's great debt to the United States for the millions poured into that country by Americans in 1923 when earthquakes devastated the principal Japanese cities.

Situation Under Control.

After the naval radio carried orders westward Admiral Richard Leigh, commander-in-chief of the fleet, reported back that the situation was under control, with landing forces ashore patrolling areas where they were needed to prevent looting.

Concluding his message, he said: "Food serious problem, but organization ready. Wonderful spirit co-operation and volunteer help everywhere."

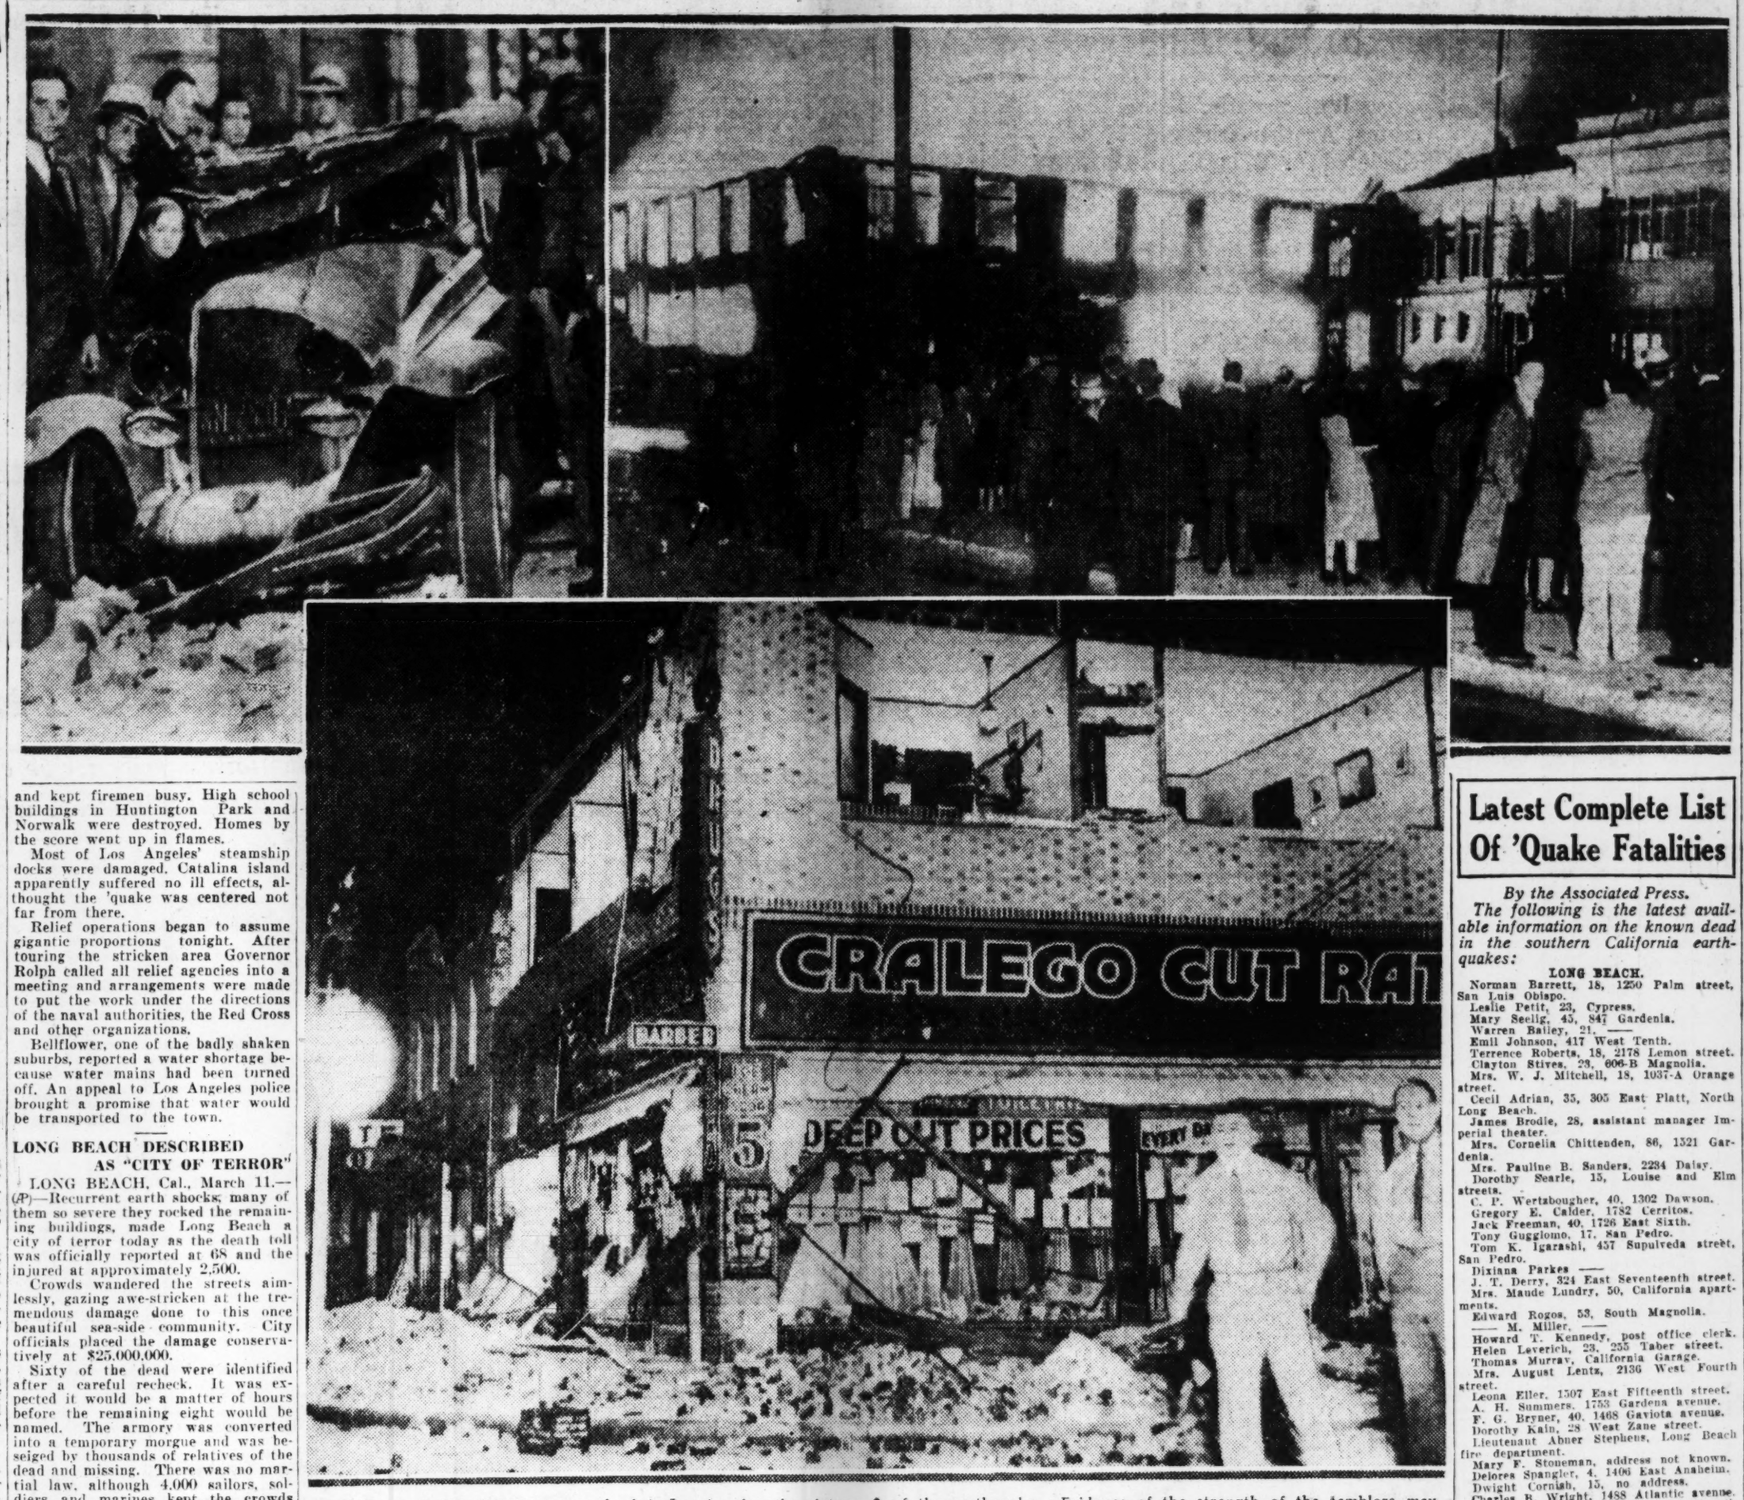

The Red Cross expressed quantities of ready-made cotton clothing and bedding to earthquake sufferers in the Los Angeles area and awaited the outcome of a survey by Governor Rolph before taking further relief action.

The cotton clothing was sent from factories in Pennsylvania, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, Michigan, Virginia, and San Francisco.

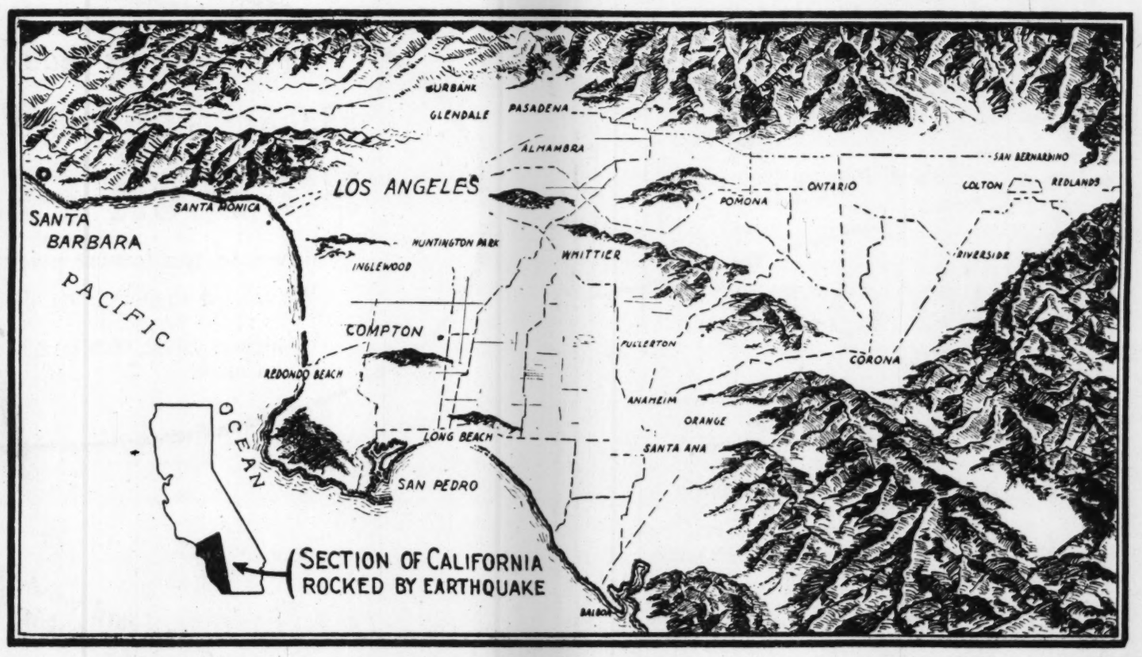

The shipments to Los Angeles included 108,984 ready-made garments; to Long Beach, 4,176 garments.

From Chicago, 11,040 comforters and blankets were going to Los Angeles, and 660 to Long Beach.

Additional Telephotos of Destruction Caused by Earthquakes in California

began to dip and roll, so it was almost impossible to walk across a room. There was a distinct sensation of a big building swaying back and forth, just as if one stood on the deck of a steamer moving through a rough, surf-ridden sea.

By the seventh of eighth second, that now seemed to be many minutes, there was a strain and cracking as the plastering began to fall. You felt that the building was sure to topple right or left within the next few seconds, as the cracking noise increased and the swaying became extended.

There could be no similar sensation in the world we happen to know. One can understand the rush of a cyclone or a hurricane. There is something physical here to be figured out. But when the land beneath your feet, the terrain that serves as the foundation for every house and home, begins to dip and roll, to slide and rock, the utter and complete rush of defenselessness drives the mind into a panic. Millions rushed from homes and their buildings into parks and open spaces.

I talked with Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants.

"I was on the tenth floor of my hotel," Terry said, "when the building began to rock and sway. It felt just as if some giant, some superhuman power, was pushing it back and forth. I was way over here, then I was way over there, back and forth, back and forth, standing on a massive pendulum. I never want to feel that way again. Many of the ball players rushed outside into a near-by park and stayed there all night. I stayed up until 3 o'clock."

One peculiar feature of the earthquake was that Albert Einstein and Dr. Beno Gutenberg, rated as one of the world's greatest experts on earthquakes, were walking over terrain that remained steadfast. They knew nothing of the shaking world until they saw people running back and forth.

At midnight, I joined Bobby Jones and his wife on the fifth floor of a hotel. Just about this moment a radio announcer said that the final tremor was over. He had barely finished this reassuring talk when once more the windowpanes began to rattle, the curtains to move, the room to shake. Twenty minutes later, the same foreboding episode returned with another tremor.

The giant shake of 1906 which wrecked San Francisco lasted 43 seconds. The Los Angeles upheaval lasted only 13 seconds, so far as the damaging quiver was concerned.

Somewhere just off shore on this western slope a giant rock or a section of seabottom had begun to slide and settle. But this was no matter of any few seconds. I felt the first shock as the rocking, reeling, devasting motion moved along at a rate approaching a mile-a-minute.

After a night's sleep, I woke again with the feeling that I was on board a ship. It was then 7:00 a. m. I was sure that the sensation was merely a subconscious return of the night before. And then the windows began to rattle once more and the chairs started to rock, and I knew the same old earthquake was still operating 13 hours later.

California 'Quakes Date Back to Days Before White Settler

By the Associated Press.

The Record of earthquakes in southern California extends back to the days before the white man settled there extensively. Here are more important ones listed by the Seismological Society of America:

1769—Los Angeles region. Shocks extending over a week.

1790—Big quake in Owens valley, says Indian tradition.

1812. September-December—Loss of life, serious damage at San Juan Capistrano and Santa Ynez; damage elsewhere.

1830—San Luis Obispo church damaged.

1852, October 26.—Eleven shocks in Los Angeles, San Gabriel, San Simeon, San Luis Obispo, San Diego.

1852, November 27-30.—Shocks opened 30-mile fissures in Lockwood valley.

1857, January 8-9—Severe at San Gabriel, San Diego, San Bernardino.

1893, April 8-9—Extreme shock around Newhall.

1906, April 18.—San Diego, Brawley, Yuma. Considerable damage.

1915, June 22—$9,000,000 damage at El Centro and other Imperial Valley points.

1918, April 21.—San Jacinto-Hemet, other sections. Buildings destroyed.

1926, June 29—Santa Barbara; 11 died; $10,000,000 damage.

'BIG THREE' BANKS CURB DOLLAR RAID

Short Speculators in American Unit To Receive Coin in Europe.

By WALLACE CARROLL.

PARIS, March 11.—(U.P.)—Three of the great banking systems of the world—the Bank of France, the Bank of England and the United States Federal Reserve System—joined today in a move to curb speculation in the dollar.

A spokesman for the Bank of France said the three had decided to deliver dollars to those speculators who have gone short, a move that will prevent further weakening of the American dollar and one that will cost various syndicates and individuals about $1,000,000.

Raids on the dollar have been led by a so-called "Balkan gang," operating for several months in dollar speculation.

In unofficial dealings the dollar today, possibly as result of this action, regained its full strength. Official dealings will be resumed next week despite inability to deliver due to the gold embargo.

The concerted action of the three banks revealed that the Bank of France and the federal reserve have been in daily telephonic communication.

Meanwhile, there was a good tone on American stocks on European bourses.

Although closing quotations on the London Stock Exchange showed American stocks at the same levels as Friday, during the day they had boomed considerably.

Quotations on the three leaders in American equivalent included:

	Opening	Close.	Prev. Close.
A T & T	107¾	105¾	105¾
U S Steel	29¾	29¾	29¾
Pennsylvania R R	18	16¾	16¾

It was notable that Steel maintained the same high level it reached on Friday's trading. This issue was the only one of the American leaders to gain Friday—a 1 1-8-point gain—and it maintained that position through today.

jority report, was signed by the committee chairman, Senator J. T. Sisk, of Elberton, and Representatives Johnson and Strickland. The minority report was made by Senator Robert W. Campbell, of Covington, the home city of Commissioner Adams, and Representative Shelby Myrick, of Chatham.

No recommendations were contained either in the majority or minority report. The majority report contained certain "findings" and included charges that Adams was evasive and forgetful in his testimony. The Campbell-Myrick report merely recited the activities of the committee and called attention to the fact that two volumes of testimony were taken and transmitted to the house and senate.

Johnson Scores Department.

Immediately after the report was received by the house, Johnson rose on a point of personal privilege.

"If all the muck and mire were scraped from the face of the earth and heaped into hell the devil would find a burning stench and shout 'it must be the department of agriculture'," Johnson said. "Things downstairs in that department are rotten to the core. I want to tell the members of this house that while the committee was making its investigation and considerating its report a member was approached and told that if he made a certain kind of a report he would be given decided political preferment. As a matter of fact he was even offered money. He also was told that if he did not follow the advice given him he would be made to suffer politically."

Johnson called attention to rumors which he said had been floating around the capitol for several days to the effect that a three-and-two report would be submitted by the Sisk committee.

Member's Name Demanded.

When the Montgomery representative had finished speaking a number of members of the house rose and demanded to know which member of the committee had been approached.

"I do not deem it my privilege to say at this time," Johnson said. "However, I believe that in time the house will be informed just who the member is."

Strickland then took the floor and launched into a vitriolic attack on the department of agriculture.

"It would take tons of dynamite to blast this department of agriculture up to the level of common decency," Strickland said. "Gentlemen, it is true that while the committee was taking testimony and preparing its report a member of the committee was approached. Bribery and intimidation were attempted and I want to stand here and to assure you that the person making the offers was told to go to hell and dawn him."

Members also rose to ask Strickland the name of the member approached.

To Know at "Proper Time."

The Douglas county representative then said:

"I will personally assure you that at the proper time the member of the committee approached will be made known and the house will be made acquainted with all of the details of the attempted transactions."

This satisfied the house and a resolution drawn by Representative Vaughn, of Rockdale county, which, if passed, would have resulted in the naming of a special committee to investigate the attempted bribery and intimidation was withdrawn, it being evident that both Johnson and Strickland were in possession of the needed information and that it would be forthcoming at a later date.

Both Johnson and Strickland declined to amplify their statements after the house had adjourned.

Representative Dyer, Park and Townsend continued work on their charges Saturday night in order that they will be completed by Monday.

Eight Specifications.

"As I have stated before there will be eight different specifications in the articles of impeachment we will lay before the house Monday," Dyer said. "They are to be worked over and ap-

Charge Attempt at Intimidation

Above are the two house members of the Sisk committee, which investigated alleged job selling in the department of agriculture, who charged Saturday that a member of the committee was approached by an attempted briber who sought to influence his support. They also charged intimidation. On the left is Representative A. S. Johnson, of Montgomery county and on the right is Representative D. S. Strickland, of Douglas county. proved by Judge Park before we submit them, as we were anxious to have the benefit of Judge Park's knowledge of the law and his long experience."

Representative Roy V. Harris, of Richmond county, vice chairman of the house rules committee, anounced Saturday night that early this week the house will take up the farm bloc's bill to abolish the present department of agriculture and create in its stead a commission of ten long-term fertilizer inspectors, one for each congressional district. The measure also would provide for a secretary to the commissioners who would make his headquarters in Atlanta and direct the activities of the various commissioners.

The Majority Report.

The report of the majority members of the committee, Senator Sisk and Representatives Johnson and Strickland, follows:

Your joint committee appointed under the terms of Senate Resolution No. 43 to investigate and report upon charges of improper conduct on the part of the officials of the department of agriculture, beg leave to submit the following report:

Your committee has met with much difficulty in tracing reports relative to the department of agriculture and in securing testimony in support of charges made against officials thereof. Witnesses have been widely scattered and it has been difficult to bring them before us. The committee has been forced to trace many rumors in order to determine their value. The investigation has been conducted as rapidly as other important legislative duties would permit and hearings have been concluded earlier than we would like, and earlier than was expedient, because of lack of time.

The resolution under which the committee acts requires a report during the present session of the general assembly, and as same has only one more week to run, we are forced to discontinue the gathering and hearing of evidence in order to be able to make report as provided by the resolution.

The committee has heard many witnesses upon the subject of our inquiry and transmit herewith a stenographic report of all testimony, in two volumes, marked respectively Volume 1, and Volume 2, for the consideration of both branches of the general assembly, and as a basis for such action as may be deemed advisable. Such documentary evidence as has been submitted to the committee is being transmitted and filed with the clerk of the house of representatives.

Reluctance Noted.

The sense of the committee is that considerable of the testimony elecited has been reluctantly given, and in many instances has been evasive, indicating that the witnesses were withholding testimony of important matters within their knowledge.

The committee was peculiarly struck with the attitude assumed by Mr. G. C. Adams, commissioner of agriculture, in giving testimony. All of the testimony given by Mr. Adams was evasive and his recollection upon matters important to himself as well as important on the subject of our inquiry, was so obviously assumed that it indicated to the committee he was unwilling to testify to the truth of the transactions inquired about. He was totally unable to identify or deny signatures appearing to be his own or letters and checks. In his testimony he declined repeatedly, to either admit or deny transactions about which he was questioned. No positive reply to any question of consequence could be elicited from Mr. Adams. When questioned about the details of his campaign Mr. Adams took the attitude of being entirely ignorant of matters pertaining to his campaign headquarters and the conduct of his campaign. He likewise assumed the attitude of utter ignorance as to the headquarters maintained by or for him subsequent to his campaign, same being matters in which he was vitally concerned and about which he of necessity should have had complete knowledge and understanding.

Adams "Unwilling."

Mr. Adams apparently was in a state of uncertainty as to his connection with his own campaign activities and with agencies set up by him for the conduct of his before and after campaign activities. He apparently adopted all actions of his campaign headquarters when favorable to his cause, but denied or evaded any responsibility for activities detrimental to him. It is the conclusion of the committee that Mr. Adams was unwilling to give to the committee full details of his actions both before and after his induction into office and withheld from the committee information which would have established either his innocence or his guilt. The committee desires to report that all hearings during this inquiry were open to the public and press and notice of the time and place of same was given, and Mr. Adams and his attorneys were given opportunity to cross-examine all witnesses called and the opportunity to summon all witnesses desired by him. During the hearing the witnesses were not segregated, but all testimony was taken publicly. Your committee has not sought to act in the capacity of detectives, but invited information upon the subject of the inquiry and endeavored to act judicially in bringing to light all facts regarding the subject of the inquiry of which they had information in the time available. However, the committee has had notice of many witnesses who might be able to throw light upon the subject of the inquiry, but whom the committee did not have opportunity to summon before them because of their distance from the seat of the inquiry, the lack of time and expense incident to their appearance.

Campaign Funds and Statement.

The committee finds that the commissioner of agriculture, Mr. G. C. Adams, filed a statement with the comptroller general, setting forth that he had expended during his campaign the sum of $887.00, while evidence was adduced to show that $1,155 was collected for the benefit of his campaign, prior to September 14, 1932, which was not incorporated in his report of campaign receipts and expenditures as required by Section 92 of the Code of Georgia, which also was in addition to the $887 actually reported. We further find that subsequent to the September, 1932, primary, the sum of $2,485 is reported as having been collected for the benefit of Mr. Adams, some of this fund being in the form of checks payable to Mr. G. C. Adams, bearing his indorsement, and testified to as having been delived to Mr. Adams, the signature of Mr. Adams being identified by witnesses.

Misconduct in Office.

Your committee finds and begs leave to report that in the month of January considerable sums of money was demanded of the employes in the department of agriculture by J. W. Rountree, director of the bureau of markets, formerly manager of the campaign of G. C. Adams, without explanation of the use to which same was to be put, coupled with the injunction that no questions were to be asked; that said sums were paid over to the said J. W. Rountree; the said Rountree testified that said funds were to be expended in an effort to recover a certain check given by J. P. Yarbrough to G. C. Adams for the sum of $125 (which check is incorporated in the record), which said check was alleged to have been taken from the Fulton National bank upon a forged receipt of the said J. P. Yarbrough. The committee suggests that the recovery of the check may have been important to the welfare of G. C. Adams and that the collection of these funds from the employes of the department constituted extortion, and that while the testimony does not disclose knowledge of this transaction on the part of G. C. Adams, the matter is open to inquiry. The committee has no hesitancy in condemning such practices.

Rountree Evidence Cited.

The committee calls attention to the testimony of J. W. Rountree, in which he says that G. C. Adams had full knowledge of all donations and payments made to Rountree by persons paying money, both before and after Adams was inducted into office and that said transactions were with the full knowledge and approval of Mr. Adams.

Further attention is called to the testimony of J. W. Rountree in which he states that some persons were given receipts for money in which receipts it was stated that their money was to be returned to them in the event they received no job or same was unsatisfactory. The attention is also called to the testimony of T. P. Singleton to the effect that a receipt of this character was given to him.

Under the resolutions, as construed by this committee, we are not charged with the duty of drawing conclusions of guilt or innocence, or making recommendations as to future procedure, if any, and in view of this construction of the resolution by the committee we submit the evidence adduced for such disposition as may be deemed proper in the premises.

Respectfully submitted.
J. T. SISK, Chairman,
STRICKLAND,
JOHNSON.

The Minority Report.

The report of the minority, composed of Senator Campbell and Representative Myrick, follows:

The undersigned as members of the joint committee appointed under the terms of senate resolution No. 43 to investigate alleged improper conduct upon the part of officials of the department of agriculture beg to submit the following report:

Without quoting in detail from the mass of testimony taken over a period of several weeks, which testimony has been reduced to writing and comprises a record of 350 pages of typewritten matter, we find that G. C. Adams, commissioner of agriculture, placed J. W. Rountree, of Atlanta, in charge of the former's campaign for election as commissioner of agriculture in the primary election last fall, and that Mr. Rountree later was in charge of Mr. Adams' campaign headquarters, which were kept open after the election until Mr. Adams was inducted into office. Mr. Rountree was placed in charge of the bureau of markets in the office of commissioner of agriculture. We find that before the primary election in September, after the primary and until January 1, 1933, when Mr. Rountree was selected as director of the bureau of markets, and during the time Mr. Rountree was director of markets, Mr. Rountree received various sums of money irregularly and improperly in connection with campaign expenses of Mr. Adams, and that Mr. Rountree was responsible for having a number of persons appointed to office in the department of agriculture who should not have been appointed.

The testimony is not sufficient in our opinion to warrant a finding or a report on the part of the undersigned that Mr. Adams was fully cognizant of the actions and doings of Mr. Rountree and that he should be held accountable therefor.

All the evidence submitted to the committee is transmitted to the house and senate for examination and for such action thereon as each body may see fit to take.

Respectfully submitted.
MYRICK OF CHATHAM.
CAMPBELL OF THE 34TH.

PRESIDENT ORDERS BANKS TO REOPEN

those 12 cities to reopen before Tuesday.

His call for the co-operation of state authorities applied to those institutions which are not members of the Federal Reserve system.

"The secretary of the treasury," his statement said, "will not permit any member bank, state or national, to open in any such Federal Reserve city unless opened for normal business on an unrestricted basis, except so far as affected by legal contracts between the banks and depositors with respect to withdrawals or notice of withdrawals."

Woodin, in line with the president's statement, said he was prepared to permit Federal Reserve member banks in cities having active and recognized clearing house associations to open Tuesday and member banks located elsewhere to reopen Wednesday.

He added the restrictions against payment of gold, gold certificates or bullion or the payment of currency for hoarding purposes and foreign exchange transactions contained in the president's proclamation would apply to all banking institutions until further notice.

Mr. Roosevelt drew no line between banks belonging to the federal reserve system and those state institutions outside its fold. He placed upon state banking authorities, however, the restriction that they allow openings on Monday in the 12 reserve cities "if in their judgment they deem it wise to do so."

Before issuing his statement tonight, President Roosevelt conferred with Senator Glass, of Virginia. He had given much of his busy day to conferences also with Secretary Woodin and finance experts in working out the program.

The day brought a violent demand in the senate and pleas at the White House to permit state institutions outside the federal reserve system to receive temporary benefits allowed through the system under the emergency banking act passed this week.

Federal Guarantee Opposed.

Leaving the White House, Senator Tydings, democrat, Maryland, said: "I found the president sympathetic to giving every deserving state bank the considerations to be given the institutions that are members of the federal reserve system."

A vitriolic senate debate also showed Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, the administration leader, standing firmly against the persistent demands for federal guarantee of deposits.

"As a result of such action," he said, "the federal government would be threatened immediately with bankruptcy and ruin. It means the immediate ruin of government credits. You would never sell another government bond at par."

Senator Long, democrat, Louisiana, and Robinson, republican, Indiana, led the attack for amendment of the emergency banking act to extend greater protection to state banks outside the federal reserve system.

Later, after talking with President Roosevelt, the Louisiana senator said about the banking situation: "It is getting better hourly." He added, however, that with his amendment the emergency banking law "can be a salvation but otherwise it can be a wreckage."

The outlined views of President Roosevelt last night called for simultaneous reopening of the sound state institutions outside the federal reserve system with the sound banks in the system.

Reserve Banks Stand Ready.

Hitherto the treasury has taken the position that the state banks would be able to receive ample funds and protection through the orderly process of business with correspondent members of the reserve system.

Meanwhile, the twelve Federal Reserve banks opened today to assure the projection of money into the member banks to facilitate the limited transactions carried on over the week-end and the opening of sound institutions on a full basis early next week.

To make sure of the government's regular quarterly refinancing program on March 15, Secretary Woodin today authorized all banking institutions to buy and pay for any United States government obligations which may be offered for sale.

During the round of debate in the senate, Senator Glass, of Virginia, introduced his banking reform bill which the house did not act on last session to be used as the basis for the permanent banking reorganization program to be proposed soon by President Roosevelt.

Chairman Fletcher, of the banking committee, proposed a bill to set up a $300,000,000 fund for the guarantee of bank deposits. The fund would be created by an original appropriation of $100,000,000 and supplemented by assessing all deposits five cents for each $100 each quarter.

Amendments Suggested.

Senator Adams (democrat, Colorado) proposed an amendment to the emergency bank law enacted this week to permit advances by Reserve banks to state and member banks on their time or demand notes secured to the satisfaction of the Reserve bank.

Senator Trammell (democrat, Florida) offered an amendment to the law providing that the secretary of the treasury, in publishing the list of banks that may open should include state banks certified to him as sound by state authorities.

It was another day of intense activity at the treasury and the White House. Secretary Woodin, usually accompanied by Under Secretary Ballantine and Assistant Secretary Douglas, called several times on the president.

It was apparent that greater steps for protection of state banks were being sought. Definite announcements were promised.

SPEAKER RIVERS HOST TO NEWSPAPERMEN

Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the house of representatives, was host to newspapermen covering the legislature at a dinner Saturday night at the Henry Grady hotel.

The guests included Ben F. Meyer and Francis W. Carpenter, of the Associated Press; C. E. Gregory and Ed H. Bradley, of the Atlanta Journal; Tom Arnold, L. McCall Stanley and Al Richardson, of the Atlanta Georgian, and N. S. Noble, L. A. Farrell and Ben Cooper, of The Atlanta Constitution.

Text of Bank Reopening Order

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—The full text of President Roosevelt's statement on reopening banks follows:

"I am glad to be able to announce that technical difficulties which operated to delay the opening of banks, both state and national, have finally substantially been overcome by tireless work on the part of the officials of the treasury and the federal reserve system, and that a definite program has been arranged consisting of successive steps by which banks throughout the country will be opened progressively on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings.

"The secretar, of the treasury will issue licenses to banks which are members of the federal reserve system, whether national bank or state, located in each of the twelve federal reserve bank cities, to open Monday morning.

"So also the state authorities having supervision over state banks which are not members of the federal reserve system will be asked to permit any such state institution located in any one of the 12 federal reserve bank cities to open for business on Monday morning if in their judgment they deem it wise to do so.

"Under this progressive plan, banks located in any city having an active, recognized clearing house association, of which there are 250 cities, will receive licenses for reopening on Tuesday morning, and banks located elsewhere will receive their licenses permitting reopening for Wednesday.

"Time is thus afforded for the necessary shipments of currency provided under the emergency bank act from reserve banks centers to clearing house cities and banks in the smaller communities.

"There were enormous technical problems to be solved before these mechanics could be worked out and before the actual currency could be in the bank when the doors opened.

"The constitution has laid upon me the duty of conveying the condition of the country to the congress assembled at Washington. I believe I have a like duty to convey to the people themselves a clear picture of the situation at Washington itself whenever there is danger of any confusion as to what the government is undertaking.

"That there may be a clear understanding as to just what has taken place during the last two days since the passage of this act it is my intention, over the national radio networks, at 10 o'clock Sunday evening, to explain clearly and in simple language to all of you just what has been achieved and the sound reasons which underlie this declaration to you.

"The fact that banks will be opened under this plan does not mean that anyone should draw the inference that the banks opening Monday are in any different condition as to soundness from the banks licensed to open on Tuesday or Wednesday or any subsequent day.

ROOSEVELT PLAN FOR HEAVY CUTS WINS BY 266-138

compensations and other benefits more than 25 per cent.

Reversing their tactics, the leaders threw their voices against binding the majority and blocked it, 108 to 174. It requires two-thirds majority to bind a caucus.

Although the democratic leadership failed to hold its membership, it forced the house, that met immediately, to adopt a resolution presented by Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, party leader, precluding any amendments, and curtailing debate.

Opening the debate, McDuffie, who reported the bill, said:

"This is no time to raise theoretical and academic questions. This is the time for action. The president has asked for it."

The condition of the treasury and the inability of the government to borrow money at low interest, he said, "looks like we're headed toward bankruptcy."

"Most Courageous Stand."

"I doubt if ever in history a bolder or more courageous statement coupled with more intent of purpose was ever read from that desk than was read here yesterday from the president of the United States.

"You can't tell me that those who were willing to lay down their lives for this flag are not now willing to make some sacrifice. The American people are with the president and expect you to uphold his hand.

"There is no quicker way to put the economic conditions of this country on a sound basis and to lessen unemployment than to put this nation on an even keel financially.

"This country is in a state of war, of war against an economic depression."

A leader of the opposition, Representative Rankin, democrat, Mississippi, described himself as a "better friend of President Roosevelt" than his advisors who urged him to do this," and said there was "no need for haste."

Patronage Threat.

"What this bill means," Rankin said, "is taking bread from the mouths of the disabled veterans and their dependents."

The temper of the house was high. When Representative Woodrum, democrat, Virginia, a member of the economy committee, suggested that President Roosevelt would use the roll call on his economy bill as a test of democracy, he was hissed and booed.

It required many minutes for Speaker Rainey to restore order. The members were unruly. It had been reported that President Roosevelt intended to delay patronage dispensation until the democratic congress gives him all the emergency legislation he desires.

"Are you delivering an executive threat?" May, democrat, Kentucky, asked.

"I am not speaking for the president," Woodrum said. "No one here should misunderstand my meaning. This is a test of our support of the president."

Woodrum first said:

"If the president is the wise politician I think he is, when the Congressional Record is laid on his desk tomorrow morning he'll look over this roll call.

"I warn you new democrats to be careful where your name is found."

Browning in Opposition.

Attacking the proposal, Browning, a captain in the American Expeditionary Forces, said:

"My opinion is that the sheep are going to be sheared and then gutted."

He added that tubercular and other presumptive veterans cases would be stricken out by the president.

"Do you think the president is going to do that?" McDuffie asked.

"If he is not going to do that, what did he ask for the authority for?" Browning rejoined.

"Do you not have faith in your president?" Representative Mary T. Norton, democrat, New Jersey, asked.

"I have, but what would be the sense of his asking for authority if he was not going to use it?" Browning demanded.

Passed As Written.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey and his majority leaders could boast tonight that the second portion of Mr. Roosevelt's immediate program for economic rehabilitation had passed through their hands without so much as a comma deleted.

It stands as it did when it left the White House, allowing the chief executive the very broadest powers to cut virtually all types of veterans' compensations.

The salary readjustment provision grants Roosevelt authority to reduce both civil and military pay of government employes by a flat 15 per cent.

The veterans' sections would strike hardest at so-called "emergency officers" and at service men receiving compensation for non-service connected disabilities. In addition, flat cuts would be made in some type of pensions and the president would receive large authority to frame new and make economical regulations as a basis for government payment.

Total annual savings in the first year of operation are expected to amount to $400,000,000 with the possibility of larger future economies.

Veterans organizations, hastily gathering their forces, have fought tooth and nail against the program. Telegraph offices at the capitol have been forced to install additional wires and augment their forces of operators to handle protests and commendations.

At the White House, Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines, assured Mr. Roosevelt he would be willing to speed through cuts in veterans' allowances.

He said he told the president such reductions shold be made as the only possible method of balancing the budget.

Leaders frankly admitted they were determined to put the membership on record either as supporting or defying the new chief executive.

Openly, they reproved the rank and file; dared them to vote against the Roosevelt bill; congratulated the republican minority for its support; and finally definitely threatened partisan reprisals in the way of loss of patronage.

CUBAN POLICE SEIZE CONTRABAND SUGAR

HAVANA, March 11.—(AP)—Police today seized eight trucks containing 145,750 pounds of sugar which they say was contraband. The consignment, made to a warehouseman, would have paid $1,457.50 in consumption and other taxes, authorities estimated.

The sugar was turned over to the treasury department for disposition.

RITCHIE ATTACKS ROOSEVELT ORDER

President's Plan "Jeopardizes" Non-Reserve State Banks, He Says.

BALTIMORE, March 11.—(AP)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, tonight attacked President Roosevelt's method of meeting the bank crisis, asserting that "there is neither the right nor the necessity to sacrifice or put in jeopardy" the non-reserve state banks.

He said he felt it his "duty to call attention to the effect which the law enacted Thursday (the emergency bank bill) as interpreted officially is almost certain to have upon the state banks."

"The new federal currency provided by the federal law is solely for the benefit of the national banks and the federal reserve member banks," the Maryland governor said. "The state banks are even excluded from applying to the federal reserve banks direct for the use of new currency, except for 90-day loans on goverument bonds, which privilege applies to all corporations and individuals.

"How is it to be possible under these circumstances for the state banks to survive this handicap and this discrimination? . . . It will be difficult for them to survive the great federal aid allotted among their competitors."

He said he is not opposing this aid to the national and reserve member banks, but that it is just as essential for the state banks to obtain the same aid.

"I cannot believe," the governor said, "that an administration whose brains and heart have conceived this relief for the depositors in our national and reserve member banks will not extend it to the depositors of the state banks too. . . . There is neither the right nor the necessity to sacrifice or put in jeopardy those established depositories of the people's money. There is neither the right nor the necessity to imperil the savings and the resources of these millions of depositors."

FLORIDA GOVERNOR SEEKS AID OF OTHERS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 12. (Sunday)—(AP)—Governor Dave Sholtz early today sent a telegram to the governors of the 47 other states requesting joint action to save the state banking system from being "discriminated against" in the nation-wide banking reorganization.

4 ATLANTA BANKS TO OPEN MONDAY

in Savannah, Augusta and Columbus. New currency to carry on their affairs has been placed in the vaults of the four banks here and is ready for use Monday.

All of the city's three clearing house banks reported increased withdrawals for pay rolls and foodstuffs Saturday. These withdrawals began Friday, but only scattered requests were made that day. Saturday, however, the demand grew and hundreds of Atlanta firms drew funds to meet pay rolls and thousands of individuals made withdrawals for foodstuffs, it was reported.

After an experiment of a year, it was the opinion of the commission that the surcharge, instead of increasing the carriers' revenue, had the opposite effect by decreasing travel by rail, and, in 1921, the state commission eliminated the surcharge on Georgia intrastate traffic, it was said. The I. C. C., however, on complaint of the Georgia carriers, including the L. & N., ordered the railroads in Georgia to re-establish the surcharge on Georgia intrastate traffic to remove the alleged unjust discrimination against interstate commerce.

The order requires the railroad to give three days' notice by publication and filing with the commission before making the new fares effective. The order is to expire within six months, unless sooner lawfully cancelled, changed or extended by the commission, it was said.

Statement of Perry.

Mr. Perry's statement follows:

On October 10, 1932, I proposed an order of the commission calling on railroads to show cause before the commission on November 12, 1932, why passanger fares in Georgia should not be reduced to 2 cents per mile for one-way passage, 3 cents per mile for round trip passage, one-way distance to be charged for, one-way tickets to be limited for continuous travel on date after sale. Round trip tickets to bear limit of four days in addition to date of sale, and mileage books containing coupons for 1,000 miles of travel for $15.

Commissioner Woodruff supported this motion, but a majority of the commission voted it down.

I have, for the past five years, held to the belief that if the railroads are to continue in the passenger business the rates must be lowered. On yesterday, when the commission gave consideration to the proposal of the Louisville & Nashville railroad to make effective in Georgia a 2-cent-per-mile rate in day coach with a 3-cent-per-mile rate in Pullman cars and the elimination of the surcharge, I opposed it because, well in advance of filing by the L. & N. railroad of its proposal to reduce passenger fares, I had proposed a hearing, which was assigned for March 20, 1933, and which will be held, proposing the same fares I proposed on October 10, 1932. I was firmly of the conviction yesterday that the failure of other railroads to agree with the reduction proposed by the L. & N. railroad carried with it their conviction that they thought the rates should be lower than those proposed by the L. & N. Since action of the commission yesterday, I have become convinced that failure of other railroads to agree with the L. & N. is due to the fact that they want to maintain the present passenger fares as nearly as possible. I have reached the conclusion that the proposal of the L. & N. railroad should be permitted to go into effect under conditions outlined in an order issued by the commission today. For this reason I called a special session of the commission in order that the matter might have immediate attention.

Having taken the position I did on yesterday with the information at hand, I make the foregoing statement that my position will not be regarded as inconsistent. My one thought is to do anything that will bring about a fair trial of reduced passenger fares in an effort to rehabilitate the passenger business of the railroads throughout the country. If this isn't done, they might as well go out of the passenger business.

The commission has assigned the following cases for hearing on March 14:

Grady W. Wilson, Statesboro, Ga.—Application for Class "B" certificate to transport cotton, cottonseed, fertilizer and live stock over no fixed route.

Southeast Georgia Coach Line, Macon—Application for Class "A" certificate to transport passengers, Macon to Brunswick, via Perry, Hawkinsville, McRae, Baxley and Jesup over state highways, 96, 11, 27.

Georgia Highway Express, Inc., Atlanta—Petition for revision of classification ratings.

C. E. Hickman, Rochelle—Rule nisi to show cause why certificate 947 should not be revoked and cancelled for violation of the commission's motor carrier rules and regulations.

U. S. TO SELL ISSUES WORTH $800,000,000

Sale To Retire Debt of $695,000,000 and Provide Useful Surplus.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration took its first financing step tonight when Secretary Woodin announced the treasury would sell $800,000,000 in treasury certificates of indebtedness on March 15 to meet maturing certificates of indebtedness totaling $695,000,000 and raise approximately $59,000,000 to meet public debt payments.

The secretary said the issues would comprise two series and will bear much higher interest than has been paid by the treasury in the last year. One issue will be for five months and bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent a year, while the second will be for nine months and bear interest at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent.

The interest on the latter series is 4 per cent higher than on the last certificates sold, on December 15, when $254,364,500 were floated at 3-4 of 1 per cent.

In September the treasury paid 1 1-4 per cent on $451,447,000 of certificates and last June paid 1 1-2 per cent for $373,856,500. Last March the baby bonds were sold for 2 per cent but only $53,591,400 were taken and on the same date $660,715,500 of one-year certificates were sold for 3 3-4 per cent. The secretary did not say how much would be allotted to each issue but said the certificates would be exempt from all taxation except estate and inheritance and that the interest and principle would be payable "in gold coin or the present standard of value."

NEW YORK IS READY TO REOPEN BIG BANKS

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—The big New York banks, with billions of assets, had their machinery set tonight for a resumption of virtually normal activity Monday, in keeping with the Washington program of starting the institutions in the 12 Federal Reserve bank cities first.

Wall Street expected to resume its other financial operations gradually, however. No action was taken by the stock exchange toward resuming trading, and it was reliably reported that there was virtually no likelihood of starting Monday, although some quarters thought trading might commence later in the week. Other principal security and commodity exchanges were expected to take the lead of the stock exchange.

Gold continued to pour into the heavily guarded Federal Reserve bank as nervous hoarders flocked in to give up their metal in return for paper currency. Coin received today was the largest yet, aggregating $16,000,000.

The aggregate restoration this week is $108,000,000. It was estimated that the total of hoards thus poured back into the banks all over the country this week was well over $200,000,000, and on the accepted theory that a dollar of gold makes a base for $10 of credit, the foundation was laid for potential credit expansion of more than $2,000,000,000.

The Federal Reserve bank received first shipment of the new Federal Reserve bank notes issued as part of the currency expansion plan embraced in the emergency banking act. The amount of the shipment was not disclosed, but it was expected that it would be rapidly disbursed to member banks as needed. The Reserve bank continued to issue currency, make rediscounts and perform other normal service for its members today.

Heart Attack Fatal

industries and inventive genius.

"We are for the present recovering from a wild debauch of frenzied finance, crazy speculation and insensate greed. Everybody seems to have lost their sense of the responsibility of wealth, and a get-rich-quick epidemic swept the country.

"I think the situation is now well understood and we are sobering up and painfully getting our house in order. The tragic experience we are having will result in educating the people who care."

Caution and conservatism are as necessary in economics as in physical health, Mr. Ochs said.

"The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount cannot be ignored or forgotten," the publisher declared, "and should be our guide and philosophy of life.

"Spontaniety and idealism, so frightfully dormant, will be awakened for the peace and comfort of our children and if so, it will be full compensation for our tribulations."

Declaring he had lived through other periods of economic depression and then had seen the country "chastened and better for the experience," Mr. Ochs said healthy-minded and industrious men of today would gain knowledge and experience that they could capitalize to their "everlasting advantage."

"The world," he said, "is on the eve of astonishing developments in science and industry. The inventions and developments of the past 75 years will be far surpassed within the next score or more of years.

"During my lifetime, there has been introduced and placed in practical operation (to mention only some of the most important), the Atlantic cable, electric power and light, the telephone, the phonograph, automobiles, motion pictures, wireless, radio, airplanes, television, manufacture of steel, water, gas, paper made of wood, the web pringting press, the linotype, stereotyping, reinforced concrete, concrete roads.

"All those and other important developments in science, surgery, and medicine were unknown when I was born. All will be further developed in the next few years.

"I do not believe our trouble lies in our production, but rather in underconsumption and maldistribution. We shall cast aside and scrap much that is now in use to be replaced by new and more perfect implements for the convenience and comfort of mankind and for his remunerative and enlarged employment. So, you see, I am an optimist on my 75th birthday."

Mr. Ochs expressed sadness at "the calamity that has struck Southern California."

Mr. Ochs was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, March 12, 1858. Besides being his 75th birthday anniversary, today also was the twelfth birthday anniversary of one of his four grandchildren, Ruth Sulzburger.

In excellent health, active and alert, Mr. Ochs keeps in close touch with his two newspapers and the Associated Press. He and Mrs. Ochs celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary 12 days ago.

exchange such cotton or other products with growers for acreage reduction.

"To levy such charges on agricultural products or products manufactured from them as seems necessary to accomplish the purpose of the act.

"In the drafting of a bill to carry out these recommendations, all powers necessary to the successful carrying out of the purpose to be achieved shall be included."

Commodities for which the group suggested application of the program were wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, cattle, sheep, rice, tobacco, milk and its products.

SENATOR HOWELL DIES IN CAPITAL

Noted Nebraska Republican Succumbs to Heart Attack.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Senator Robert B. Howell, republican, of Nebraska, died of a heart attack about 2 p. m. today at Walter Reed hospital.

The Nebraska senator had been ill for several weeks of pneumonia which later developed several complications. His condition took a turn for the worse several days ago after it had appeared that he might recover.

Howell was serving his second term in the senate, having been re-elected in 1928.

Born in Adrian, Mich., January 21, 1864, the son of Andrew Howell, jurist-author, he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1885 and served as a lieutenant in the Spanish-American War.

He took a course in the Detroit school of law. Later, after some time in the real estate business in Omaha, he served as state engineer of Nebraska, state senator, and water commissioner of Omaha. As state senator, Howell secured legislation resulting in public ownership of Omaha's water, ice and gas plants, which he managed for many years.

He was republican national committeeman for Nebraska from 1912-1920 and a member of the executive committee from 1916-1924.

Just prior to entering the senate he was chairman of the national radio service commission of the post-office and agriculture departments.

Howell entered Walter Reed hospital on February 25 after being confined at his home several days with a cold and general weakness as a result of his work in connection with the investigation of the Broussard-Overton senatorial contest in Louisiana.

The senator is survived by his wife, the former Mrs. Alice Chase Cullingham, of Omaha, and a stepson, J. S. Cullingham.

Immediately after being informed of his death, the senate adopted resolutions of regret and adjourned out of respect to Senator Howell.

Arrangements were made to have the body entrained for Omaha tomorrow morning. Funeral services will be held at the latter senator's home in that city with burial on Tuesday.

Vice President Garner appointed a committee of 15 senators to attend the Howell funeral train, composed of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska; Dickinson, republican, Iowa; Nye, republican, North Dakota; Vandenberg, republican, Michigan; Robinson, republican, Indiana; Johnson, republican, California; Murphy, democrat, Iowa; King, democrat, Utah; Bulow, democrat, South Dakota; Pittman, democrat, Nevada; Trammell, democrat, Florida; Kean, republican, New Jersey; Carey, republican, Wyoming; La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, and Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota.

BRATTON IS EXPECTED TO GET CHAIRMANSHIP

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP) Senator Sam C. Bratton, democrat, New Mexico, probably will succeed the late Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, as chairman of the senate's special campaign funds committee, which expects to continue its work.

Bile Stagnates In Sluggish Livers and Makes Us Sick

Unless your liver furnishes plenty of fresh bile every day your food does not digest properly—it just ferments and decays in the bowels—constipation, gas, sour stomach, headaches, nervousness, etc., are the result.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills relieve the cause of this condition. They are not like any medicine you have ever taken (write for free literature describing their action and effects). Don't be misled. Calomel, salts, mineral waters, laxative pills, etc., have no effect on the liver. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain the only two substances which will actually cause a sluggish liver to increase its production of bile.

Only 60 cents for a full 30-day treatment. At your druggist or write G. F. Willis, Inc., Atlanta, Ga. All Jacobs Stores have them.

TWO MURDER TRIALS SET FOR THIS WEEK

Two murder trials are slated for hearing in superior court this week. The first on Tuesday will be that of Wilburn Barnum, negro, charged with the murder on January 30 of Doyal Barnes, a white man of a Washington street address. He will be tried before Judge C. C. Pittman. On Thursday, before the same judge, Hosea Patrick, negro, charged with the murder of Ray Shell, another negro, last June, will go on trial a second time. His first trial resulted in a locked jury.

Group Mourns Warner.

A memorial resolution on the death of A. W. Warner, president, adopted at the February meeting of the South Boulevard Improvement Association, said in his passing the association had lost "a loyal officer and the city of Atlanta an honorable and valued citizen."

Army Orders

One commission, one promotion, two reappointments and new assignments feature changes in reserve corps personnel announced by the Atlanta headquarters.

Private Ansel Henry Matthews, 2095 Sylvan road, Atlanta, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the coast artillery corps, while Second Lieutenant Charles Clemmons Cox, 917 Springdale road, N. E., was promoted to first lieutenant of infantry.

The two officers given reappointments for five years are First Lieutenant John L. Wright Jr., signal corps, and Second Lieutenant Thomas Guy Woolford Jr., infantry, both of Atlanta.

Second Lieutenant Kenneth B. Roberts, ordnance department, Savannah, was examined for promotion to first lieutenant, while Omer L. Jeter, Atlanta, was enlisted as private in the coast artillery corps.

First Lieutenant William S. Turner, chaplain reserve, Atlanta, and Second Lieutenant Allen A. Futral, Atlanta, were assigned to the 67th coast artillery. Lieutenant Turner will be the regimental chaplain of the organization.

The 82nd division was the assignment given First Lieutenant William E. Mason, Macon, and Second Lieutenants Brown L. Nicholson, Columbus, and Clarence A. Whelchel, Gainesville, while Second Lieutenant Louis A. Hawkins, Atlanta, was placed in the 355th service battalion. Other assignments include Second Lieutenant Abner J. Beall, Augusta, to Camp Foster corps area service command; Second Lieutenants William E. Persons Jr., Fort Benning, and Joseph E. Robinson, Jr., Atlanta, to Fort Benning corps area service command; Second Lieutenant Charles F. Bear, Fort Oglethorpe, to mobilization area No. 3; Second Lieutenant Albert H. Ellis, Rossville, to 326th infantry; Second Lieutenant William A. Lyman, Fort Benning, to 325th infantry, and Private William T. Lawrence, Atlanta, to 326th infantry.

Oxygen's Action on Proteins Seen As Important Clue in Cancer Study

By F. B. COLTON.

How oxygen regulates the protein-building process of body cells—an important new aid in the study of cancer—has been discovered by scientists of the United States public health service.

They have partially solved a mystery that long has puzzled medical men—how proteins, important essentials of foods and building materials of cells, are built up from chemicals in the blood to keep life going in the cells of the body.

The "oxygen tension," or amount of oxygen present, is what controls this building-up process, it has been found by Drs. Carl Voegtlin, Mary E. Maver and J. M. Johnson, of the National Institute of Health.

For the first time in the history of science, they have duplicated under controlled conditions outside of the body part of the actual process of building up proteins that is constantly going on within human body cells. It sheds new light on one of the fundamental processes of life.

The new knowledge, the scientists hope, will be helpful in the study of cancer, because cancer cells grow at an abnormal speed which seems to result from some disturbance of this normal cell-building process. Their discovery indicates that the oxygen supply of the cells may have something to do with the regulation of cancerous growth.

Proteins are the essential elements of most foods. They are originally created by chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants, from water, nitrogen and carbon dioxide with the aid of sunlight. Human beings receive proteins by eating either plants or animals that first ate plants.

During digestion of food the proteins are broken up into simpler chemicals known as amino acids. These are carried by the blood to the body cells, where they are built up again into different kinds of proteins needed by different cells. It is this building-up process, formerly a mystery, that the public health service scientists have succeeded in partially explaining.

They noticed that the process of digestion or breaking-down of proteins could be greatly speeded up when oxygen was absent, which suggested that oxygen might also regulate the opposite process of building up of proteins.

To test the idea, proteins were "digested" in an atmosphere of pure nitrogen, all oxygen being drawn off. They were partially broken up, though not completely reduced to amino acids as in normal digestion.

Then oxygen was admitted to the apparatus where the "digestion" was taking place and the process reversed itself. The proteins began building up again, at a rate that varied with the amount of oxygen present. It appeared to be the same kind of building up that takes place in body cells.

This is the first step toward learning how the whole process of protein-building works within the body. More research is needed before it can be ascertained how the discovery will affect the cancer problem.

MRS. EDNA W. FOWLER PASSES AT AGE OF 72

Mrs. Edna W. Fowler, 72, well-known Atlanta woman, died Saturday morning at her residence at 1289 Emory Circle, after an extended illness.

POLISH TROOP MOVES ALARM GERMANS

OverSeas

By BYRON DARNTON,
Associated Press Cable Editor.

"Anschluss" has been a political war cry in Austria for some time, and it is of particular importance just now because Austria is the latest nation to experience rule by dictator.

"Anschluss" means union with Germany. This is strictly forbidden by the World War treaties, but for years there has been strong agitation in the little central European republic for merger with her more powerful German sister to the northwest.

Austria's experience with dictatorship ties in with "Anschluss" in several ways. For one thing the dictator is Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of the Christian social party. This party divides into two sessions, one monarchist in sympathy and the other demanding union with Germany.

Another tieup involves Alfred Frauenfeld, the leader of the Austrian Nazi party. The Austrian Nazis are reflections of the Nazis led by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany. To Herr Frauenfeld the Dollfuss dictatorship is nothing more or less than preparation for the Nazis dictatorship he is certain is to come, and if Austria goes Nazi the northwestern boundary line separating her from national socialist Germany will be imaginary indeed.

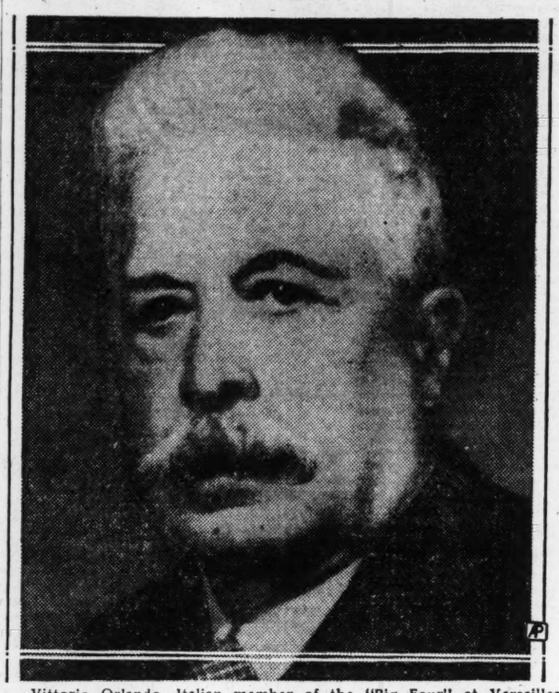

Austria has had a difficult time ever since the war. She lost considerable territory when the map of Europe was remade, and critics of the new series of boundary lines asserted that that agriculture and industry had been so heartlessly separated that it was futile to expect a stable economy in the small republic.

In the years immediately following the war Austria had a drastic dose of inflation and for some time she lived for the most part on credits from abroad. In fact, during the years 1919 to 1920 urban residents lived almost entirely on credits from the United States, granted largely in kind. Suffering was extreme, and there are many residents of Vienna and other towns now living only because Herbert Hoover and the Society of Friends kept them from starvation.

Less than two years ago the agitation for union with Germany resulted in a plan which aroused all Europe. Vienna and Berlin drew up an arrangement for customs unity, to which France immediately objected, and there was much to-do until finally both participants backed down.

The customs union threat was eliminated at a time when neither Berlin nor Vienna had a government inspired by the ideas of dictatorship. There is little doubt, of course, that if it came to an issue of arms the opponents of "Anschluss" abroad could prevent its realization. But with dictatorship in Austria and in Germany it may be taken for granted that "Anschluss" shortly will present itself as an important problem for European statesmen to dispose of.

Orlando Sees America As Chief Hope of World

Vittorio Orlando, Italian member of the "Big Four" at Versailles, said in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press that cool heads in the United States could keep the world from slipping back into the dark ages.

By ANDRUE BERDING.

ROME, March 11.—(AP)—America is the chief prop to keep the world from slipping back into another "dark age," said ex-Premier Vittorio Emanuele Orlando, one of the "big four" with Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George at the Versailles peace conference.

The interview was the first he has granted in years.

Sitting in his library where books stretch in hundreds to the ceiling on all four sides, the gray-haired, stockily built man, with a powerful, square-jawed face, said:

"Many persons talk of the world's returning to the middle ages. Continued depression, continued decline of commercial communication among nations and the outbreak of new and repeated wars could produce this situation.

"To prevent it the United States is the world's chief hope."

Asked what America must do to fulfill this apostolate, Orlando replied:

"Simply keep her head, don't indulge in strange political or economic experiments, keep up her courage, keep out of war and continue peacefully to work out her salvation."

Orlando's voice was vibrant with suppressed oratory, an oratory in which he has no rival in Italy except Mussolini himself.

The former peace negotiator was in America briefly last year, visiting his daughter, Carlotta, a resident of New York. In that city he attended a "friendship dinner."

He returned, he said, with a sense of the greatness of the United States and her future promise.

The man who took over the supreme post in the Italian government just after the shattering defeat of Caporetto in 1917, and led Italy to victory over Austria in 1918, chuckled as he related how he dodged New York newspapermen because he did not want to be interviewed on present Italy.

Orlando, once a headline name for all Italian newspapers and those of other nations, is seldom mentioned in the fascist press. Known as the "last great Italian liberal," he lives under fascism quietly and unmolested, carrying on his law practice.

His last silent clash with the regime came in 1931 when he resigned his post as professor of constitutional law at the University of Rome, a post he had held 45 years, rather than take the fascist loyalty oath established for university professors.

The statesman's memories of the peace conference are still vivid, particularly of Wilson's famous message over the head of the Italian government directly to the Italian people protesting Italy's "unjustifiable claim to Fiume." Shown a statement that his attitude on Fiume had brought him "a severe diplomatic defeat," Orlando replied, speaking of himself in the third person:

"As an historical fact it is inexact to say simply that Fiume became a free port, which would lead one to believe it was made a free city. The truth, instead, is that Fiume became part of the Italian state.

"If therefore Orlando succeeded in maintaining Italy's rights over Fiume and in leaving them unprejudiced, it would be more exact and just to say that no man of state affronted a fiercer tempest and succeeded in saving not only himself but the ship entrusted to him."

Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George, he called the "three omnipotents."

The 73-year-old jurist concluded the interview by showing the visitor his collection of paintings and photographs in the room adjoining his study. Many of these were of himself.

In one corner was a large oil portrait with its individual electric lamp throwing into vivid contrast the white hair, dark eyebrows and eyes and the white mustache of a strong old face.

FRENCH FARMERS OBJECT TO WHEAT AT $1.17 BUSHEL

Price of More Than Twice the World Market Level Fails To Satisfy and Rioting Results.

TARIFF AND QUOTA KEEP PRICES HIGH

Agriculturists Demand That All Foreign Wheat Be Barred and Old Level Restored.

By M. K. WHITELEATHER.

PARIS, March 11.—(AP)—Marching farmers protesting against the low price of wheat have created a real problem for France.

Aroused to fever pitch over the steady fall in grain quotations since last summer, farmers throughout the country have gone on parade. Some demonstrations ended in violence.

Parliament put $12,000,000 at the disposal of the government to aid harvesting.

Kick at $1.17 Wheat.

French wheat is quoted in Paris at $4.30 the quintal (three and two-thirds bushels). This is equivalent to $1.17 a bushel, considerably more than twice the world market price. But last summer wheat brought $6 and $7 the quintal.

The farmers ask that all foreign wheat, including American, Canadian and Argentine, be barred from the domestic market and that prices be restored to the $6 and $7 level, for from $1.55 to $1.90 a bushel.

Quotas Bar Foreign Grain.

Tariffs and the quota system have kept France free from the effects of the world over-production of grain, but still farmers are not satisfied. Foreign wheat has been subject to a strict quota allotment which increases as the domestic crop is used. The percentage allowed to enter the country immediately after harvest is zero, but it has reached 90 per cent just prior to a new threshing season.

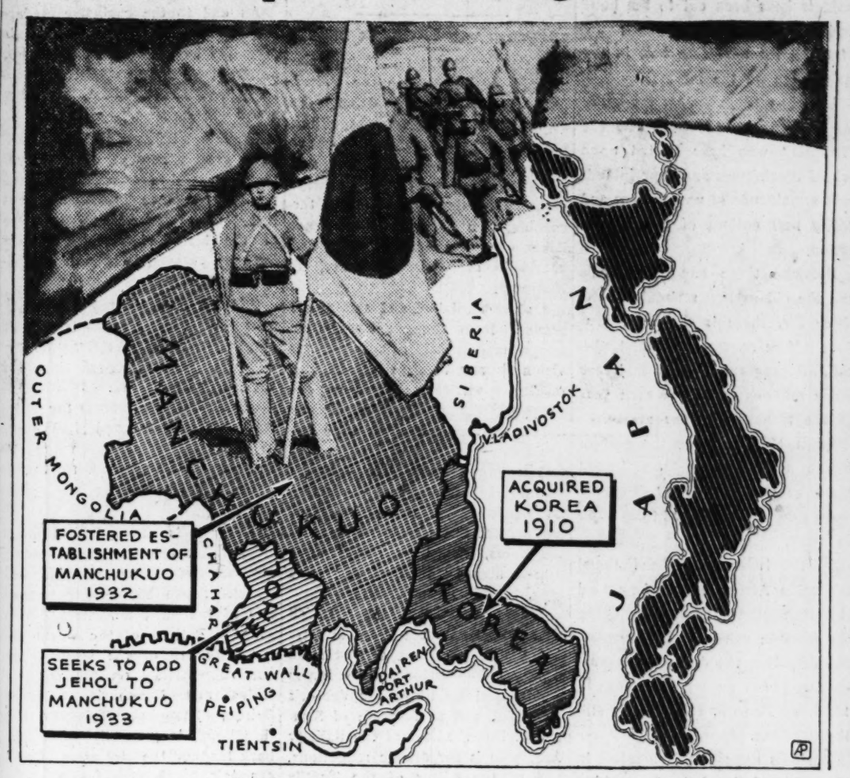

The minister of agriculture advised farmers not to get "jumpy" over the large crop of 1932.

"Our problem," he said, "arises from alternating good and bad crops." He said that last year's excess amounted only to a little more than a month's consumption. He blamed speculators for the drop in prices rather than the size of the crop.

Big Drop in Acreage.

The ministry of agriculture has ordered officials dispensing the $12,000,000 voted by parliament to loan money only to those farmers who prove that they grow wheat of superior quality. Spring wheat has been discouraged.

Japan's Seizure of Jehol Province Part of Expansion Long Considered

The war between Japan and China, never officially declared, continues over the disputed Jehol province. The coure of Nippon's expansion westward in Asia is shown in the map. Japanese soldiers such as those above pushed through mountainous country to capture Jehol City, capital of the province, with little opposition from the Chinese.

By GLENN BABB.

TOKYO, March 11.—(AP)—Manchukuo, creation of Japanese military statesmanship, is only a year old and therefore the present-day campaign for its inclusion of Jehol province can be no older.

But for nearly a generation Japanese expansionists have planned Jehol's inclusion within at least Nippon's economic domination, if not within her political empire.

Late in 1914 Japan first served notice that she considered Jehol—which statesmen in those days called Eastern Inner Mongolia—within her sphere of special interest. This was done by presenting to the new Chinese republic the famous "21 demands," designed to enlarge and perpetuate Japanese rights in Manchuria, the spoils of her successful war with Russia 10 years before.

Several of these demands were embodied in a treaty signed by Japan and China May 25, 1915, "with a view to developing their economic relations in South Manchuria and Eastern Inner Mongolia."

In this treaty China agreed to open "as soon as possible certain suitable places in Eastern Inner Mongolia as commercial ports."

The five years following saw the elaboration of Japanese schemes for railway penetration into Jehol, still called Eastern Inner Mongolia. From the Chinese government Tokyo obtained on September 28, 1918, a preliminary agreement for "the four railways of Manchuria and Mongolia," including a line from Taonan, in northwestern Fengtien, to Jehol city, and another from a point on the Taonan-Jehol railway to a seaport to be selected later.

In this agreement were embodied definite plans for grappling Jehol to the railroad and economic dominion Japan was rapidly consolidating in south Manchuria.

A period of suspension in Japanese expansion followed, marked by the renunciations of the Washington conference of 1921-22. Thereafter Japan tried for years to obtain from the Chinese fulfillment of their railway agreements, and Chinese frustration of these efforts contributed to the explosion of September, 1931, which resulted in Japan's occupation of all Manchuria.

Meanwhile the Chinese themselves unwittingly had strengthened the foundations for the claim that Jehol was part of Manchuria. Up to 1925 the territory immediately north of the Great Wall had been administered from Peking as part of the province of Chihli. Then this territory and certain other areas were formed into three "special districts," reading from east to west, Jehol, Chahar, Suiyuan.

After the Chinese nationalists in 1928 established their supremacy over all China proper, these districts were accorded status as provinces.

At the beginning of 1929 Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang, the overlord of Manchuria, pledged allegiance to the nationalist government at Nanking. In March Jehol was added to the domains of the Mukden warlord.

There is this basis, therefore, for the Japanese claim, that during the closing years of Chang Hsiao-liang's rule, Jehol was part of Manchuria.

When the undeclared war between Japan and China began at Mukden September 18, 1931, the governor of Jehol, Tang Yu-lin, declared his independence and his neutrality toward the imbroglio.

Until a few weeks ago he successfully maintained this seat on the fence while Manchukuo and the Japanese army bid against Chang Hsiao-liang for his allegiance with threats and bribes. Chang evidently was the successful bidder, for the entrance of several of his brigades into Jehol late in December, 1932, showed that Tang was no longer a free agent.

BERLIN INFORMED MILITARY FORCES BEING MOBILIZED

Warsaw Government, However, Denies Concentrations at Various German Border Points; Paper Reveals Rumor.

PROTEST MESSAGES SENT LEAGUE GROUP

Patriotic Society at Danzig Brands Movements as 'Worst of All Treaty Violations.'

BERLIN, March 11.—(AP)—While the Polish government denied troop concentrations in the vicinity of Gdynia and the free city of Danzig, the Taegliche Rundschau, organ of former Chancellor Kurt Von Schleicher, claimed today it was reliably informed that not only were Polish troops being concentrated at various German border points but that unusual military activity was manifest throughout the Polish corridor.

Under the alarming headline—"Danzig in Danger"—the newspaper said: "Nearly 300 military planes have been assembled at one military flying field in the corridor. At Poznan, a tank regiment has been increased from 35 to 85."

The Polish government made public a denial of troop concentrations with a statement that the reports undoubtedly originated in connection with the stopover of a group of border patrol officers visiting Gdynia on an excursion through Poland.

Protests Issued.

At Danzig the patriotic society Heimatsdienst (German membership) forwarded special telegrams of protest to individual League of Nations members branding the Polish military movements at Westerplatte basin, the entrance to the free city post, as "the worst of all treaty violations yet committed by the Polish government."

The telegram supplemented Danzig's official protest upon which the League will act Monday.

The Polish government was reported to have increased the guard at Westerplatte near Gydnia, at the end of the Polish corridor, and a German dispatch from Danzig said a number of Polish munitions transports would be sent there. Nearby Danzig is under League supervision and Poland has no sovereign rights there.

The patriotic society's telegrams said "A feeling of political danger and fear for their rights is felt by citizens following the Polish government's unceasing attacks and through its economic and now unconcealed political measures."

Newspaper's Report.

The newspaper Rundschau said:

"Three military transport trains arrived Thursday at Gdynia with uhlans and infantrymen. The troop movement continues. There were also transports via the coal-line railway yesterday. Since Thursday, the district adjacent to the Danzig border near Dirschau has been occupied by heavy Polish divisions equipped for action.

"Dirschau resembles a military camp. In the district between Stargard, Prussia, and Gdynia, troops moved by means of trucks. The object is to line the strategically significant highway leading around the Danzig territory's western border."

The newspaper said Poland asked Danzig to bar commercial shipping from the Westerplatte in order that troop movements may be screened.

"Poland is trying to provoke Danzig and is waiting for the slightest pretext to begin action," it added.

VIENNA IS EXCITED BY ROYALIST RUMOR

VIENNA, March 11.—(AP)—Rumors from Berlin that Archduke Otto of Hapsburg is living at a monastery in Switzerland near the Austrian border, awaiting a monarchist outbreak which would enable him to regain the Austrian throne have thrown Vienna into a state of excitement.

Police refused to comment beyond stating that they were busy seeking Otto's whereabouts.

Twenty-year-old Prince Otto is the eldest son of former Emperor Karl, who abdicated at the close of the World War the throne of Austria-Hungary which he had inherited from his great-uncle, Emperor Franz Josef. Recently he has been a student at a University in Belgium, apparently not concerning himself too deeply with the politics of his homeland.

Austria at present is governed by a dictatorship set up by Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss this week after the officers of parliament had resigned over a political dispute which arose from differences of opinion in connection with the operation of state railways.

GERMAN, POLISH SITUATION IS RECOGNIZED AS DELICATE.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—State department officials today said the administration regards the disarmament situation as extremely delicate in view of developments in Germany and the Polish corridor and is exercising great care to avert anything that might prevent progress now toward reducing armies and navies.

Undersecretary Philips, of the state department, said he expected Norman H. Davis, American representative in economics and disarmament parleys, to go abroad to discuss both matters quite soon.

Through its diplomats in Europe the administration is keeping close track of growing unrest in eastern Germany, where the Polish corridor, splitting off east Prussia from the rest of Germany to give Poland an outlet to the sea, has been an increasingly sore point.

In the Washington view, the matter has become more of a threat to disarmament since the rise of Adolf Hitler and the resultant French fears that Germany would undertake to rearm itself in disregard of the Versailles treaty.

2 More Americans Affronted in Berlin

BERLIN, March 11—(UP)—Cases of the molestation of Americans—mostly Jewish—by fascist brown shirts reached a total of eight today. The latest cases reported were those of Julius Fuchs and Herman Rosenman.

SENTENCE IS DOUBLED IN TRIAL ON APPEAL

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 11.—(AP)—Doubling the penalty imposed in a previous trial, E. J. Burns was sentenced to 50 years in prison tonight for the slaying of Dr. W. H. Godwin a year ago.

The jury ignored the plea of insanity entered by the former real estate man, who was charged with luring the physician to a vacant house in suburban East Thomas the night of January 6, 1931, and wounding him fatally in a gun battle.

Burns was sentenced to 25 years in his first trial but won an appeal to the state supreme court.

ARGENTINA CONTINUES PAYMENT OF DEBTS

BUENUS AIRES, March 11.—(AP) Undersecretary Acevedo, of the finance department, said tonight that the Argentine government will continue meeting payments on foreign debts held in the United States and Europe.

He added that funds now in the treasury are sufficient to meet those payments until April 14.

BOLIVIAN-PARAGUAYAN ARMISTICE IS HINTED

LA PAZ, Bolivia, March 11.—(UP) The Bolivian government, it was reliably reported today, considers an armistice with Paraguay pending settlement of the Chaco territorial dispute, just another postponement of a definite solution to the quarrel. The armistice, it was declared, would serve to give Paraguay a respite in which to improve her military defenses.

ROOSEVELT ELECTED TO FRENCH SOCIETY

PARIS, March 11.—(UP)—President Roosevelt tonight was named an honorary member of the French Society, Le Sabord, which perpetuates maritime lore.

Chicagoan Rings Up $7 in Bandit Profit

CHICAGO, March 11.—(AP)—Nicholas Ramos told police he came out $7 ahead when two bandits held him up.

As one of two entered his fruit store last night and pulled a revolver from his pocket a $10 bill fluttered to the floor unnoticed by all but Ramos.

A moment later they fled, taking $3 from the cash box. Ramos picked up the bill, rang it up, and called it a profitable transaction.

Soviet Executes 35 For Alleged Sabotage

MOSCOW, March 11.—(AP)—The chairman of the state political department announced today that 35 persons had been executed and that 40 others had been sentenced to eight or ten years in prison for participating in "counter-revolutionary activity and sabotage in connection with farming in the Ukraine, north Caucasus, and white Russia."

Those convicted, the communique said, included persons of the bourgeois and landowner classes.

The most active participants in the alleged plot were given the severest punishment for this "social offense—death by shooting," the announcement said.

CHILE-PERUVIAN PACT NEARING SIGNATURE

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 11.—(UP)—Instructions for final negotiation of the Chile-Peru commercial treaty were forwarded to the Chilean embassy at Lima today by the foreign office. The treaty, it was believed, will be signed shortly by both parties.

Le Brun Interrupted By Unarmed Lunatic

LYONS, France, March 11.—(UP)—A man broke through police lines today and leaped upon the running board of President Albert Lebrun's automobile. Former Premier Eduoard Herriot also was in the car.

Police overpowered the man, who said he was Irenee Boulesteix, escaped from the Charenton lunatic asylum last December. He said he wanted "two words" with the president. He was not armed.

The incident did not change Lebrun's plans to visit the Lyons International Fair with Herriot.

CONTAGION REPORTED ON COLOMBIAN VESSEL

MANAOS, Brazil, March 11.—(UP)—Several cases of typhus, beri beri and malaria were reported on board the Colombian gunboats Boyaca and Mosquera on their arrival here today under convoy from the confluence of the Putumayo and Amazon rivers.

Ownership of Gold To Be Banned In Treasury Order Expected Soon

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Gold coin and gold certificates, or "yellowbacks," apparently are the only money which must not be held by individuals, banks, or corporations under the anti-hoarding regulations to be issued by the treasury early next week.

The gold certificates differ from the new currency about to be distributed and from all other paper money now in circulation in this way:

Each certificate is backed by a 100 per cent deposit of gold coin or bullion in the treasury vaults. It is therefore considered identical with cold coin.

Circulation of these certificates already is prohibited. That is taken to mean that they must not be used for paying bills or otherwise. The forthcoming regulations are expected to require that all be immediately turned in to banks and sent back to the treasury. However, the exact rules have not been disclosed. These will tell banks and citizens just what they must do with gold or gold certificates in their possession.

The names of all parties known to have big sums in gold or gold certificates will be reported to the treasury by the federal reserve banks Monday. Presumably action will be taken against them unless their hoards are soon returned and exchanged for new currency.

All other types of paper money in circulation may be held or spent, as the forthcoming regulations are now understood, without being considered hoarding, and prohibited.

Most of these are backed by partial gold deposits.

United States notes hitherto have been redeemable in gold.

There are only $300,550,000 worth now in circulation.

Federal reserve notes out amount to $4,550,000,000.

They have been hitherto redeemable in gold.

National bank notes, backed by government bonds, amount to $800,000,000, and are redeemable in "lawful money of the United States."

Federal Reserve bank notes, similarly redeemable, have been mostly retired.

Many one-dollar silver certificates, redeemable only in silver, are outstanding, and a few treasury notes of 1890, which have been redeemable either in gold or silver.

EVEREST FLIERS PLAN SOUND FILM

Complete Record of Trip Will Be Kept by Venturesome Party.

LONDON, March 11.—(UP)—A complete talkie film is to be made of the attempt to fly to the summit of Mount Everest.

With the exception of four or five airmen and two planes which recently left Britain for India, will be three film men. They hope to make talking pictures of places and people never before seen.

Experienced Director.

The director of the film is Geoffrey Barkas, who directed the British films "Palaver," in northern Nigeria, and "'Q' Ships." The two cameramen are F. R. Bonnett, who filled this post with Sir Alan Cobham in most of his long-distance flights, and Arthur Fisher. They were selected specially from a group of men, who were subjected to exhaustive physical, as well as technical, tests.

Recently they were put into refrigerators, wearing electrically-heated suits, while the temperature was reduced to minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit, which, it is believed, is the temperature of the rarefied atmosphere at 34,000 feet, at which they will have to fly.

Many Difficulties.

Other technical difficulties have to be overcome in connection with the cameras. These will be electrically heated, it being found in a recent test of one of the Everest planes that when the machine alighted after reaching a height of about 34,000 feet, one of the cameras was a solid block of black ice and had to be thawed out. In addition, special lenses have had to be made, as an ordinary lens would split in the intense cold at high altitudes.

The two planes, the Houston-Westland and the Westland-Wallace, are capable of carrying a pilot and a cameraman, as well as two large cinematograph cameras, two oxygen sets, each in duplicate, and duplicated heating sets, to 36,000 feet, and over and around Everest's snow-capped 29,141 feet, in 8 minutes.

Cruise Around Summit.

There will then be sufficient fuel for the planes to cruise around the summit for two hours while the cameras record everything below them. At the same time, the cameraman will describe what he sees, speaking into a dictaphone, the records of which will subsequently be played over and photographed on a sound film.

The picture will begin with the departure of the expedition from Britain, then the start of the actual attempt on Everest, and finally the return to Purnea.

The expedition expects to be away about four months, and should make the actual flight late in March.

POPE PIUS PLANS 24 CEREMONIALS

10 Beatifications Are Included in Vatican's Holy Year Program.

By THOMAS B. MORGAN.

VATICAN CITY, March 11.—(UP)—Pope Pius XI will appear in 24 major ceremonies in St. Peter's cathedral during the Holy Year beginning April 2.

As scheduled, these will include ten beatifications, four canonizations, six major feast days and the remainder in special ceremonies. The pontiff will officiate on an average of once a fortnight, so that all pilgrims will have a chance to see the gorgeous ceremonies.

Those who are slated for beatification include a group of martyrs who suffered for their faith in the early days of missionary work in Uruguay. This is the only ceremonial which has special significance in the western hemisphere.

Others Honored.

The others who likely will be endowed with the appellation of "blessed" will be Venerable Vincenza Gerosa, a nun of Brescia, Italy; Maria Pelletier, a French nun; Gemma Galgani, another Italian nun of Lucca; Giuseppe Pignatelli, of Naples, and Catherine Labouret, a second French nun.

There are to be four canonizations, providing the procedure for the promulgation of the persons concerned as "saints" will be completed. Those chosen are the Blessed Fournet; Andre Hubert, founder of the order of the Sisters of the Cross; Blessed Giovanni don Bosco, the Salesian father; Blessed Vincenzo Strambi, Bishop of Macerata, Italy, and Blessed Corrado da Parzhan, Capucine nonk. There also is a chance that Blessed Lodovica de Marillac, a French nun, founder of the order of Daughters of Charity, may become a saint during the Holy Year.

Long List.

The ceremony of canonization is the most elaborate in the long list of functions held in the Roman church. Here the church rises to its very highest. The pope presides during the whole ceremony, which lasts three hours. He is carried on a throne in a procession of cardinals and the papal court. As he is borne down through the nave of the great basilica, he blesses the multitudes.

The robes worn by the prelates participating are the richest in church functions. Red and gold is worn when the saint has been martyrized for the cause and the silver trumpets announce the entrance and withdrawal of the pope.

Mexico Is Favorable To Daniels as Envoy

MEXICO CITY, March 11.—(AP) Reports that Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, is President Roosevelt's likely choice for ambassador to Mexico were received favorably today in government circles and an early official announcement is expected.

The significance of Mexico's approval of the man who was navy secretary at the time the American fleet occupied Vera Cruz in 1914, where hundreds of Mexicans were killed in battle, was immediately accepted here as proof that Mexico is willing to let "bygones be bygones."

TOKYO APPROVES LEAGUE DECISION

Cabinet Sanction Given; Intention To Retain German Islands Stated.

By MILES W. VAUGHN.

TOKYO, March 11.—(UP)—Japan's decision to resign from the League of Nations because of its condemnation of her Manchurian campaign was approved today by the cabinet.

Viscount Saito, prime minister, submitted the documents in the case to the emperor, who will refer them to the privy council before his approval is given.

In addition to the two years' notice of resignation, the documents include notification of Japan's intention of retaining the former German islands in the Pacific, which she holds under league mandate. The islands are of vital strategic and communication value and their possible fortification would be of concern to the United States.

There also is a memorandum concerning Japan's participation in the world labor bureau at Geneva and in the World Court.

It was announced that the campaign in Jehol continued unabated. The eighth Japanese division occupied Kupeikou, the pass in the Great Wall which is the key to the important city of Peiping in North China. Chinese defenders of the city resisted desperately and many casualties were reported on both sides.

The threat of a Japanese invasion of China proper, with occupation of Peiping and Tientsin, still existed. Foreign Minister Yasuya Uchida said further Chinese raids or threats in Jehol province would make China responsible for whatever military action Japan might be forced to take.

Fighting at other areas along the Great Wall was also reported. Japanese planes bombed the Chinese forces extensively.

MUSSOLINI SEES BETTER BUSINESS

Italian Dictator Plans Race for World Commerce.

By THOMAS B. MORGAN.

ROME, March 11.—(UP)—Premier Mussolini believes that good times are at hand and for this reason he has created the new Industrial Reorganization Institute. His plan is to have the country ready for a big boom when times change so that Italy will be off to a flying start in the race for world trade.

The new institute with its two sections makes the fourth important step in fascist state control of the country's industries.

The new Industrial Reorganization Institute is composed of two sections: (1) for industrial financing, and (2) for industrial "demobilization." Each section is independent. The former will assist deserving and healthy enterprises with loans on long terms.

With the launching of the new institute and the other existing forms of state interference in private industry, it may be said that the "corporative" system now has full control over all big business in the country. Big business to all intents and purposes is now state controlled.

It was stated in connection with the regulations issued for the Industrial Organization Institute that it will not affect in any way the level of the note circulation in the country.

The new institute undoubtedly will be a powerful lever in the next phase of the economic and financial situation in Europe, and its establishment is looked upon here as a happy augury for better times.

All England Is Pledged As Security for $3,000

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—The British empire was put up as security for a loan of $3,000 in American money to pay off the 500 sailors of the British cruiser Norfolk, in this port on a courtesy call. The ship's pay day fell due with all banks closed and the sailors faced shore leave without spending money.

F. Gordon Rule, British consul general, laid the facts before A. B. Paterson, president of the New Orleans Association of Commerce.

"Pardon me," said Mr. Paterson, "but a simple business question. What security?"

"The British empire, sir," replied the consul general.

"Well, the British empire is O. K. with me," said Paterson.

Within an hour the British sailormen were paid off. Until then the sailors had been trying to cash pound notes with little success.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 12, 1933.

NOT A SQUARE DEAL.

The action of the state senate in approving the county unit as the basis for the election of delegates for a repeal convention in Georgia seriously endangers the legality of the result of the referendum. At the same time the house defeated, by a vote of 100 to 57, only three short of the necessary majority of the entire membership, a proposal to make the popular vote the basis of election. By a more than 2-to-1 vote the house yesterday reconsidered the vote of the day before. The measure is certain to pass, on being called in a full house.

The state constitution specifically provides that any amendment to the fundamental law of the state must be made on the basis of popular vote. To hold the repeal referendum on a county unit basis would be in violation of the intention of this clearly expressed purpose of the constitution.

It was the clear purpose of congress, in the act by which it submitted the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, that the majority vote in each state should decide the position of the respective states on repeal.

The proposal that the convention delegates in Georgia be selected on a county unit basis would give preponderance of voting power to the less thickly populated sections of the state, thus ignoring the will of the majority.

It will be impossible to obtain, in this manner, a fair expression of the will of the people of Georgia on the question of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and should there be a division of result between the county unit and popular vote, the question would no doubt go to the courts for adjustment.

Even the arguments in favor of the use of the county unit as the basis of deciding primary elections do not apply to an election to decide the will of the people with regard to the present prohibition laws. Every man, woman and child in Georgia is equally affected, regardless of place of residence, and each vote should be of equal value in determining the position of the state on the repeal proposal.

The attempted resort to the county unit basis is an obvious effort to escape what is feared would be the decision of the people in an open and fair referendum.

No law can be sustained that is not backed by the sentiment of a majority of the people. If this state should by popular vote record itself in favor of repeal and by county unit vote, representing only a minority of the people, favor the continuation of the present impossible conditions, the purpose of the referendum would be completely nullified.

Georgia should follow the example of every other state that has acted—and what it is certain the other states will do and lay the matter squarely before the people for a direct "yes" or "no" answer to the question, "Are you in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment?"

That is the test that congress had in mind in submitting the referendum to the country, and that both the democratic and republican platforms pledged. In no other way can a true expression of the will of the majority of the people be secured.

You see, by reducing the navy's strength we can all get a job at $12 a day building wooden ships when it happens.

SCHOOL COSTS TOO HIGH.

The country is beginning to realize that the cost of our schools is too high and that drastic economies must be instituted to bring them more in line with present conditions.

While business and private budgets have been cut to the bone during the past three years, the overhead for education has, in the main, been on the increase.

Largely responsible for the heavy tax burden for education are the "faddists" who have foisted upon school committees and superintendents a multitude of unnecessary and costly new notions of pseudo-education.

Between these educational fads and the old narrow schedule of the three R's, there is the wise, prudent middle course of a sound educational program which would save many millions of dollars each year to the taxpayers of the nation.

From 1915 to 1920 the cost of public education in the United States nearly doubled, and an almost equal gain was registered from 1920 to 1925.

In the latter year the National Education Association defended this tremendous increase by citing the "loss in value of the dollar"—but now that the dollar has a purchasing power even greater than in 1915, we find our school costs still skyrocketing.

Business has met this increase in the value of the dollar by making each dollar go farther, and the same thing is true of the family exchequers of the land, living costs having been reduced 23 per cent since December, 1929.

Our public schools must be kept open, and must properly educate the youth of the country for the battle with life, but it is unreasonable to expect that the public is longer willing to be taxed for educational costs so out of line with other costs.

In 1931 we spent the staggering total of $3,200,000,000 for education, the larger part of which went in salaries to 1,029,000 teachers. Some communities have already seen the necessity for cutting these salaries, in line with the reduced income of those engaged in every other line of endeavor.

Those teachers who have not had their salaries reduced are now receiving, in view of the increased value of the dollar, a greater than 30 per cent increase over their 1929 pay, as against the drastic reduced salary scales of workers in industry and business, many of whom, in addition, are working on short time.

An example of how educational costs can be cut without damage to efficiency, is presented in the saving of more than a half million dollars effected by the Georgia board of regents during 1932. Despite this drastic reduction, the institutions of higher learning in this state rendered better service than ever before in their history.

What has thus been accomplished by the universities and colleges of Georgia can, and must, be done by the entire public school system of the nation.

It can be accomplished by throwing to the discard the practically worthless fol-de-rols and fads with which our educational system has been loaded down during the past two decades, by the institution of more businesslike methods of operation of our schools.

Poor Huey Long! Every time he starts to run the country, Louisiana pops out of his vest pocket.

SAFEGUARDING THE CHILDREN.

Recommendation by the grand jury that the city require that whooping cough and measles cases be quarantined strikes at a situation that offers a constant threat to the children and infants of Atlanta.

Both of these diseases are responsible for more deaths among babies than all other contagious diseases combined, and yet children suffering from them are allowed to come and go without restriction of any kind.

Especially is this the case in the instance of whooping cough, the sufferers from which are seldom confined to bed. For most of the time of their illness they are able to be up and around and generally are to be found playing with other children.

These two diseases have been quarantined by the county health officers for some time and as a result numbers of cases outside of the city are much less per capita than within its limits.

City council should act promptly in furnishing this safeguard for the health of babies and children.

It takes two unusual people to put over a swindle—one expert liar and one gifted believer.

BUSINESS AND THE WAR DEBTS.

A significant cross-section of the attitude of business in the United States towards the war debts is to be found in the expressions of the editors of 92 trade publications, representing the major business and industrial interests of the country, gathered by the committee for the consideration of intergovernmental debts, of which Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors, is chairman.

Out of a total of 107 statements secured from these editors, only two were definitely opposed to revision in any form; three favored making a settlement but were dubious of the good faith of the debtor countries, and ten were undecided.

The other spokesmen for the business and industry of the nation go vigorously on record as favoring prompt and final settlement of the debts, either by means of a drastic downward adjustment or a long, flexible moratorium.

Significant of the tenor of all these statements are those of Raymond Hill, president of Federated Business Publications, who favors a new deal by which the debtor's viewpoint will be favored; of Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age, who is for drastic reductions, and of the editor of the Textile World, who points out that a "dramatic shift of public opinion in favor of debt revision" is taking place.

In the south, Richard Haughton, president of the Cotton and Cotton Oil News, believes that "it can be successfully demonstrated that so far as the cotton belt is concerned we are losing each year in the normal profits of our customary export business more than the interest and sinking fund of the entire volume of debts."

Concurrent with the announcement of the survey of the business editors by the intergovernmental debts committee, the Commercial Credit Company, through its official organ, predicts that the debts will never be paid in full and takes the position that long delay in revising the payment plan will cost more than the United States would stand to gain.

According to this outstanding representative of the credit agencies of the country, "one meets almost no one of any class or calling, who however strongly he may oppose the plea for outright cancellation, does not favor reviewing this far-reaching subject, if only to make sure that America's policy promotes our own long-swing best interests."

The fast-spreading sentiment throughout the country for a settlement of the debts, with their definite adjustment rather than the manner in which the adjustment is arrived at being the important factor, is certain to have a marked influence on the conferences to be held in Washington in the near future between the new administration and representatives of the debtor nations.

With American agriculture and industry united in the demand for the definite step towards the reopening of foreign markets, the determined stand of congress against further concessions may be moderated.

The world is so full of a number of things that none of us now can be happy as kings.

DISSECTING THE DREAM.

Modern science, according to the editors of the new National Encyclopedia, has lately been busy taking apart the "stuff that dreams are made of" and has arrived at a definitely affirmative reply to the question, "Do dreams come true?"

Here, according to these authorities, is what happens when we dream:

Every dream is a perfect example of the subconscious mental process. All dream life is in the present, in the form of perceptions and images which ordinarily do not correspond to fact. The dream is dramatic. It is living action in the present, realistic and free from the limitations of reality.

The suffering in dreams is real suffering and the pleasure is real pleasure. Dreams differ according as they follow the suppressed desires or the unacknowledged fears; hence one's dream personality may be strongly like or decidedly different from the waking one.

The argument that certain dream premonitions come true when rightly interpreted is held to be due to the fact that the premonitions are "due to hypersensibility of the dream consciousness." Be that as it may, the further argument is advanced that a large variety of dreams cause their own fulfillment through the principle of suggestion.

All of which is interesting, but far from encouraging in its entirety. Who, for instance, is so anxious to be able to read the future as to be willing to face the possibility that the good old, homemade variety of nightmare is some sort of subconscious message of what the future holds?

Let's see; isn't this the world that hooted about Wilhelm's "yellow peril"?

THE RISE OF ASIA.

An end to the exclusive leadership of the world by the west is predicted by Dr. Herbert A. Miller, noted American sociologist, who sees "the rise of Asia appearing above the horizon."

Dr. Miller believes that there will be a certain amount of chaos attending the changes which will take place in western institutions, but that, "the pains will be only those of the birth of cosmopolitanism from its parents, isolation and civilization."

A third of a century ago President Theodore Roosevelt pointed out that the tide of civilization has flowed steadily westward since the beginning of history. Domination flowed from Egypt across the Mediterranean to Rome and from Rome to the races dwelling on the Atlantic coast of Europe. From thence it crossed the Atlantic into America.

Now it is flowing still more strongly, accelerated by modern methods of communication and travel. Japan has already become one of the most modern and progressive nations of the world and the influence of the model cities and communities on the coast of China and Manchuria, such as Dairen, Shanghai, Tsingtao and Hongkong, is gradually percolating back through the vast areas of eastern Asia.

The ability of the Chinese and Japanese to assimilate modern education and ideas has been fully demonstrated. Asia is as rich in natural resources as the other continents. It has as rich an historical background of accomplishment as any other section of the world.

It is, therefore, to be anticipated that the tide of empire will continue its westward flow until the Pacific ocean, bordered by the United States, Canada and Mexico on one side and by Japan and China on the other, will carry the world's largest interchange of commerce and thought.

When that time arrives world domination will have passed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, because the less than half billion population of the nations bordering the former will be more than doubled by the approximately billion people of the nations lying around the Pacific.

This may not come in one century, or even two, but it is clearly on the way. The United States, during the years of rearrangement and readjustment, and when the time of world modernization has been reached, will occupy the most advantageous position of any nation. Stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it will border on both the old and the new centers of human activity and through its broad length, and to and from its ports, will flow the greater part of the commerce of the world.

One good thing about chain gangs—they are easy to keep off of.

Why is it called a graduated tax? Nothing that dumb could graduate.

They don't all work that way. Tammany's machine makes jobs for 148,000.

A civilized land is one in which the strong have nice legal ways to devour the weak.

It is a crime to dodge the income tax, if the government wants you for something else.

A world economic conference can't be prepared in a day. It takes time for Europe to stack the cards.

Mayor O'Brien says his son graduated "with cum laude." And, as we remember it, in spite of the la grippe.

It pays to live right. When a great banker dodges income tax, he doesn't suffer like the wicked Capone.

This efficient age! Huh! It takes 3,000 farmers to prevent a foreclosure, and one hero used to do it in Act IV.

The Japs won't lose much by getting out of the League. They aren't greatly interested in the art of bluffing, anyway.

A scientist says city people have better memories. Well, they must remember 36493W instead of saying: "Gimme Jones' store."

Japan may quit the League, but she won't be hateful about it. She'll still take care of the mandate territory entrusted to her by the League.

Effect on Creditors and Debtors Of Amendment to Bankruptcy Act Analyzed by Leading Atlanta Lawyer

Editor Constitution: The amendment to the bankruptcy act approved by congress March 3 covers three subjects:

(1) The relief of individual debtors who are insolvent or unable to pay their debts as they mature;

(2) Farmers similarly situated; and,

(3) The reorganization of railroads engaged in interstate commerce where they likewise are insolvent or unable to pay their debts as they mature.

The amendment did not include the several drafts proposed before congress for the relief of corporations. The different views could not be reconciled in time to include this in the general plan of relief before congress came to an end. However, the relief proposed for corporations desiring to propose compositions or extensions was very similar to that enacted in behalf of individuals. It may be assumed, therefore, that this plan of legislation will be completed at the special session of congress, which meets today, and that in a very short while corporations unable to meet their debts as they mature will be able to obtain the extension similar to those now allowed individuals, but probably on somewhat different terms.

Relief for the Indidual.

A petitioner who desires to propose a composition or extension of time for payment of his debts is no longer called a bankrupt. He is designated as a debtor. He never becomes a bankrupt if the plan of composition or extension is consummated. He will be a bankrupt only if he is so adjudicated and his estate liquidated as such. Petitioners who are never so adjudicated will escape, therefore, the designation as "bankrupts."

The term "debt" has been extended to include all claims of whatever character against the debtor or his property, including a claim for future rent, whether or not such claims would otherwise constitute provable claims. The term "creditor," for the purposes of an extension proposal, includes all holders of claims of whatever character against the debtor or his property, including a claim for future rent, and also including secured creditors or creditors holding mortgages, loan deeds or other evidences of security.

Proposals of composition or extension are confirmed only after acceptance in writing by a majority in number of all creditors whose claims, if unsecured, have been allowed, or, if secured are to be affected by the extension proposals; and the number must represent a majority in amount of such claims.

"Such a proposal will be confirmed if found to include an equitable and feasible method of liquidation for secured creditors whose claims are affected, and of financial rehabilitation for the debtor, and is for the best interests of all creditors;" subject, of course, to compliance with the general rules already in force.

This means that the plan of payment included in the extension agreement must be one that the debtor, considering his income and financial condition, can be reasonably expected to meet.

"The terms of an extension proposal may extend the time of payment of either or both unsecured debts and secured debts . . . and may provide for priority of payments to be made during the period of extension as between secured and unsecured creditors." The terms may provide for payments on account and for supervisory control over the debtor's business or affairs during the extension period by a creditors' committee or otherwise.

Special provision is made that such an extension or composition shall not reduce the amount of or impair the lien of any secured creditor, but shall affect only the time and method of its liquidation. The period of extension seems to be left to the discretion of the court and the creditors.

At the first meeting of the creditors, a trustee may be nominated, but he is not appointed unless the debtor fails to comply with the terms required of him. One of the terms is that the debtor shall indemnify the estate against loss during the extension period.

No order of liquidation or adjudication may be entered under the amendment in any proceeding by or against a wage earner or farmer except by his consent. This simply means that these composition and extension proposals cannot be forced on a wage earner or farmer.

When the court confirms an extension proposal, it is binding upon both secured and unsecured creditors, and secured creditors may not foreclose mortgages, loan deeds, sell under powers of sale or otherwise undertake to foreclose any kind of lien, except as permitted by the court. They may be enjoined, if they undertake such, without court permission.

Position of Landlords.

Landlords and tenants are particularly interested in that feature of the amendment which now relieves a tenant proceeding under the amendment from liability for future rent, and at the same time makes a claim for future rent provable. Prior to the amendment, as held by most courts, a tenant could not secure a discharge from his obligation for future rents under a lease contract, and a landlord could not prove his claim for such future rent installments. Now claims for future rent installments in such cases may be proven as other unliquidated claims against the debtor.

While this seems to apply under the amendment passed only to individual tenants, the same provision will likely be inserted in the amendment providing for extension proposals for corporations, when passed.

A most important point is the provision that the extension period allowed a main debtor shall also extend to the obligations of persons secondarily liable. This means that if a debtor petitions for an extension, and he owes a note indorsed by others, the indorsers on his notes will get the benefit of the extension, and that the note holder may not proceed against the indorsers during the extension period. All the indorsers have to do, if the holder undertakes to sue them during the extension period, is to file a plea that such extension proceeding is pending in behalf of the main debtor. This will relieve, from pressure by note holders, many people who have indorsed notes for friends who are unable to pay them. At the same time, it does not defeat the debt or put the holder where he cannot ultimately get his money. It simply provides that it may be paid to him under the reasonable terms of the extension provision.

Relief for the Farmer.

The provisions in behalf of the farmer are very similar to those set up for the individual. However, different machinery is provided. For instance, where 15 farmers in a county certify that they intend to file petitions, a special officer is appointed to act as a supervising conciliation commissioner. This means that he looks after the details of the extension, if granted, so that the creditors, secured and unsecured, may be protected; the debtor is given an opportunity to work out his problems, and no undue advantage is taken by the debtor of the privileges given.

Summary.

Apparently, this amendment will:

(a) Afford a more flexible and less embarrassing plan of relief for debtors than the old bankruptcy method.

(b) Give debtors a fair chance to work out of debt without becoming bankrupts.

(c) Give creditors a better chance of realizing on their claim.

(d) Prove acceptable to honest debtors asking only for terms they can meet, as well as to fair-minded creditors, who would prefer for the debtor to have such terms rather than cancel his debts in bankruptcy.

(e) Prevent mortgage and other foreclosures while debtors are working out of their debts under extensions granted, and at the same time preserve the lien rights of secured creditors.

A DEFINITION OF FASCISM

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN,
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

Hitler's coming to power in Germany means a good deal more than torchlight parades, nocturnal assassinations and the complete suppression of political freedom for his opponents. These things are merely the sensational side issues of a central reality, the meaning of which is liable to escape us in the astounding spectacle of seething passions, blaring brass bands and the stentorian bellowing in the market place.

The economic situation in Germany had reached a point where either socialism or fascism had become inevitable. The two were about evenly matched and were gradually drawing the other parties within their respective spheres of influence. To prevent socialism from taking the destiny of the German people in its hands, President Hindenburg, who had been elected with the aid of the social-democrats, called their adversary, Hitler, to the chancelorship.

The Hitlerites did not conquer power. It was handed to them. However that may the fact remains that Hitler is in power today.

Hitlerism though is not the final solution of the German situation. Yet there seems no doubt at the present moment that Germany must pass through the experience of fascism before she finally resumes her march—probably with one of those violent bounds known in history as a revolution—towards the goal of genuine democracy.

What has happened in Germany appears of paramount importance to ourselves, for the reason that we seem unconsciously turning up the same or a similar road. I am referring to the tendencies discernible or rather patent in the United States in the economic realm.

What we see is this: Under the impact of the economic crisis the great business trusts and the banks are increasingly turning to and leaning on the government for aid and support. In the case of America, Canada, Italy, Britain, France, the Scandinavian countries and Spain, the state is obliged to accord support to the banks and to big business. Having accorded aid, the state demands a share in their control. She places them virtually under her protection and tutelage. The result is that the power of the state in these countries is growing to a magnitude, an almightiness I would almost say, that nobody could have foreseen.

In the past the state was sovereign to be sure, but it was a purely political sovereignty. The modern state has become banker, manufacturer, merchant, common carrier, employer. In other words the state is no longer a purely political institution, but it is becoming the supreme arbiter in every department of life.

Now the electoral system in vogue in democratic countries like ours and as was the case formerly in Italy detracts from this absoluteness of the state. In these days when prompt and important decisions impose themselves, democratic discussion is termed a weakness. It produces hesitation, parliamentary delays. Persuasive argument is too slow in these days. It hampers the state's business. Hence the tendency on the part of the state to place its sole reliance on one powerful political party. Hence the call for national governments, for concentration cabinets, for dictatorial powers.

Yet the state, and this means, of course, for the moment the party in power, charged with the immense tasks which the economic situation calls her to perform, seeks a rock on which to build, a dependable basis at all times and in all circumstances. Parliaments, the fragmentation of political parties, an independent press being a free tribunal of discussion and criticism, are things that hamper the state in her new tasks. She therefore inclines to have recourse to one group only and logically strengthens that group to the discrimination of other groups, until the other groups are finally without influence and without strength.

That is fascism. Under fascism everything is subjugated to the interest of the state. Fascism cannot permit a free press because it cannot permit discussion of its methods. It can tolerate parliaments only in the form of decoration and rubber stamps. It cannot permit labor to organize, for that would imply that labor had a right to aspire to conditions which differ from those created and maintained by the state. To be consistent it must impose its own educational program. It must not permit an interpretation of history that would deflect from the sanctity of the state, which is the end and the aim of all things.

In one word fascism demands a single-willed nation, no oppositional factors in political and economic life, no conflict of interests between capital and labor but a community of interests.

This, let it be well understood, is the theory of fascism. By the ruthless employment of force the fascist state makes it appear that this theory is workable. In theory fascism has risen above the political parties. In reality it has succeeded to eliminate all political parties but one. This one political party runs the state. The interests of other groups or classes are subordinated to the interests of one group of class.

* * * *

I said before that fascism is not the final solution. I say this because fascism, instead of eliminating class contrasts in society, as liberalism seeks to effect, accentuates them. Just because liberals and socialists are silent in Italy and will be silent in Germany tomorrow it does not mean that they do not exist. The fascist state silences the opposition and then pretends that it represents the collectivity.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

Speaking of Values.

That is just what everybody is speaking about, and worrying about. Because values are changing so rapidly, no one is certain of the value of anything he has. This is especially true at the time I am writing, because all of the commercial exchanges are closed, and the useful function of such exchanges is to tell the people the value of things which they possess, or may want. Even the exchange has to keep its tape moving pretty rapidly to keep up with the variations in these values. How does the exchange know? The exchange is the place where properties are bought and sold, and it registers what a given property can be sold for at a given time.

Of course, I am talking about commercial values. That is always a selling value. It is not what it is worth to you, but what it is worth to other people. That suggests to me a very real distinction in values, which I would call "commercial" values, and "personal" values. You own a house. What is it worth? If it is for sale, its worth depends upon what other people think it is worth. If it is your home, vocal with the tenderest memories and permeated with sacred associations, its value is determined by you, and cannot be estimated by what others are willing to pay for it. So a "commercial" value is what property is worth to other people, but a "personal" value is what it is worth to you. It is a "selling" or a "keeping" value.

Market Values.

It would be an interesting game, in this period of fluctuating commercial values, to take an inventory of what you have and see how much of what you possess is dependent for its value upon the quotations of the market and how much is immune from its mad moods. Look at your books. If you are a collector of rare books, their value depends upon the appraisement of others, and is determined by the market. But if their worth to you is in terms of literature or artistic beauty, the fluctuations of the market can neither add nor detract from their value. This distinction holds good also in appraising your furniture. Is its value subject to the fluctuations of the "fashion," which is another name for the "market" in that realm? Then a change in the fashion from one "period" to another will destroy the demand of the market, and your household goods will deteriorate in value. But if it is your taste, and your sense of comfort and satisfaction which has furnished your home, no changing fashion of the market can subtract anything from this personal wealth.

This principle of whether your sense of values is dependent upon the appraisement of others or upon yourself, ramifies into every realm of life. How often we hear it said, in rather self-superior tones, that the real wealth of life is to be found in one's friends? But even here we will find the distinction, which our question raises, does the value of your friends depend upon what others think of them, or upon what you think of them? Are they "business" friends, whose association have a commercial value? Then how quickly their "market" values deteriorates with a business failure. Or are they political friends, whose acquaintance opens doors of advancement and privileges? If so, a political campaign which turns them into "lame ducks" will rob you of your wealth. Of course, there are "social" friends whose cordiality gives you entre to preferred homes and whose smile is an open sesame to desirable circles. So soon as such friends lose their social prestige, their "market" value depreciates and your social assets diminish. But real friends are those who have won your confidence, admiration and love, and this spiritual wealth is yours, unaffected by the rise or fall of the commercial, social, or political market.

Stabilizing Values.

The deep anxiety of the commercial world today is to stabilize values. Plans and enterprises all over the world halt and hesitate because no one knows tonight what is the value of the gold dollar. This uncertainty is not only a deterrent to business recovery but a wear and tear on the nerves. No man knows what are assets and what are liabilities. It is because of the unknown quantity of what other people will consider valuable. The banks could open at once, if we could be sure that everybody would believe in their solvency. So the value of one's deposits, stocks and bonds all depend upon what others think of banks and corporations.

On the other hand, these "personal" values, dependent alone upon what they are worth to me, are stabilized. They are the treasures which moth and rust cannot consume, and which thieves cannot steal. So we might learn this lesson from these trying financial days: the wise man will put the greatest part of his wealth in those values which are not dependent upon the changes of the market. I do not mean for a moment that you can completely divorce the "commercial" values from the "personal" values. Commercial values are often a necessary means toward personal values. My point is that the commercial values should be viewed not as an end, but as a means toward the acquisition of what I have called the personal values.

The man today who has his purchasing power reduced to the bare necessities but who has education, books, appreciation of pictures and music, the gathered wealth of experiences in travel, broad interests and sympathies, and friends of congenial thought and taste and ideals, is rich. He is the man who has builded his house upon a rock, and the rains may come and the winds may blow but it will stand.

Methodist Pastor Suggests Tax Board Of Adjustment To Relieve the Poor

Editor Constitution: Excellent people may be without conscience on the matters that afflict their neighbors most seriously. For instance, many of our best grandparents could see no wrong in slavery. The same lack of intelligent conviction is true of democratic government. Cruel wrongs may afflict citizens, while executives, law-makers and even judges seem to be oblivious to the fact. Even ancient wrongs are present-day moralities. Officers frequently enforce laws and seem utterly blind to the fact that they ought to be changed for the sake of humanity.

This is eminently true regarding our collecting of taxes in thousands of cases. The unfortunate are treated as if they were shameless criminals and the government helps to make paupers to be supported with charity funds by its stupid and heartless dealing with many who, for no fault of their own, cannot help themselves.

It is, of course, admitted that if property holders are extravagant or refuse to work they should suffer just penalty, but what of the honest and hardworking citizen whom age or affliction has reduced to penury? The following is an actual case that might be duplicated many times:

The man is 70 years of age. He had been prosperous. He paid his taxes for some 50 years. He is an upright citizen. The depression has reduced his business to practically nothing. He had an automobile accident 18 months ago that caused him heavy expense and greatly interferred with his daily avocation for a year or more. A faithful, cultured wife is near his age and by no means strong. They have an invalid daughter, widowed, and a grandchild in their home. They live in the second story of a second-hand furniture store in a part of the city where property has slumped almost to the bottom.

It is impossible for this citizen to pay city, state and county taxes. A fi.fa. has been issued and, with hundreds of similar fi. fa.s, has been sold to a capitalistic company for money to take care of certain city expenses. This means, of course, that charity must take care of the taxes or this unproductive piece of property must be sold and the family turned out of doors to be objects of charity.

That fi. fa. hangs like the sword of Damocles over the head of these good citizens. Greedy cormorants stand around and eagerly wait to swallow up the last vestige of an old couple's earthly possessions. How many times have these birds of prey gobbled down and grown fat after this fashion? Property worth several thousand, they seize for several hundred.

This is law; this is justice in the great city of Atlanta, in the state of Georgia and under the Stars and Stripes! Money so collected goes to pay employes of the government from $500 to $12,000 a year.

The thing looks inconceivable. I venture to say there is scarcely a man or woman in the state on the leanest salary who would have the heart to stand by and see it done if the money came directly to him or her, but where it goes into a common till and is distributed through other hands, wisdom is blind and conscience is dead.

Is this the land of the free and the home of the brave? Is this the spirit of America? Is it brotherhood? Is this Christianity?

Is it Judaism? Certainly Nehemiah acted very differently when, with permission of Artaxeres, he went to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem and right the wrongs which the tax gatherers and the rich had committed against their brethren. Preachers and public officials need to re-read this Old Testament—governor and reformer. He rebuked injustice with broadsides of Sinaitic thunder. And then he acted. Lands, houses, vineyards, oil, corn and even money were restored, and children sold for debt or taxes were set free.

Shall certain church properties and certain clubs of the priviliged classes be relieved in whole or in part of taxes while the poor are oppressed? Dare we continue to legalize cruelty? The afflicted stretch their hands and cry out to the Lord of Saboath. Will He not hear and judge our land?

Shall we not so change our laws as to have a board of adjustment who will be authorized to give due and kindly consideration to such cases as the one described above? Why not so empower tax committees and commissioners?

Day of National Prayer For Solution of Problems Suggested by Atlantan

Editor Constitution: It was a wonderful thing for President Roosevelt to call his cabinet together for a season of prayer just before assuming the duties of the important office to which he had been elected, and I appreciate your editorial in Sunday's issue under the caption, "Prayers of the Righteous." We are fortunate in that we have a leader who seeks the aid of Almighty God before entering upon these important undertakings.

It seems to me that it would be a fine thing if our president would designate a day for national prayer and call on our people to engage in earnest petitions to Almighty God, asking Him to direct our leaders aright in their efforts to lift the burdens that bear so heavily on us at this time. This, of course, has been done in the past and the united prayers of the nation were answered.

In 1863 President Lincoln issued a proclamation calling for national prayer and humiliation, and April 30, 1863, was designated and set apart "as a day of national humiliation, to abstain from their ordinary pursuits, and to unite in their several places of worship and devotion to the humble discharge of the religious duties proper to that solemn occasion."

A more recent proof of God's interest in the affairs of the world was evidenced in the spring of 1918 when it seemed that the German army would march into Paris. Just as Abraham Lincoln in time of stress called the nation to a day of prayer, so King George V set aside a day of national prayer and supplication, followed by the president of the United States, the premiers of Canada, Newfoundland and other outposts of the British empire, prayed for God's help, that the allies might be given the victory. If we are correctly informed, the allies never lost a foot of ground after that day of international prayer.

Congress Should Limit Banks to Banking Business Holds This Atlantan

Editor Constitution: Your ringing editorial, "Not Far Enough," is straight from the shoulder, and hits the twin beast right in the eye!

We hope every member of the Georgia delegation in congress will read this editorial, and act.

May congress go far enough to completely divorce the banks and the investment companies.

By all means, congress should limit the banks to the banking business, and hold the investment companies to their own business of dealing in securiness.

500,00 Nazi "Storm Troopers" Once More Making Standing Army Of Germany Largest in World

General Weygand, Chief of French General Staff, Says Germany Can Muster Million Men Over Night.

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN,
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

BERLIN, March 4.—Germany has once again the largest army of Europe. The theory of General Weygand, chief of the French general staff, that the half million Hitlerite "storm-troopers" can at a moment's notice be turned into a regular fighting force has been demonstrated to be correct. Through Hitler's coming to power, the reichswehr, Germany's official army of 100,000 men stands no longer alone. It is flanked on one side by 500,000 brown shirts and on the other by 200,000 steel helmets, 100,000 members of the Kyfhaueser Society of ex-combatants and other smaller groups of semi-military formation.

It is true that the one million men at present under arms have no artillery, but the French staff considers that the advanced technique of aeronautics in Germany makes the reichswehr alone potentially the most formidable striking force in the world. One of the reichswehr generals, Von Groener, has worked out a plan of war in which the air force largely takes the place of artillery.

The confidence of the new regime in its military invulnerability is evident in the revival of the well-known slogans of the imperial regime.

"Deutschland Ueber Alles" thunders through the streets of Berlin and Potsdam as in the hectic days of August, 1914. The nationalist papers talk once more of "Germany's place in the sun." An artificial fever of expectation is being worked up. The Angriff, Hitler's life-organ, now official government paper, says that Germany will soon claim her rights and will not be denied her rights this time.

Restitution of Colonies.

The Hugenberg press, comprising 237 daily and weekly newspapers, which is an organization that also controls 1,200 motion picture houses in Germany, has launched a campaign for the restitution of Germany's colonies, Kenya, Tanganyka, Camaroun, Togoland, the Caroline Islands. "Germany must have her colonies back within a year!" exclaims Herr Hugenberg in a signed editorial.

Not only is the statue of Frederick the Great draped with a ribbon in the old royal colors with inscription that "Germany will be Germany again!" but Herr Goehring, the right-hand man of Hitler, speaking before the microphone during one of the mammoth parades, exclaimed: "I see Frederick the Great rising from his pedestal and wave a hand of welcome to our immortal Fuehrer (Leader Hitler), and I hear him say: 'You have saved Germany. You have revived the ancient Teutonic spirit. The Armistice is over. Germany moves ahead!"

Goehring's voice broadcast in all the parks and along the route of march of the nazi parade exhorted the troops to be ready for great sacrifices, "but remember," he exclaimed, "you have never been defeated. You were stabbed in the back in 1918 by liberal traitors, by Jewish speculators, by the republican scum and the Moscow rabble at home."

As part of the Hitlerite propaganda, an old German legend has been revived, which more than once served to put new heart in the Kaiser's legions during the war.

A Message of Conquest.

On the Kyfhaueser mountain, after which the great ex-service men's union is named, stands a ruined castle which dates from the 13th century. This castle is said to be inhabited or haunted by the spirit of the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, the Red Beard, under whose reign the first German empire extended over the better part of Europe. The legend has it that once every 10 years the ghost of Barbarossa awakens from slumber in the Kyfhaueser castle and climbs to the roof of one of the towers. Frederick always appears in a thunderstorm. There he stands, an awesome apparition. Violet bolts of lightning flash about his venerable head. His beard has grown long and white. His great two-edged sword drags and rattles against the crumpling flagstones of the parapet.

From the topmost balcony the spirit of Frederick then surveys the German land. He turns his gaze from east to west, north and south. If the Teutonic territory is free of enemies he gives a shout of joy and goes back to sleep for another 10 years. Back in 1917, when he saw the Teutonic legions march upon the Warsaw of the Czars, when the Italians were being pressed back and German taubes flew in the Flemish sky and above France, the imperial ghost was reassured that all was well with the fatherland. But he has not been seen since.

Now he is back. The Hitler papers have revived him. He is, of course, anxiously scanning the horizon to see the brown shirts and their Fuehrer make preparations to exalt Teutonic renown as in days of yore. And in chorus the nazi press replies: "Yes, Frederick, we are ready. Bald geht's los! Soon we'll be on our way!"

Cites Beneficial Results Of Roosevelt's Leadership

Editor Constitution: Not since the foundation of this republic has any of its leaders seized the reins of government more resolutely or with a more determined purpose to correct the national ills that we so long have borne than has President Roosevelt.

The beneficial effect already produced upon approximately every citizen—no matter how humble or how exalted his station—has been magical, replacing fear with courage and despair with confidence.

Your analytical review and comments upon the address were masterly, and in giving them to your readers a distinct and valuable public service was rendered.

Basically sound as America is, offering fertile fields beneath our feet, healthful airs around and smiling skies o'erhead, it requires no prophetic ken to visualize her early redemption from the money changers who have defiled and sought to pull down the pillars of her commercial temple, quickly to be followed by the economic peace and commercial prosperity which God in His infinite wisdom and bounty intended that she should enjoy.

Georgia Farmer Lays Woes of Agricultural Interests to the Tariff

Editor Constitution: You have given so many a little space in your paper to express their ideas on the depression that is sweeping the country, I would be glad if you would give me, an ignorant farmer, space to express mine. Christ told His apostles and His hearers that a good tree could not bring forth corrupt fruit, neither could a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit, and every tree would be known by its fruits, so taking the Lord's ruling on questions concerning our welfare, the peace and happiness of our people, we will have to admit that our lawmakers have not set out good trees, and I want to mention one of these corrupt trees—the high tariff.

The tariff we are living under today is destructive. The farmers are the biggest distributors of circulating money of all classes in the world and this foreign trade is what boosted the price of the farmers' products and which gave them a little surplus money to spend to the different classes of trade.

I am a farmer and know them as a class and all they want is a fair deal. They want an open market to the world for their products and only a foreign demand will ever boost the United States farm products to a living scale price.

Some industries that have prospered through this game of high tariff have set up a howl. Buy American steel, buy American products, float bonds, give the needy free flour, free cotton to make wearing apparel for the needy. They do not tell the public that some one has to pay for these government gifts.

Some of these tariff greeds sell their products to a foreign nation cheaper than to their home people. Every industry should be willing to stand on the merits of its own products and the one that undertakes to rob the public through high tariffs is not worthy of the public patronage for his product. It destroys public honesty, breeds criminality and has increased our crime to a wolf-destroying record.

Atlanta Lawyer Outlines Difficulties Surrounding Ban on Concealed Arms

Editor Constitution: Of course the carrying of concealed weapons might be made a "capital" offense but perhaps a better way of preventing those murders committed by the sudden production of concealed pistols is by forbidding the sale and possession of firearms capable of being concealed on the person.

It seems according to the late lamented Judge Lumpkin, who wrote the decision in the supreme court case of Strickland vs. State in October, 1911, (137 Georgia, Page 1, 172 S. E.-260) that our laws guaranteeing to all persons, criminal and otherwise, the right to possess pistols, came about because James II, king of England, arbitrarily disarmed the Protestant population and quartered Catholic soldiers among the people, thereby reversing with a vengeance the policies of Lord Cromwell.

For this and similar reasons the several states of the union refused in 1789 to ratify the present federal constitution until federal powers were limited by the second amendment, providing:

"I well regulated militia being necessary to the security of the free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

Doubtless not so much for fear of the papacy as of the Indians, or the slaves, the earliest Georgia constitutions limited the state legislature as follows:

"The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed but the general assembly shall have power to prescribe the manner in which arms shall be borne."

Whatever the justification, this state constitutional limitation prevents the enactment by our Georgia legislature of valid laws preventing the possession of firearms by criminals and their friends.

Even if the federal government should control interstate commerce in pistols, it seems inevitable that our state constitutions must be amended so as to allow uniform state laws providing that the right to keep and bear arms shall not extend to the type of deadly firearms capable of concealment on the person for illegal purposes. Such amendments being accomplished, within a few years, the millions of pistols impracticable and unused except for manslaughter could be replaced by rifles useful either for "home" defense or "peaceful revolutions," such as the "embattled farmers" staged at Lexington and "Bunker Hill."

Thinks "Short" Selling Of All Farm Products Should Be Legally Stopped

Editor Constitution: Don't you think that as long as speculators are allowed to sell stocks and farm products "short" this depression is going to continue on forever?

All of this trouble has been brought on by gambling on the stock exchange and until that is brought under control we will never get back to normal.

If President-elect Roosevelt could devise some way of compelling the stock exchanges from making short sales and also to discontinue marginal accounts for all stocks selling under $50 per share and could stop short sale of farm products of all kinds I believe the bank failures would cease and people would have more faith in the future.

Protests Proposed Change In School Textbooks

Editor Constitution: A committee from the legislature is thrashing it out as to whether we shall have a change in the textbooks for the coming term of school.

Most sensible parents say no, most emphatically no; we need no change at this time.

Many of us owe bills and taxes that we are unable to meet and then for the school board or committee to try to foist upon the suffering such a damnable order is preposterous to say the least.

The Happenings of The Church World

BY HERMAN L. TURNER,
Pastor, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The international statistics of the Salvation Army for the past year show that during the year the Army supplied 34,670,115 meals to destitute people; provided sleeping accommodations for 12,147,299, and secured jobs for 286,082 of the 674,365 people who made application at their labor bureaus, while 340,839 men found shelter and employment in their workshops, woodyards, etc.

The regular annual meeting of the Editorial Council of the Religous Press will be held in Washington, D. C., April 18 and 19.

"Are There Any Ministers in Sing Sing Prison?" comments an editorial with this title in The Presbyterian Banner. "There are not, nor are there any lawyers, editors, or physicians among its 1,534 inmates admitted during the past year. This speaks well for these classes, though it may provoke the comment that there are some members of all these professions that ought to be there. We may grant this and still be thankful that their record in this respect is so good. If none of these classes are there, who are behind its bars? One each of lumbermen hod-carriers, welders, crane operators, riggers, so these men also are doing well. Laborers numbered 193, office clerks 79, painters 77, mechanics 60, waiters 58, firemen 50, chauffeurs 46, musicians 25, printers 33, and so on down the list. These figures are interesting, and yet they throw little light upon the relative worth of these men, as a prison sentence is only a rough classification of the inmates of such an institution, and some are in that ought to be out, and many more are out that ought to be in. How much, also, could these figures tell if we could look beyond the externals of the men into their inner lives and hearts? The prison is a very crude approximation to social justice, but it is the best we can do at present."

Five hundred rallies in a campaign of opposition of modification or repeal of the 18th amendment will be held during the next three months under the sponsorship of the Anti-Saloon League of America. During the same period hundreds of additional meetings will be sponsored by the various state organizations. Outstanding laymen, leading ministers and friends of the cause are serving as speakers and leaders in addition to the secretaries of the dry movements.

John Masefield, England's poet-laureate now in America, states his philosophy of the depression thus, according to The Christian Century: "Change is the essence of life. One door shuts, another opens. This may well be the end of the industrial era, and now another will begin. It will take a few years to get it rolling properly, and then it will go smoothly for 100 years. After that will come another change."

A two-inch notice placed in the Columbia University Spectator brought 500 students to the classroom where 500 free Bibles were being distributed through the courtesy of the New York Bible Society. Three hours after the publication of the school paper the supply was exhausted. The university pastor reports more than 200 students turned away unsupplied. At the last distribution of Bibles, six years ago, 1,200 volumes were given to undergraduates.

Fifteen southern states, including Maryland and Missouri, some of which in slave times prohibited the education of negroes altogether and none of which had public schools for them prior to 1864, now have a total investment of $85,000,000 in negro public schools and expend for their maintenance approximately $45,000,000 a year. In the last ten years the amount invested in these schools has increased by 180 per cent and the expenditures for maintenance by 125 per cent. Contrasted with 571,000 negro children enrolled in public schools in 1877, there are now 2,289,000; the increase in the last 10 years has been 250,000. The percentage of negro illiteracy, which was given as 70 by the census of 1880, is now about 20 per cent. Public school officials of North Carolina point out that the state is now spending on its negro schools alone more than it was spending on all its schools in 1915.—The World Outlook.

According to the Japanese Advertiser, the principals of 61 private girls' schools of Tokyo propose that their 35,000 students receive military training.

The 21st annual conference of southern mountain workers will be held at Knoxville, Tenn., March 28 to 30. The secretary, Helen Dingman, of Berea College, Kentucky, announced that an interesting program has been prepared and that the sessions this year will be almost entirely devoted to the interpretation of the two southern mountain studies which have been in progress during the past two years. These are the economic and social study, conducted by federal and state agencies, and the religious study conducted by the Institute of Social and Religious Research.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, of India, is scheduled to arrive in New York March 20. He will go at once to the southland for a speaking tour, returning to New York for holy week, when he will deliver the noon-day addresses in the Majestic theater. Dr. Jones will be in Atlanta, March 27 and 28.

"Dr. Holmes Predicts Churchless Era," comments The Christian Century: "In his chapter of a symposium on 'Religion Today,' just published, Dr. John Haynes Holmes predicts a future without churches, Bibles, religious denominations or Sunday 'holy days.' 'There will be just the community, with its sacred places of the common life—here a Lincoln memorial, there a civic auditorium or open park, where men may come together in pursuit of truth and beauty.' An hour each day, he thinks, will be given to 'communal consecration.' Bibles, he believes, will be replaced by the assembled literature of all ages and peoples. 'There will be no religions as we have them today, but simply religion.'"

Dr. C. Luther Fry, a director of the Institute of Social and Religious Research, has been analyzing the contents of the latest edition of Who's Who in America, with reference to the church affiliations of the people listed in it, and brings out some interesting results. Comparing the two editions of 1911 and 1931, he says, "would seem to show that during the last decade a church connection was looked upon with increasing favor." In the later edition only 17 called themselves infidels, atheists or agnostics. Fifty-six per cent in the later as against 25 per cent in the earlier edition reported their church connection. Among actors 23 per cent, army officers 35 per cent, natural scientists 36 per cent, editors and authors 40 per cent, doctors 50 per cent and architects 51 per cent claimed some church affiliation.

Betty O'Kelley Is Selected As Uncle Remus May Queen

At the meeting of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association Mrs. J. B. Montgomery, chairman of the annual flower festival at the Wren's Nest, announced that little Miss Betty O'Kelley, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond O'Kelley, will be the queen of this year's festivities.

A letter was read from Lucien Harris Jr. thanking the Uncle Remus Memorial Association for three books presented to him by the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, making his personal collection of the Uncle Remus books complete. Mr. Harris in turn presented the Uncle Remus Memorial Association with the "Wolf Witch," a rare copy of a book written by his grandfather, Joel Chandler Harris, which is no longer being printed, and a copy of "The Countryman," a newspaper published by Mr. Harris in his early years. This paper was printed October 27, 1862, and contains an editorial written by Mr. Harris when he was a boy working in the newspaper office at Turnwold.

Mrs. Arthur Hale, hostess of the Wren's Nest, reported seven school groups among the visitors at the Wren's Nest in February.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president for life of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, and thanked them for a beautiful container of shell pink hyacinths presented to her at the meeting.

Education Head Appeals to Tax Payers To Urge Better Support of the Schools Upon Members of General Assembly

To the Taxpayers of Georgia: The teachers and school officials of Georgia most heartily agree with you that this is not a good time to talk of any increase in taxes. We no more like taxes than you do; we, ourselves, are taxpayers. Our relatives, our fathers, our brothers, are all taxpayers. Especially do we agree with you that real estate ought to be relieved of its unjust share of state and local taxes. The teachers and school officials of Georgia are unanimous in the opinion that the wise thing at this time to do would be for the state to lessen its activities in material things, and use its money in this crisis for schools and humanity. But so far there is no indication that this plan of financing meets with the approval of those who get more than half of the state's income. Hence the teachers wish to call to your attention, as citizens and taxpayers of Georgia, that there is another and greater obligation which you owe to your children. It is your solemn duty, and ours, to see to it that the children of Georgia shall not be handicapped for life by our failure today to give them the training through our schools needed for good citizenship. For four years the children of Georgia have been made to bear their unfair share of the burden of the present depression. School terms have been cut for more than half of the children of Georgia. Many of them have schools for not over six months. School efficiency has been lessened by the failure to equip our schools with those things most urgently needed to do good teaching.

The teachers of the state have been handicapped in their work by being made to bear more than their share of the burdens of the depression.

1. Their salaries for the year have been lessened, both by the cutting of the school term and by the reduction in their monthly pay. This was done in the face of the fact that the white teachers of Georgia received the lowest annual salary of any teachers in the south.

2. They have borne an unjust burden of the depression often by not having their small salaries paid promptly.

3. In many communities of the state they have borne their unjust share of the burden by having their salaries not paid at all, or by accepting script which had to be discounted at enormous, unjust rates of interest.

The school efficiency of Georgia has been greatly lessened during these last four years because the school system of the state did not receive what they were promised by Georgia. Therefore, as taxpayers of this state, you are confronted with the decision in regard to the state's action. You, and you alone, can determine what the general assembly now in session in Atlanta will do. One of three things will be obliged to happen:

1. Our general assembly must find new sources of revenue to take the place of the present tax on land and city real estate.

2. Or the general assembly must reduce the amount we are now spending on highways—more than one-half the state's income—and put part of this money to the support of schools and humanitarian activities.

3. If neither of the above is done—and you can make one of the two be done—then our children must suffer because our schools cannot remain open.

You, as honorable citizens, cannot expect the teachers longer to run the schools with no hope of pay. Which one of these things do you as a good citizen and taxpayer of Georgia favor? One of the three must happen—have a sales tax, divert highway funds or do injustice to your children by closing the schools. We believe you think more of humanity and justice to your children than of money. The decision rests with you. Let your senator and representative know that you believe in justice to the children of Georgia;

SUPT J. E. MATHIS.
Americus, Ga.
President, Georgia Education Association.

Inflation in Real Estate Is Certain To Come Soon, Says Atlanta Realtor

Editor, Constitution: A number of the larger industries and lines of business are equipped to furnish, from day to day, detailed information regarding developments, including price changes.

It so happens that in the real estate business, due to wide distribution of ownership and the great variation in values of the many classes of real property, it has been almost impossible for the average owner or prospective purchaser to arrive at a satisfactory basis of sale or purchase.

Do you not think that it would be of interest to your subscribers to know that building permits in Atlanta dropped from more than $27,000,000 in 1928 to less than $2,000,000 in 1932? Permits issued since January 1, 1933, are at the rate of less than $500,000 per year, and this includes all repairs, fire damage, etc.

Building construction costs, according to Engineering News Record, rose from a basis of 100 in 1913 to 209.46 in 1929 and then declined to 152.20 in 1932. They stand at 159.30 for February, 1933.

Information furnished by the city building inspector's office in Atlanta shows that for the past several months permits have been issued for wrecking more old buildings than for new ones to be built.

Many of us believe that we are going to have considerable inflation and that real estate will, without a doubt, share in any general advance.

Home ownership is going to be popular in the future and you will do your readers a real service if you will give them information at a time when it may save them a great deal on any purchase they may make.

JOHN J. THOMPSON.

POLING TO ADDRESS CHURCH MEETING HERE

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York city, will be the principal speaker at the three-day meeting of the Georgia State Christian Endeavor to be held at the Peachtree Presbyterian church, on April 21, 22 and 23, according to announcement by the Atlanta Convention and Tourist Bureau.

The Georgia State Christian Endeavor is interdenominational with 25 societies in Atlanta at the Baptist, Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

In addition to Dr. Poling, other speakers include Dr. H. H. Sweet, Louisville, Ky.; Dr. Sherwood, of Boston, and other nationally known leaders.

INSURANCE EXPERT TO ADDRESS JAYCEES

Michael Kley, representing the welfare division of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York city, will be the principal speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at noon Thursday in the Ansley hotel.

"The People and the Community—What the Federal Census Figures Tell Us About Atlanta," will be the subject of Mr. Kley's address. He is a student of population and social welfare problems and has been abroad several times for the United States government.

SPRIGHTLY DANCES TO FOLLOW TALK BY RUTH ST. DENIS

At the conclusion of her lecture here at the Woman's Club auditorium Monday evening on "The Philosophy and Dance of the Orient," Ruth St. Denis will be seen in a group of her most famous dances, including "The White Madonna," a sprightly and gay "Bas-Relief Figure from Angkor-Vat," and the East Indian "Dance of the Black and Gold Sari."

Alexander Alexay, her assisting artist, will be heard in piano compositions by Bach-St. Seans, Liszt, Brahms, Chopin and the American Mana-Zucca, in addition to playing the dance accompaniments.

Tickets for the engagement may be obtained from the Boots Walker Library at J. P. Allen's or from any of the Atlanta Dance-Crafters as well as from the Southern Musical Bureau in the Mortgage Guarantee building, at prices ranging from 50c to $1.

SCHOOL CHILDREN IN PUBLIC CONCERT HERE WEDNESDAY

An unusual feature will be the program of the Atlanta Music Club Wednesday—a choral program presenting choruses from various city schools given under direction of L. G. Nilson, director of music in the Atlanta schools, and Miss Ruth Weegand, assistant director.

The program was conceived by Mrs. Walter H. Bedard, chairman of the study course programs, and Mrs. Howard Claude Smith Jr., president of the club. The program Wednesday is open to the public, and everyone interested is invited to attend. The parents and friends of the children on the program will be honor guests of the club.

LEWIS, WEST TO SPEAK AT MOREHOUSE CHAPEL

Dr. Lloyd Overton Lewis, of the department of philosophy of Morehouse College, will be the speaker at the morning chapel service in Sale hall today.

On Wednesday the morning chapel will have a speaker of unusual interest, Don West, of the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., who will speak on "Some Experiences of the Mountain Whites." The Thursday morning chapel service will be under the auspices of the fellowship of reconciliation, an organization designed to promote and further the cause of world peace.

DR. E. STANLEY JONES WILL LECTURE HERE

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, famous missionary in India, who is making a speaking tour of five of the important cities of the south, will speak in Atlanta March 27-28. His first engagement will be a three-hour conference with the ministers of all denominations of Atlanta and contiguous territory, which will be held on the first day at the First Baptist church. On the evening of March 27, at the city auditorium, Dr. Jones will address a mass meeting of the church people of Atlanta and from communities all over Georgia. The closing meeting of the series will be a meeting for officers of churches, both men and women, to be held at noon on Tuesday, the 28th.

House Repeal Resolution Flayed by Atlanta Clergy

NOTE: This is another in the series of articles on prohibition repeal prepared by the committee on prohibition of the Christian Council of Atlanta. These articles appear exclusively in The Constitution, and another will be printed at an early date.

"Thou God of all peoples and of all lands, set in motion divine influence that shall flow like ocean tides around the world until all shall be bathed in their floods and the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea."

The prayer of the chaplain ended, the advocates of legalized liquor in the house of representatives hastened to railroad through the amendment which would give the seal of the government's indorsement to, and participation in, the liquor business, and open wide the door to the return of the saloon with all its hideous characteristics.

This wretched piece of business was not transacted in some hellish brothel or other devil's work-shop. It was not perpetrated in some place where shame is accustomed to sit, where ribaldry makes mockery of morals and depravity sportively flaunts decency.

That would have been an appropriate setting for a job of this sort.

But emanating from its natural environs would hardly commend the proposal to decent citizens whose suffrage is essential to the consummation of the purpose in hand.

And so not only must the design be cloaked with respectability but even the blessing of the Almighty invoked upon the enterprise.

The shocking record will stand to shame us in the years to come, that this proposal was advanced in the capital city of the nation, in the national congress and at a session which appropriated to itself the dignity and solemnity and sacredness of prayer.

A Christian minister approaches the throne to bespeak for the legislators "divine influences that shall flow like ocean tides," and immediately there ensues a proposal to open the flood-gates to traffic in liquor—to remove the federal government's condemnation of that ancient curse and prepare the way for the restoration of the traffic to a place in the household of legitimate business.

At least the country might have been spared the gratuitous effrontery of initiating such a dastardly deed with prayer.

Well did the distinguished member from Oklahoma (Mr. Garber) declare: "This has been a sad day for the people of this country. Our standards have been lowered. The Christian citizenry of the country has been humiliated and the roll call just taken should have been accompanied by cathedral bell solemnity in the presence of such a great tragedy."

Thoughtful men are saying that our economic distress is the direct result of our moral and spiritual bankruptcy.

Surely if the citizenry of the nation approves the resolution adopted by the congress we are indeed a people who have lost their moral perceptions and spiritual sensibilities.

What an opportunity the occasion affords for spiritual revival, for a reaffirmation of our respect for moral principles!

In this dark hour, when all physical values have collapsed, millions of our people in poverty, and human help unavailing to bring relief and restore order, shall we be guilty of the criminal folly of removing the nation's condemnation of the liquor business? In these, of all times, shall we, by our vote, remove the brand of outlaw and restore the liquor business to a place among decent enterprises?

Surely not. Shall we not rather reaffirm our faith in the God of our fathers and pledge anew our purpose to relentlessly resist all that pollutes character, debauches government and destroys human happiness?

By our vote the world shall know us and we shall know ourselves. We shall write our own sentence. We shall determine whether the years immediately ahead will witness further retrogression or the onward march of a self-respecting people to their glorious destiny.

Political parties have betrayed the people through their league with the liquor interests and their misrepresentation of the true sentiments of the American people—through their cowardly surrender to the daring criminals who have demanded the repeal of the prohibition law. But the American people have not ratified this outrageous program. The dictates of reason forbid that they should.

Common sense and reason find expression in the following statement of Mr. Summers of the state of Washington during the pendency of the repeal resolution in the house of representatives: "The resolution now before us would decide the policy of a nation. Within the hour and without opportunity for debate or amendment we must vote for or against the return of the saloon. I am against it. The resolution does not comport with the republican nor the democratic platforms. It gives no guarantee against the old-time saloon. This resolution opens wide the door. It will pass today because a great political party has bound and gagged its members and prevented the exercise of their individual rights and judgment. Feeding the hungry and solving economic problems are pushed aside.

"The home-farm mortgage and high taxes are the twin giants that now grind our people to the quick. This resolution destroys neither of these giants of despair. It feeds both. The free flow of liquor will not lift the mortgage nor reduce taxes for the masses.

"Can you spend a dollar for drink and at the same time spend it for food?

"Seriously, can you put dollars into the till of the grocer, the butcher, the department store, the garage, the filling station and the movies by cashing the pay-check in the saloon?

"Will the saloon inject life-blood into languishing agriculture and commerce and industry?

"Will the free flow of liquor help men to secure jobs?

"Will its unlimited supply help men to house and clothe and feed their wives and helpless children and educate our youth?"

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

By N. S. Noble

To St. Pierre and Miquelon, France's North American island possessions, goes the distinction of being the second country to place a dog on any of its stamps.

Hippopotamus, ostrich, caribou, carp, antelope, seal, wild goose, wolf—these and other animals, birds and fish have been chosen to decorate issues, but postal authorities have paid very little attention to the dog.

Like the neighboring Newfoundland, first country to picture a canine, the French isles have chosen to depict a Newfoundland dog. He appears on their latest issue, a postage-due stamp.

Cats have fared even worse. The only one pictured appears on Spain's Lindbergh stamp, and there he has to share honors with the aviator, the Statue of Liberty and an airplane.

COLLECTORS' NOTES.

D. V. Hembree, R. F. D. No. 2, Roswell, Ga., writes that he has thousands of stamps to exchange and in joining The Constitution Stamp Club says that he will be glad to swap stamps with other members.

The Stamp Collectors' Club, of Leaksville, N. C., held its last meeting at the home of Miss Marjorie Tredway. Miss Tredway had charge of the program in which Lottie Frazier, Mary Huntley, Mildred Banks and Beryl Ammons took part. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Beryl Amons, with Miss Lottie Frazier in charge of the program. The subject will be "Postage Stamps."

The Tarheel Stamp Club, Winston-Salem, N. C., held a successful exhibit February 23 to 25 at the Hinkle-Lancaster book store. The club is six months old and meets weekly at 7:30 on Thursday evenings on the tenth floor of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company's building. The officers are O. M. Teague Jr., president; Frank Spencer, first vice president; Jim Norman, second vice president; Bill Eagle, secretary; Frank Horton, treasurer; Paul Ashburn, stamp expert, secretary; W. Martin, sales manager, and V. Martin, librarian.

L. Frank, Hudson & Forth Hardware Company, Punta Gorda, Fla., would like to swap stamps with club members.

Klara M. Welch, of Apalachicola, Fla., writes to ask about covers for the frigate Constitution cancels. These should be mailed in care of the Mail Clerk, Frigate Constitution, at the cities from which the collector desires cancel.

Miss Elizabeth Langford, 1202 South Lee street, Americus, Ga., writes that she is quitting the collection of foreign stamps and will emphasize United States. She would like to swap foreigns for United States with club members. Miss Langford promises prompt attention to all who write her.

Mrs. T. B. Rice, Greensboro, Ga., has many duplicates in her United States section and would like to hear from club members. She asks for information on where she can sell these duplicates. A pretty Greensboro cover was used for the letter.

Maryland will have a pretty cachet for March 25, Maryland Day, an annual legal holiday in the state. Envelopes should be of usual size, stamped with address in lower right corner. The cachet will be 2 1-2 by 3 inches. No postage dues will be accepted. Covers should carry commems as these are given to juniors and shutins. Address Cover Service "Y," Arundel hotel, Baltimore, Md.

W. R. Ellis, Tillman, S. C., has several important covers with cachets which he would like to trade for stamps prior to 1892.

Charles H. Drake, Braselton, Ga., has a large number of duplicate covers collected in the past few years which he would like to dispose of or swap for air mail stamps or Indian relics found in Georgia.

While the department seldom mentions cachets for which a charge is made, the following is so reasonable that collectors might like to receive covers. In the latter part of April, for the opening of the "nicest botanical gardens in the United States," a cachet will be used. Envelopes will be furnished, stamps applied (commemorative if requested) addressed and cachet applied and mailed for a fee of 9 cents for two covers. The covers will be numbered. Send orders to Dewey L. Suit, Box 321, Benjamin Franklin station, Washington, D. C.

Miss E. Croco, 2214 Broadway, Fort Myers, Fla., writes a letter to Jack Gordon, regarding the Gordon family. The letter will be mailed to Mr. Gordon if he will send his address to this department.

The Western Stamp Collector compliments The Constitution Stamp Corner on the new clubs being started in the south. Thanks a lot.

Eight new members have been enrolled in the College Park Stamp Club. They are Eugene Barnes, Eugene Schenck, Hardwick Johnson, Bobby Taylor, Margie Wilson, Cuthbert Killingsworth, Cary Killingsworth and Grady Sullivan. Friday night's meeting was held at the home of "Tap" Stone, 138 Lyle street, and the meeting for this week will be held Friday night with Mrs. Mary Louise Palmer, on West Hawthorn avenue.

The International Air Mail Society will sponsor a cachet April 8, commemorating the 125th anniversary of the formation of Cortland county, New York, in connection with the organization of the an air mail stamp club in the city of Cortland and a stamp exhibition. One cover will be sent without charge if addressed and stamped. Additional covers will be 5 cents each. Covers to International Air Mail Society, 1800 West Fayette street, Syracuse, N. Y.

The Stamp Collectors Club, of Atlanta, will meet on the mezzanine floor, room 209, of the Robert Fulton hotel Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. A talk will be given by D. L. Gilmore, a member from Fairburn, on "Mistakes I Have Made." All interested are invited to be present.

Announcement of nine round trips between Friedrichshafen, Germany, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, by the dirigible Graf Zeppelin has been made. Mail will be carried on all trips. This should mean many more zepps for collectors. The dates for departure from Germany are May 6, June 3, July 1, August 5, September 2, September 28, October 14 and October 28. The Graf Zeppelin will leave Brazil first on May 12 and the last sailing date will be November 2.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

Paramount Has '42nd Street' Notable for Beauties and Pep

The opening of the much-heralded production "42d Street" at the Paramount theater yesterday proved to be something more than just an opening to those who witnessed it—it was an event in local entertainment history.

Seldom has a picture captured an audience so completely as "Forty-second Street" won the theatergoers of Atlanta yesterday. Entertainment seekers will hereafter do their reckoning of entertainment in terms of "Forty-second Street" and count time from the night of the picture's debut.

Entertainment de luxe is written all over this picture, from the opening shot to the final fade-out. It's as sparkling, as up-to-date as a 1933 model on the floor of the automobile show. It's a picture for today—and tomorrow.

"Forty-second Street" is the distilled effervescent essence of Broadway—but it's more than that. It's a vivid, gripping, dramatic story of that mysterious world behind the scenes of a theater—but it doesn't stop there. It beats and pulses to the rhythm of nimble dancers' tireless feet, and the irresistible intoxication of tuneful music dispensed by the flower of metropolitan orchestras. But if you think that "Forty-second Street" is merely a musical comedy in motion picture form, you have a dozen surprises in store for you.

The drama of men and women, struggling, loving, hating—torn between the insistent demand of ambition and the longing for something finer and more lasting than anything ambition can give—is unrolled before your eyes and the spectator becomes absorbed in it as if it were not the oldest the truest drama in the world.

In addition to everything else, "Forty-second Street" brings the thrill of watching a new star make her appearance on the celluloid horizon. Ruby Keeler, talented wife of Al Jolson, is the new star's name—the sparkling, eager little sprite who plays the role of Peggy—and if it is the first time you have heard her name, it won't be the last.

It will be no news to any seasoned theatergoer that Bebe Daniels, Warner Baxter, George Brent, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks, Una Merkel, Ginger Rogers, Eddie Nugent, Robert McWade and a score of others come through with performances such as only they can give. And there are the 150 hand-picked beauties who comprise the choruses of the show that is being fashioned during the course of the picture.

Al Evans has a novel organ program entitled "Sing Off Your Blues." The short feature program is composed of "Sport Thrills," which features Eleanor Holm, swimming champion, and Fred Frame, famous auto racer. Paramount News carries interesting shots of current events.

'Me and My Gal' Fox Picture Chiefly Notable for Comedy

Crammed with sparkling pep, laughs and rollicking romance, "Me and My Gal," the Fox comedy romance, was greeted enthusiastically by Saturday's audiences at the Fox. It is played by a brilliant and competent cast, the story holds interest from beginning to end and the direction is all that could be demanded.

Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy, who have not appeared together in a picture since they were co-featured in "She Wanted a Millionaire," enact the leading roles and both give refreshing characterizations.

The story revolves around the romance of a worldly-wise cashier in a restaurant of the lower strata and a wise-cracking young detective attached to the radio car division. As the romance flourishes, the detective discovers an escaped gangster hiding in the home of his sweetheart's sister when her paralytic father-in-law, by signs made with his eyes, reveals the presence of the gangster.

'Me and My Gal" depends, for the greater part, on its comedy. The dialogue is truly amusing and a few of the situations are of side-splitting quality.

Miss Bennett and Mr. Tracy are supported by a cast that includes many favorites. Splendid work is done by J. Farrell Macdonald in the role of the irrepressible father, Marion Burns as Miss Bennett's sister, George Walsh as the escaped convict, Henry B. Walthall as the paralytic, and Noel Madison in one of the crook roles for which he is famous.

The picture was directed by Raoul Walsh and it is one of his best efforts since he transferred "The Yellow Ticket" to the screen.

Jimmy Beers, the young fellow who has made such a name for himself at the Fox organ console is again presenting something entirely different for the pleasure of his many followers, titled "Indian Legend."

The screen presentation is completed with a Harry Sweet comedy called "Heave Too," a Silly Symphony Cartoon called "The Ugly Duckling," and the usual RKO Pathe News.

Ponce de Leon Opens With 'Painted Woman'

Monday and Tuesday at the Ponce de Leon theater the feature picture will be "Painted Woman." Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon take the leading roles. Peggy Shannon is to be seen as a Singapore dance hall girl. She marries Spencer Tracy, a pearl-fisher, on a South Sea island, where she was put ashore by a trading schooner captain.

Robert Elliot, first heard of in Warner Brothers' "Lion and the Mouse," and since the star of many screen and stage productions, is the male lead in "Behind Stone Walls," coming to the Ponce de Leon theater Wednesday.

Thursday and Friday brings an air picture greater even than "Hell's Angels," Howard Hughes' "Sky Devils." The attraction for Saturday is "Hello, Trouble!" with that great outdoor star, Buck Jones.

Comedy Predominates in Week's Screen Fare

Upper right are half a dozen of the 200 beauties who are to be seen at the Paramount in "42nd Street." Lower left gives you a glimpse of Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett, who play the lead roles at the Fox in "Me and My Gal." Center is Robert Woolsey and Esther Muir as they are seen in the hilarious farce, "So This Is Africa," held over for its second week at the Rialto. And lower right is from "Second Hand Wife," at the Georgia, with Ralph Bellamy and Sally Eilers playing the leads.

Ruth St. Denis At Woman's Club Monday Night

Ruth St. Denis, one of the three greatest dancers of the past 25 years, will appear in Atlanta, at the Woman's Club auditorium, Monday night at 8:30. The noted danseuse comes under the joint sponsorship of the Atlanta Dance-Crafters and the Southern Musical Bureau. She will give a two-part program, including her lecture on "The Philosophy and Dance of the Orient," followed by a group of her most famous dances.

Tickets for the engagement, which are being offered at popular prices, may be had from members of the Dance-Crafters, at the Boots Walker Library at J. P. Allen company and at the office of the Southern Musical Bureau, 1221 Mortgage Guarantee building.

The three big names in dance annals of the past quarter century are Anna Pavlowa, Isadora Duncan and Ruth St. Denis. Miss St. Denis won her greatest fame by her studies of the centuries old dances of the Orient, many of which she presented for the first time before European and American audiences. Her dance program for Monday night includes "The White Madonna," "Bas-Relief Figure from Angkor-Vat," "Dance of the Black and Gold Sari" and groups of interpretive dances to the music of Bach, Brahms, Liszt, Chopin, etc.

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

Any Atlantans who want to see "She Done Him Wrong," that gloriously funny picture, satirizing underworld life of the Gay Nineties, with Mae West in her famous character of Diamond Lil, can do so on Monday or Tuesday of this week. It is showing at Alpha Fowler's theater in Carrollton, the Carroll. Which is only an hour away by automobile with a splendid paved highway all the way.

* * * *

This picture, you may remember, was banned in Atlanta by the local censorship board, for no reason that any critic who witnessed it at a preview could discover. It is being shown in all other towns and cities, big and little, with audiences delighted by its humor and cleverness. Manager Fowler, realizing that Carrollton is perhaps as near as it will get to Atlanta, has gone to extra trouble and expense to draw this fact to the attention of Atlanta.

* * * *

So, Monday or Tuesday night, get out the old bus, drive out the Bankhead highway for a delightful ride of about an hour, see a clever piece of screen entertainment in a comfortable and beautiful theater and drive back home again. And there is a moon mighty near the full.

* * * *

There are some exceptionally attractive screen attractions in Atlanta this week:

At the Paramount there is the highly heralded "four star" production, "42nd Street," with more lovely girls and less encumbering costumes than we've seen in many moons. To say nothing of a group of well known and popular principal players.

At Loew's Grand Lee Tracy disports in a role ideally suited to his type, that of a four-flushing, unscrupulous "Foreign Correspondent," who, when he can't find big news in Moscow, Tripoli, China or wherever, manufactures it without compunction. Una Merkel is also at her best in this offering.

At the Fox, "Me and My Gal," is mostly comedy, with a few spots of fast drama to add a punch. Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett as a tough cop and his lady friend, cashier in a waterfront restaurant.

And at the Rialto "So This Is Africa," such a hit that it is kept over for a second week.

"Second Hand Wife," at the Georgia, sounds interesting with Ralph Bellamy and Sally Eilers the chief lures.

Diary of a Pre-Viewer.

WEDNESDAY—At Loew's Grand, 9 a. m., "The Masquerader" with Ronald Colman and Elissa Landi. Screen version of the stage play that Guy Bates Post made famous. And, equally true, the play that made Guy Bates Post famous. A splendid production. Colman at his best, which is better than the best of 99 out of any 100 players on the screen today. His handling of the dual role is superb and Elissa Landi continues to add to her stature as an actress, as she has done in every role for the past year. You'll enjoy this and it is commended most highly to your attention.

* * * *

WEDNESDAY—At the Fox, 11 a. m., "Me and My Gal," with Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett. A wise-cracking sort of comedy with a self-confident cop and a pert cashier in a cheap restaurant as the principals. It is recommended entirely for comedy purposes, the few moments of drama that are injected being merely there to season the plot. Said plot creaks somewhat, in places, but the comedy more than makes up for any lack in other directions.

* * * *

THURSDAY—At the Paramount; "42nd Street." A delightful and welcome relief from jungle beasts, mummies and murders. Headed by such stars as Warner Baxter, Bebe Daniels, Ruby Keeler (making her film debut), Una Merkel, Ginger Rogers, etc. "42nd Street" is a musical film, with clean and snappy entertainment. Oh, yes, there are some very clever wise-cracks—and lots of pretty girls. In this picture Atlanta theater-goers will see a new and lovely young star in a smash hit. Ruby Keeler really goes over big. It is truly "Four Star" in entertainment value.

So This Is Africa Held at the Rialto For Second Week

With crowds packing the Rialto theater to the outer doors at every performance despite the bank holiday n'everything, "So This Is Africa," most hilariously funny comedy of years, continues at that popular house of entertainment for a second week. The great Wheeler and Woolsey opus will be shown through Friday.

Manager W. T. Murray had expected big crowds to see this picture as soon as Atlanta heard just how good it was. But he had hardly dared to hope for the capacity business which has been the rule throughout the week and, judging by the Saturday crowds, opening day of the second week, there is going to be a repetition of the box office record this week.

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey have always been at the top as talking screen comedians but all their triumphs of the past fade into insignificance compared to their laugh producing achievements in "So This Is Africa." The picture is a rowdy, rough sort of burlesque on all those African hunt and Tarzan pictures and it is a scream from start to finish.

The two famous comedians are taken to Africa by Mrs. Johnson Martini, a famed huntress, with Esther Muir playing the role. There they find that the greatest danger of the jungle is not the wild animals but the wild women. They are captured by a tribe of amorous Amazons and rescued when a hundred Tarzans come marching, to the tune of the Maine Stein song, on their annual pilgrimage to the Amazon village seeking mates. And the conclusion of the picture is the biggest laugh of all.

The role of the leader of the Amazon tribe is taken by Raquel Torres and she is ideally suited to the torrid characterization. There is dancing that sets eyes agog in the scenes in the Amazon village and there are moments when Mrs. Johnson Martini is making heated love to Woolsey that will be remembered and quoted for a long time to come.

And, in the early part of the picture, the sequence where Wheeler and Woolsey go hunting for a horse on the streets of Los Angeles is itself funnier than nine out of ten feature comedies that reach the screen.

"So This Is Africa," is a rowdy fun but it is just the medicine needed at this time and it manufactures laughs and bellows and guffaws that are heard for blocks around the theater every night.

A complete new program of short subjects has been secured especially for the benefit of the scores of patrons who have already seen "So This Is Africa," but who enjoyed it so much they have stated they are coming again before the run is ended.

Rights to Play.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has acquired motion picture rights to "Service," the play by C. L. Anthony, which is now in its sixth month on the London stage. The property will be directed for the screen by Clarence Brown, and is described as a drama of the modern business world. C. L. Anthony is the author of "Autumn Crocus." Brown last directed "The Son-Daughter" for M.-G.-M.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has acquired motion picture rights to "Bombshell," an unproduced play by Caroline Francke and Mack Crane. No cast or director have yet been assigned to the new property.

Lee Tracy in 'Clear All Wires' Proves Racy Comedy at Grand

A journalistic soldier of fortune, a foreign correspondent who injects himself into the thick of any fight—in China, in Asia Minor, in Mexico—is the hero of "Clear All Wires," currently at Loew's Grand theater. Lee Tracy is, of course, ideally suited for the role, and he, with the aid of such capable performers as Una Merkel, James Gleason and Benita Hume, make this one of the liveliest entertainments of the season.

Racy and ironic, "Clear All Wires" concerns itself with Buckley Joyce Thomas' experiences in Russia. He has been sent to Moscow to write stories for the Chicago Globe about modern Russia.

Soon after his arrival Thomas begins to get into hot water. He is a thoroughly unscrupulous fellow, stopping at nothing to gain his ends, either personally or professionally. In Paris he had met his boss' sweetheart and audaciously he brings her to Russia with him. When the boss learns this, Buckley Joyce Thomas gets fired.

To regain his position he has to concoct a synthetic assassination—but his pre-arranged assassination of "the last of the Romanoffs" does not go off as he intended. Thomas himself is shot in the arm, the commissar of police gets a pretty accurate idea of the situation and Thomas finds himself in an ocean of hot water.

How this swaggering, daring, unscrupulous scoundrel manages finally to escape, and how he re-establishes himself as a foreign correspondent of the Chicago Globe, provides a hilarious entertainment in "Clear All Wires," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's excellent film adaptation of the successful Broadway play.

The role of Buckley Joyce Thomas fits Lee Tracy to perfection. Una Merkel, as the boss' girl, is richly comic, and Bonita Huma, the stately English actress, who appeared with Leslie Howard in "Reserved for Ladies," presents in her first American film a charm and grace which promises her a notable future.

'Second Hand Wife' at Georgia Is Romantic 'Triangle' Drama

Sally Eilers, last seen with Will Rogers in "State Fair," and Ralph Bellamy are co-featured in "Second Hand Wife," the romantic drama that depicts a young banker involved in a startling new domestic triangle. The film is now being shown at the Georgia theater. The story was adapted from the novel by Kathleen Norris, which was published in book form and also ran as a serial in many papers throughout the country.

The heroine of the story is a beautiful blonde stenographer who falls in love with her rich employer, a married man, unhappy in his home life. He discounts his wealth and social position when he and the girl at first become friends and later find themselves in love with each other. They are married as soon as a divorce decree is granted, but soon find themselves menaced by disaster.

How they work out their problem and eventually find happiness, forms the basis of one of the most intriguing stories ever brought to the screen. Miss Eilers portrays the role of the love-hungry girl and Bellamy appears as the unhappy and neglected husband. Helen Vinson plays the part of the indolent, society-mad wife. Special attractions are offered on the same program.

"Madame Butterfly," Paramount's modernized screen version of the famous love classic, starring Sylvia Sidney, is to be seen for three days only starting Wednesday at the Georgia. The film is based on the life of the real Madame Butterfly, a beautiful Japanese geisha girl. Falling in love with an American naval officer, she throws over the customs and traditions of her Nipponese ancestry to marry him. After several months of connubial bliss, he sails back to the states promising to return.

Madame Butterfly waits faithfully, despite the entreaties of her family to remarry a wealthy high-born Japanese. Finally her lover returns, but under circumstances which bring a touching unusual climax. Others in the cast are Charles Ruggles, Cary Grant and Irving Pichel.

These two feature attractions represent two more hits in the March Parade of Hits which have been booked for showing at the Georgia all this month, and many others are to follow.

gives her a role of deeply emotional character and semi-tragic ending.

Wednesday and Thursday will be "Double Attraction" days at Manager Alpha Fowler's community theatre, with the screen features headed by "Rackety Rex," the All-American football scream with a cast which includes Victor McLaglen, Greta Nissen and Nell O'Day. For the second time on an Atlanta screen that epic of the west, Zane Grey's "The Golden West," starring George O'Brien, will also be shown on these two days.

Friday's screen feature will be "The Half-Naked Truth," with Lupe Velez and Lee Tracy, while at 8 o'clock in the evening another of those good 'Amateur Nite" contests will be staged. Manager Fowler will be master of ceremonies.

Saturday the ace western star, Tim McCoy, will gallop onto the screen in his latest thriller, "Fighting for Justice." Other daily features will include short subjects, serials and newsreels.

"Road to Singapore" At West End House

"The Road to Singapore" with William Powell, Marian Marsh and Doris Kenyon opens the week at the West End theater Monday. It is a colorful and romantic tale of the tropics. "Madame Racketeer," for Tuesday, has a pair of great troupers, Alison Skipworth and Richard Bennett, is a grand comedy constructed upon a firm foundation of human emotions. George Raft and Evalyn Knapp are in the cast.

Wednesday, Lowell Sherman, Lila Lee and Peggy Shannon will be seen in 'False Faces," a gripping story of an unscrupulous beauty surgeon. "The Animal Kingdom," the feature for Thursday and Friday, stars Ann Harding and Leslie Howard. Myrna Loy and Neil Hamilton are cast in important roles also. Philip Barry, the author, is perhaps the greatest modern exponent of the light touch applied to the most urgent of human problems. "Animal Kingdom." lightheartedly, whimsically, gaily, yet powerfully, shows how a husband discovers that his very respectable wife has the wiles of a mistress, while his mistress has the virtues of a wife.

Zane Grey's "Heritage of the Desert," is offered Saturday. This is a story of the battles between a group of ranchmen and a band of outlaws. The cast includes Randolph Scott, Sally Blane, J. Farrell MacDonald and David Landau.

Fannie Hurst Story On Buckhead Screen

Fannie Hurst's popular story, "Symphony of Six Million" is to be shown at the Buckhead theater Monday and Tuesday. Irene Dunne and Ricardo Cortez share the lead in this powerful drama of an East Side family who are poor but happy. Wednesday Mitzi Green and Buster Phelps share honors in "Little Orphan Annie," a delightful story showing the affection two orphans have for each other.

George O'Brien is featured in "The Golden West," a Zane Grey story, to show Thursday and Friday. There is fast action, human interest and comedy in this story of settlers going west. Paramount News and a Laurel and Hardy comedy, "The Chimp," complete a bill of excellent entertainment.

The picture for Saturday is "Man Against Woman." featuring Jack Holt in the role of a confident detective, who doesn't carry a gun. Replete with drama and romance, it has an odd climax. The third chapter of the serial, "The Last Frontier," and a comedy, "Wild Babies," balance the bill.

Tenth Street Bills "Half Naked Truth"

"The Half Naked Truth," playing at the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday, is a story of an obscure little carnival dancer who reaches fame and the follies through the efforts of her sweetheart, a high-powered publicity man. This up-to-the-minute comedy-romance has as its leading players Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez.

Wednesday Jack Holt and Lillian Miles will be seen in "Man Against Woman," an entertaining story of a man who thought he could win the love of a woman by turning dishonest.

Thursday Charles Ruggles and Sari Maritza star in "Evenings for Sale," an intriguing romance of an Austrian nobleman.

Friday brings "Night After Night," a smart comedy-drama of a young prizefighter. A prominent cast includes Constance Cummings and George Raft.

David Manners and Ann Dvorak star in "The Crooner," playing Saturday. This is a delightful comedy-drama based on the career of a young musician. Guy Kibbee has a prominent supporting role.

DeKalb Opens With "No Other Woman"

An interesting story of a woman's devotion for her husband is vividly presented at the DeKalb Monday and Tuesday in "No Other Woman." Irene Dunne is dropped by her husband, Charles Bickford, after all the sacrifices she has made for him in his rise from factory hand to millionaire. Gwili Andre and Eric Linden play important supporting roles.

"Chandu the Magician," the radio drama character, is Wednesday's attraction and offers Edmund Lowe, Bela Lugosi and Irene Ware as the leading characters.

Miriam Hopkins, Jack Oakie, William Collier Jr., and Eugene Pallette appear Thursday in "Dancers in the Dark," a story of a dance hall girl who wanted to amount to something.

"Tom Brown of Culver." Friday, involves a fine story of modern American youth enacted by a cast including Tom Brown, Slim Summerville, Richard Cromwell, H. B. Warner, Andy Devine, Russel Hopton and Ben Alexander.

Saturday, Zane Grey's famous western story, "Wild Horse Mesa," is offered with Randolph Scott, Sally Blane, Fred Kohler and Jim Thorpe playing the leading roles.

'SHE DONE HIM WRONG' PLAYS AT CARROLLTON

Manager Alpha Fowler, who, in addition to the Empire theater in Atlanta operates the Carroll theater in Carrollton, has booked "She Done Him Wrong," the tremendously funny screen satire, with Mae West in the starring role, for the Carroll theater on Monday and Tuesday. "She Done Him Wrong," has not been shown in Atlanta because the board of film review, local censorship body, refused to permit its showing within the city, much to the disappointment and disapproval of all critics who saw the picture on preview.

In fact, critics generally voiced complete disagreement with the censors in regard to this picture.

In any event, all other cities—even small towns and rural communities—have seen nothing whatever objectionable in the production and it is being shown everywhere else except in Atlanta.

Manager Fowler, in booking it for his Carroll theater, realized that this was probably about as close as it would get to an Atlanta showing, so is inviting all Atlantans to motor to Carrollton and see the film. It is only an hour's run and the highway is paved all the way. And the Carroll theater is one of the prettiest and most comfortable small town theaters in Georgia.

BASS BEGINS DRIVE FOR PERFECT TEETH

The dental campaign at Bass is on. Every student is working and wishing for the school to go 100 per cent.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bass Junior High P.-T. A. was held on Wednesday afternoon, March 8, in the school auditorium. Dr. W. A. Smart, of Emory University, spoke on "Spiritual Values in Arts." The school paper, The Aerial, was the school activity featured at this meeting.

The ninth grade of Bass had the pleasure of hearing Dean De Ovies speak to them recently.

The assembly Wednesday, March 8, was under the direction of G. N. Shaeffer, head of manual arts. The subject was "Industrial Arts."

The students are engaged in sports at present. The boys are playing baseball, while the girls are enthusiastic over basketball. Tournaments are held among the different grades.

The High-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs are making splendid progress. Each week the clubs are rated very high on the Georgia bulletin.

The entire school feels indebted to Miss Louise Long, Miss Claire Harper and Mr. Richard Holtzclaw, who contributed much toward making the recent Bass musical concerts a success.

TOUR OF GALLERY AT HIGH MUSEUM IS PLANNED TODAY

Gallery tours of one of the most unusual artistic exhibitions shown in Atlanta will be conducted at the High Museum of Art at 3 o'clock this afternoon by L. P. Skidmore, director, who will lead spectators through the salon lined with some of the best photographic work in America.

The second annual exhibit of its nature, the display includes some of the most famous photos of America. Somewhat profound in composition, anatomy, perspective and color, the pictures reveal the talent which has made the contributing artists nationally known.

In the works are studies by Ruth Alexander Nichols, of Westfield, N. J., whose reproductions of child life are famous; Robert I. Nesmith and Associates, of New York, whose virile photos of steam shovels, pile drivers, locomotives, coffee roasters and other travel and industrial subjects have appeared in several periodicals.

Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer of The Constitution, with 13 excellent photographs entered, is the only Atlantan entered.

TECH HIGH PREPARES LITERARY EXERCISES

Tech High's annual literary exercises should be a great success this year, from the support the English department has already received. There are 40 students signed up for the tryouts in debating and declaiming, which will be held on Tuesday and Thursday, March 22 and 24. All the students of Tech High, juniors, seniors and freshmen, are urged to take part in these exercises. This year they are scheduled for Friday, April 14.

Many Smithy trackmen will have a showing when the free-for-all field day takes place in the early part of March. This is the first time in the school's history that such a novel event is to be held. Unknown track talent should be brought out in this meet to take the place of those graduated. Medals and various other prizes are to be presented to the boys winning.

Commercial Staff Publishes Georgia Edition

By MARY BOONE.

The Co-Ed Leader staff of Commercial High school has issued a special edition of the school publication featuring Georgia's celebration of its 200th anniversary. The particular phase of Georgia history emphasized was the commercial development of the state. Copies of the edition were sent to schools in the states along the western coast.

The Co-Ed Leader, a real leader, is the first of firsts in journalistic honors among the Atlanta high schools, and first in the hearts of commercialists. It was the first five-column school newspaper published in Atlanta, and the first school newspaper staff in the city to send a delegate to a national press meeting. It is a charter member of the National Scholastic Press Association and was accorded by this association an "All-American" rating. This honor has also been given the Co-Ed by several other high school press organizations.

Commercial High was the first Atlanta high school to establish a chapter of Quill and Scroll, international honorary society for high school journalists. The Co-Ed Leader was the first school paper in Georgia to win the first prize offered by the University of Georgia, through the Georgia Scholastic Press Association, this prize being given for the best all-round high school newspaper in the state. For two successive years the Co-Ed won the first prize—$25 in gold.

The Co-Ed Leader has won two silver loving cups, one from The Atlanta Constitution for editing the best school publication in the state, and the other a cup awarded by Columbia University for the best school newspaper in its class in the states east of the Mississippi.

PUPILS OF TENTH SCHOOL PREPARE TO GROW GARDENS

High 6-S is a firm believer in conservation as a part of good citizenship. In addition to teaching how to save the trees by giving an assembly program, many members of the class will carry out Mr. Sutton's suggestion of planting gardens.

The best original poem in High 6-M was written by Betty Jones.

High 5-I have been greatly interested in pioneer life in Georgia and the west. They have a border on pioneer life and a poster on "Old Kentucky."

High 5, Pennington, wrote an acrostic on the westward movement.

Low 5 are enjoying the various Georgia studies they are having.

High 4-A are continuing their trip from the Mediterranean to Norway and Sweden. They have drawn and colored Viking boats for their sand table.

High 4-S have completed their Georgia booklets.

Low 4 enjoy their study of Phoenicia. They have modeled some shell fish and have made a sand-table model of Phoenicia.

AILEME BARRON.

HARRIS CHILDREN RECEIVE PICTURE FROM PRESIDENT

Low 1 enjoyed making clay animals.

Low 2 on their "Georgia table" have a beautiful Georgia scrapbook and an exhibit of products.

High 1-2 are busy making health books. They are planning to keep the four new health rules so as to become stronger boys and girls.

High 4-1 have been writing letters to Johnstown, Pa., telling about the 200th birthday of Georgia.

High 5-1 are glad to have Emory Johnson, from Louisville, Ga.

The High 6 pupils who have just gone to Joe Brown are proud to have received autographed photos from President and Mrs. Roosevelt. They also were fortunate in receiving two letters from Ecuador.

We felt very proud that our school was asked to broadcast on March 3 over WSB.

GOLDSMITH WORKS TO WIN SPELLING CONTEST REWARD

Our spelling contestants are right on the job, working hard to win the cup. We have gained one new spelling contestant, June Brewster, from Pryor Street school, and we are as happy as can be to have her join the ranks of those trying for the loving cup.

Miss Smith paid us a pleasant visit. She showed us how to cut shamrock leaves and make a nut cup out of them.

Juanita Burdett, of the third grade, was fortunate enough to go to the inauguration at Washington. What a splendid opportunity she had to see our president sworn in. All of us were anxious to hear her talk.

NELL CAIN.

READING AWARDS GIVEN TO PUPILS AT MORNINGSIDE

Two hundred and thirty-three children received reading awards in our school. We are very proud of them.

Many of the classes were honored by a visit from Miss Felton and Miss Craves.

High 6 are glad that Walter Wright is recovering from an illness. They are planting their garden.

High 5 are painting the food on their food chart. The pupils hope to be up to the standard in weights.

High 4 are making health and safety posters for Miss Graves and Miss Smith.

High 3 have been reading Robinson Crusoe.

High 2 are enjoying the study of Indians.

High 1 sent six letters to Florida.

ESTHER EARLY.

Superintendent's Message

My dear Boys and Girls:

This year I am exceedingly anxious that every boy and girl in the city of Atlanta should have a garden. I may have written you about it before, but never before in all of our history has the need of a garden been so apparent. Each family will need the delicious vegetabls and the beautiful flowers that come from it. A garden will give us the opportunity to develop our love of the soil and to teach us how plants grow out of the soil. Nothing is more beneficial to the building of character than working with the soil and the growing of plants.

Then this year, of all years, we need to show our spirit of thrift and our determination to make all that it is possible for us to make and to help the families and the schools through these very trying times. The weather may not be quite warm enough yet, but I want you to select a spot and get the land ready and get the seed ready to plant so that the very instant that springtime comes we will be prepared to sow our seed and to grow our gardens. Every kindergarten child, every grade child and every high school student must have a garden this year, and we must teach our mothers and fathers the importance of having a garden.

With best wishes, I am,

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON, Superintendent of Schools.

MURPHY HIGH CLERK SEES INAUGURATION

The inauguration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt created much excitement at Murphy. We, being staunch democrats, are happy to see a fellow-democrat in the presidential chair, and all join in wishing him a most successful administrationo.

In an interview with Miss Eva V. Freeman, our school clerk, she told of her many exciting experiences while visiting Washington. She said the inauguration parade was exceedingly beautiful. Of course, the little boy, Toby Cook, and his pony, attracted much attention. While in Washington Miss Freeman went to see many places of patriotic interest to us. Our library has become more interesting because of the pictures and papers of Washington brought back by Miss Freeman.

The seniors of Agnes Scott College, who have recently attended a series of demonstration lessons at Murphy, have begun practice teaching in ten classrooms. We enjoy having the young ladies with us and we appreciate the splendid work they are giving us.

HIGHLAND HEARS STATE PRODUCTS TALK PRESENTED

C. H. Bishop, market master of Sears-Roebuck market and sponsor of Miss Speir's class, talked to us Wednesday about Georgia products.

Low 2 took an excursion to Piedmont park Thursday. They saw the Peace monument, Sidney Lanier monument, the monument to mayors of Atlanta and the first lamp posts used in our city when Whitehall street was first lighted.

Miss Corley's class is learning many interesting things about the Cherokee and Creek Indians.

Low 4 were so happy to have Aubrey Milam, of Green & Milam Produce Company, visit them on Friday. Mr. Milam gave an interesting talk on Georgia history and Georgia products. His information on Georgia fruits and vegetables and cotton inspired a deeper study of Georgia products.

On last Thursday High 3 were very happy to have a visit from their sponsor, C. A. Rauschenberg. After a rare treat of real Dutch candy, Mr. Rauschenberg talked with the children for about half an hour, leaving everyone with hopes that he would return soon.

High 1 had a lovely walk this week to the postoffice at Little Five Points. Mr. Hodges was so very nice to show and tell us all about the postoffice.

The children in Mrs. Perry's room went to visit Joel Chandler Harris' home, "Wren's Nest," in West End.

Low 1 have made a Georgia farm on the sand table. The class had a visit from Lucien Harris Jr., their class sponsor, recently.

MADDOX BASKETBALL TEAM SPLITS SERIES

The Maddox Junior High basketball team split a two-game series with Joe Brown. Maddox won the first game at Maddox Tuesday, 30-26. Joe Brown won the second at Joe Brown Thursday, 25-20. Both games were exciting and furnished the spectators with many real thrills.

A candy pulling was held Tuesday evening. A fairly large crowd was present. Games were played and everyone had a nice time.

A meeting of the garden club was held Monday, March 6. This meeting was called to make further plans for the garden.

JAMES KNIGHT.

HOME PARK CLASS BUILDS LOG HUTS FOR SAND TABLE

Kindergarten children are making a very interesting Georgia scrapbook.

High 2 are making log cabins for their Georgia sand table.

High 3 are enjoying their trip to Holland.

Low 4 are very much enthused over making some Egyptian tapestries.

High 4 are very glad to welcome Kathryn Duke to their class.

Low 5 have organized a junior humane league. Virginia Spearman is president and Winona Thompson is secretary.

High 6 made an interesting trip to the library on Monday. After this visit the class went to the postoffice and were taken on an excursion through the building by Mr. Large, the postmaster.

High 6-1 have started the study of South America.

High 6-2 have made a border on Georgia.

ROBERT WALKER.

PRYOR CHILDREN GIVE CAKE WALK SCHOOL PROGRAM

The pre-school circle of Pryor Street school gave a cakewalk in the auditorium on last Friday night. The program consisted of songs and dances by the children of the school. Everybody had a good time.

The fifth grades enjoyed visits from Miss Smith and Miss Rainwater. Miss Smith helped them cut out the Georgia Cracker.

The fourth grades are having an arithmetic race. John Cantrell is far ahead of everyone.

High 2 are having much fun studying about the Indians.

The kindergarten children are busy preparing a program for the Parent-Teacher Association, which meets Tuesday.

MELBA RAINEY.

NORTH FULTON TO SEE ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Much to the delight of North Fulton students, Mr. Winfield Markham is going to give again his illustrated lecture entitled, "American Wonderlands From the Air." This time the public is invited and the lecture is to be given at 8 o'clock on Friday evening, March 17, in the auditorium. The price of admission will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

Our library, around which we have centered most of our attentions, has shown great progress under our efforts. For the past month an expert librarian has been busy cataloging the books and the students have shown their appreciation by assisting in this work from time tot ime.

Every student wrote the U. D. C. essay on Sidney Lanier on Friday. Since this is the Georgia bicentennial year, the school thought it an appropriate activity as a part of the celebration.

An educational or an entertaining talking picture is shown to the school once a week. North Fulton students feel that despite their hard work they also derive much enjoyment from school activities.

CHARLOTTE KAMPER.

CLUB AT SMITH AIDS SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

The Secretaries' Club of Hoke Smith, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Hoge, has helped greatly with the attendance of the school. Officers of the club are: Martha Winn, chief; Gwendolyn Knight, 7th grade lieutenant; Mary Louise Duncan, 8th grade lieutenant; Avon Smith, 9th grade lieutenant; program chairman, Alma Brooks; reporter, James Smith.

The duties of the secretaries are to keep records of all class activities, take care of all correspondence for classes, get attendance report to the office and see that all excuses for absences are in on time.

Recently the club held its inauguration in the school auditorium. Mrs. Mary Hoge, the sponsor, administered the oath of office to each officer, who in turn made a speech and lighted a candle to signify that he would abide by the club's by-laws.

MARJORIE BROOKS.

CALHOUN PUPILS MAKE COLLECTION ON INAUGURATION

We have been having daily visits recently from our little bird friends—the robins—and they make an attractive picture as they strut around our pretty lawn.

Miss Graves came to see us Tuesday. She is always a welcome visitor.

Low 1 have made great progress in their reading and are delighted with their new books.

The second grade enjoy making an Indian border to put around their room.

High 3 are working hard on arithmetic.

The fourth grades are making a study of Mother Nature, the signs of spring, equal days and nights, and are learning the names and locations of the stars.

High 5 were very much interested in the inauguration of President Roosevelt and they have been making a collection of pictures on this subject.

High 6 enjoyed a trip to the Carnegie library Monday. Miss Cox reviewed what she had taught them on their previous visit and gave them a lesson on how to use the encyclopedia.

The Braille class is delighted to have Mrs. Hodges back after an absence of two weeks due to illness. This class is getting up a debate. The leaders are Pauline Sears and Frances Barfield.

MATILDA WRIGHT.

FAITH PUPILS USE SOAP FOR MAKING MUMMY CASKETS

Audry Wall of Low 6 won the prize for the Georgian last week. We are proud of it.

Low 4 children are enjoying carving mummy cases out of soap.

High kindergarten are enjoying working with wood. They have made a sewing table and painted it green.

Jack Helmes, Olin Blair, Dan Patrick, Nellie Shedd, Harold Tice, Casper Roberts, William Pate, and Margaret Gillespie from Low 2 helped make our paper sale a success.

High 5 are enjoying many books on Daniel Boone.

Low 5 are glad to welcome Jack McMahan, Virgil Gray and Mandy Brown to our class.

High 6 enjoyed giving their program on Monday.

High 6-2 have learned to play volleyball and enjoy it very much.

MARY LOU GILLESPIE.

FAIR CLASS HAS NEWS BROADCAST BEFORE ASSEMBLY

The children of Fair Street school from the kindergarten to the sixth grade like their social science. Last Thursday at assembly Low 6 presented their experiences through modern and colonial life in Georgia by original ballads and poems composed by members of the class.

High 6 presented a radio program broadcasting news of Georgia and South America and Fair Street school. The program was so good that the school asked for it to be repeated and invited Miss Wheeler of the Junior Red Cross to be present.

Miss Ethel Massengale visited the lower grades and liked the work. We always enjoy having Miss Massengale.

—CLARA JONES.

SPRING CHILDREN IN SIXTH BUILD HOMES FOR BIRDS

High 6-1 had a birdhouse contest.

The "A" chorus of High 6-2 enjoyed their visit to O'Keefe last Friday at the rehearsal.

Low and High 5 enjoyed the visit of Silver King and are going to try to obey the safety laws.

High and Low 4 are working hard to be 100 per cent in Sunday school attendance.

High and Low 2 enjoyed the day Silver King, the dog that thinks before he does anything.

OUR PRESIDENTS AT A GLANCE

Number 26.

(Copyright, 1933, for The Atlanta Constitution.)

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Born in wealth, October 27, 1857, New York City. An asthmatic child, was privately tutored as he built his frail body by constant exercise at home and in the woods. Graduated at Harvard, 1880. Boyhood ambition was to be a naturalist.

At 24, elected a member of New York Legislature. At 26, a tenderfoot in quest of health on a ranch in North Dakota; two years later, his health restored, returned to New York politics—defeated for office of Mayor. At 33, appointed member New York Civil Service Commission — served six years; in 1895, a member New York Police Commission and two years later, Ass't. Secretary of Navy. In Cuba, 1898 — Colonel of Rough Riders—returned five months later and elected Governor of New York. His altruistic ideas agitated New York politicians who side-tracked him before re-election by nomination as Vice-President on the Republican ticket—1900. The following year became President—death of McKinley.

Possessed an aggressive individuality, a striking personality and was an intensely practical politician. Was a voluminous writer, fond of athletics—a clever boxer—a lover of nature and an inexhaustible traveler—visited every state in the Union and many foreign countries. Favorite pastimes were hunting and fishing—trophies of his expeditions to Africa and South America are exhibited in the National Museum.

Became the twenty-sixth President of the United States, Sept. 14, 1901 and by election—1904—the first Vice-President elected to the Presidency after receiving it from the hand of death. His administration was the most constructive since the Civil War. His acts aroused sharp criticism but he won popular adherence by his vigorous foreign policy, his efforts in direction of official purity and his opposition to oppressive capitalistic combinations. He smashed the Northern Securities Co. which stopped plans for all other railroad mergers; overwhelmed the coal barons of Pennsylvania by making them arbitrate a strike; brought the railroads under Government control with the Interstate Commerce Act; established the Department of Commerce; secured the passage of the Meat Inspection Act and the Pure Food Law; rescued lands, forests and water power from further encroachment by private interests and outlined a policy for preservation in the national interest; took the initiative and started the building of the Panama Canal; brought Russia and Japan to agree to discuss peace—awarded Nobel Prize as world's foremost peacemaker. At the close of his term of office, went to East Africa on a hunting trip; returned, 1910—defeated as candidate for Republican nomination—1912; nominated by Prorgessive Party—defeated in the election. In 1913, left for wilderness of Brazil on another hunting trip; returned in eight months, retired to his home at Oyster Bay where still active in politics and hailed as the hope of the Republicans for the election of 1920, he died, January 6, 1919, aged 60—the most popular citizen of the American Republic.

NEXT SUNDAY: WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Through special arrangement, this series of concise illustrated historic and patriotic sketches may be obtained in booklet form, 9x12 inches in size, suitable for a permanent edition to the library or reference table, at the bargain price of 45 cents a copy—regular price $1—by calling at the city circulation department of The Constitution, or the book will be mailed upon receipt of 50 cents by that department.

GEORGIA FARMERS 'LIVING AT HOME' LAUGH AT CRISIS

Farm Agent Says Progressive Farmers of Southeast Now Most Secure of All Groups.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11.—Farmers of the southeast, who have pursued progressive agricultural policies, are in the most impregnable position of any group of people in the country at this time, according to Bright McConnell, Richmond county farm agent. He has been at the helm of advanced farm movements here for more than a decade, wtnessing an increase in poultry raising that surpasses 500 per cent, quadrupling of the dairy industry and a similar advance in pork production. Three markets specializing in farm products, one of them strictly a co-operative project, are dispensing farm and home offerings here almost daily, whiletwo large meat curing establishments are in operation, one in the rural district, 15 miles from Augusta, and the other in the city. Thousands of pounds of high class meat are being cured in the plants and the offerings are bringing exceptionally high premiums over other meats.

"With corn in the cribs, meat in the smokehouse, yards full of chickens and barns filled with feeds, the situation is relatively fine for the farmers of this section," says McConnell.

The movement to grow feed crops has been gaining ground throughout this section during the past several years and the soy bean crop is probably making greater strides in this territory than anywhere else in the country. In the meantime winter legumes have also scored a heavy increase in acreage, while corn, velvet beans, cowpeas and other stable feed crops are popular. The satisfactory prices being asked for poultry and eggs makes this crop an unusually desirable one at this time and while it was thought for awhile that untoward conditions would develop in dairying the conditions have made improvements over other undertakings. The advance in pork prices during the past few days has also aided farmers considerably as an immense quantity is being produced in this section.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., March 11.—As a climax to the cooking school, which will be sponsored by the Woman's Club of Barnesville March 30 and 31, a fashion show will be given the night of March 31, with the Junior Club assisting. Mrs. C. H. Willis, Mrs. L. C. Tyus, Mrs. L. A. Collier, Mrs. J. E. Bush and Mrs. G. E. Klugh, with Mrs. J. A. Corry, president, are acting as a committee on arrangements for the show. Merchants of the town will furnish clothing of all sorts to be modeled. The show will be held in Gordon auditorium.

Civic Club Meets.

DAVISBORO, Ga., March 11.—The meeting of the Brotherhood, local civic club, was held in the basement of the Baptist church Tuesday night. The speakers were Lieutenant R. B. Stone, of the high school faculty; J. C. Godfrey, of Sandersville, and L. J. Moye, of Davisboro. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Joe M. Branch, president.

Scoutmaster Appointed.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., March 11.—Sergeant R. W. Slayden, Gordon College military instructor, has been appointed scoutmaster for Barnesville by Elijah Wisebram, commander of the Leon Martin post of the American Legion. The post is sponsoring the Scout work here. A meeting of boys eligible for membership in the Boy Scouts will be held at an early date.

Ordination Service.

WASHINGTON, Ga., March 11.—At the Lexington Baptist church Sunday, the Rev. W. T. Evans, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Washington, will preach the ordination sermon, which will mark the induction of Warren F. Daniel and Robert D. Patton into the office of deacons of the Lexington church. Other speakers will be A. F. Durham, of Woodville, who will deliver the charge to the board of deacons, and the Rev. H. F. Hendricks, of Crawford, who will make the charge to the congregation.

Singing Convention.

McDONOUGH, Ga., March 11.—The Henry County Afternoon Singing Convention will be held at Rocky Creek Baptist church on Sunday afternoon. A number of music leaders are expected and all singers are invited.

Founder of Girl Scouts

Mrs. Juliette Low, of Savannah and London, England, who founded the Girl Scout movement. Her memory will be honored today at special services at Savannah, where the first Girl Scout troop was formed by Mrs. Low 21 years ago.

Huge Distillery Raided in Henry Had 1,000-Gallon Vat Capacity

McDONOUGH, Ga., March 11.—The discovery of a gigantic distillery outfitted with a 12-horsepower steam boiler and camping equipment de luxe caused a flurry of excitement in McDonough Friday afternoon. A peculiarity of the still, besides the fact that it was the largest yet uncovered in Henry county, was the use of 220-gallon "doublers" with each of the 300-gallon stills. According to local officers this added to the alcoholic content of the distillation and increased the "power" of the product.

Officers confiscated 2,300 pounds of brown sugar, 12 or 15 sacks of rye meal, one large tent, camping paraphernalia, cooking utensils, knives, forks, spoons and so forth, several pounds of ham, a big box of bread, a gunny sackful of pork, beans and salmon, a bunch of tools of all sorts. Twenty-five vats, each of 40-gallon capacity, were filled with beer, prime for "running," when the raid was made. Six hundred empty tin cans were taken, 100 pounds of coke were found and 1,000 empty cartons pointed to a successful run on the previous night.

Sheriff L. D. Hightower was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff A. D. Tingle and federal officers. Due to the presence of a lookout concealed behind a dozen or more young pines nailed upon boards and moved at will to form a screen, the operators made good their escape. The location of the outfit was about six miles north of McDonough, near Hudson's bridge on the Cotton Indian river and the terrain was so situated that raiding parties from any direction were visible.

Special Edition on Inauguration Issued by Warm Springs Paper

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., March 11. Despite the depression and adverse economic conditions the Warm Springs Mirror, weekly newspaper published in the part-time home of President Roosevelt, recently celebrated the inauguration of the town's illustrious citizen and the Georgia bicentennial by publication of a 30-page edition.

The edition, which received favorable comment from many of the paper's readers, was replete with pictures and stories of President Roosevelt and his career since he first took up residence in this state, back in 1924.

General Oglethorpe and his band of hardy followers likewise were depicted in story and pictures throughout the edition, which carried a total of 97 advertisements, a record for the paper.

Biographical sketches of prominent Georgians, past and present, and stories on the leading industries of the state also received space in the special edition, which was printed in three sections.

The front page of the edition carried a large picture of the new president as well as current news stories. The second section had as its format a picture of Roosevelt and Garner in each corner, in the center of the page was the American eagle and a cut of the spirit of 1776; in the middle of the page was a plaque, telling of the landing of General Oglethorpe, while in the lower portion of the page was a cut of Uncle Sam and the nation's capitol. The third section contained on the front page a large picture of General Oglethorpe and a short sketch of his career.

The edition also carried a number of pictures which showed views of the Warm Springs Foundation and environs. Appreciation was expressed in the edition of the aid given it by Atlanta newspapers, which furnished cuts and mats, as well as other agencies, such as the Western Newspaper Union, the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, a host of advertisers and others.

WASHINGTON COUNTY IS REPORTED SOLVENT

TENNILLE, Ga., March 11.—Marking a record short session the grand jury of the spring term of Washington superior court, of which H. M. Franklin, of Tennille, was foreman, adjourned Friday in Sandersville, and the presentments were made to Judge Hardeman. After a thorough investigation of all departments the financial affairs of the county were found in good shape. Since a cut of $17,000 in operating expenses was made in 1932 no suggestion for further reductions was made. The county has no bonded indebtedness, but owes approximately $50,000 offset by funds due. There is due $106,000 from the state highway department and $70,000 from other sources.

Authorized by a recent act of the legislature the body appointed seven councilmen, one from each district, whose duties will be the fixing of the county budget, and who will work in co-operation with the county commissioners, W. J. Wammock, Fields Garner and J. A. Webster. Those named were C. E. Hodges Jr., Melton Jones, W. M. Kelley, C. E. Britt, John Taylor, E. N. Ennis and Dr. F. B. Rawlings.

An unusual matter coming up before the body, an aftermath of the recent election contest in the Riddleville district for the office of justice of the peace, was the request for the removal of J. Johnson from the office of district notary public because of his refusal to allow registered voters to cast their ballots. The jury recommended that this be done and that the court name his successor.

SENATOR DAVIS BETTER FOLLOWING OPERATION

PITTSBURGH, March 11.—(AP)—The condition of United States Senator James J. Davis, republican, Pennsylvania, who underwent an operation for appendicitis, was described as "satisfactory" tonight by his physician, Dr. J. W. Shirer.

MANY SCHOOL PAPERS ENTER PRESS CONTEST

ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—Entries for the contest to determine the best high school papers in Georgia will close April 15, according to Professor John E. Drewry, head of the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia. This contest is in conjunction with the annual Georgia Scholastic Press Association to be held May 5, in Athens.

The publications of the different high schools are classified so that there may be a fair judgment of their work. Some high schools have magazines, some newspapers, and others only annuals so that it is necessary they be classified to insure fairness. All high schools are invited to enter this contest.

Certificates of merit and other prizes will be given this year to these publications. Last year there was a large number of entries graded. These publications are graded as to makeup, typography, headlines, editorials and general appearance.

These publications are to make up an exhibit which is to be in the journalism reading room of the Commerce-Journalism building.

HOLLIDAY NOMINATION SENT TO U. S. SENATE

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—The nomination of John H. Holliday, of Missouri, to continue temporarily as vice governor of the Philippine Islands was sent to the senate today by President Roosevelt.

Holliday will serve as acting governor general of the Philippines upon the departure of Theodore Roosevelt on March 24. He will continue until Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, now attorney-general in the Roosevelt cabinet, is relieved to take over as governor general of the Philippines.

Killed by Auto.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., March 11.—(AP)—Otto Clark, 21, so nof A. O. Clark, of Hattiesburg, Miss., was fatally injured today when the automobile in which he was riding overturned. He was a business school student here.

SAVANNAH MARKS 21ST ANNIVERSARY OF GIRL SCOUTING

World-Wide Movement Originated in Georgia's Port City Twenty-One Years Ago Today.

By W. G. SUTLIVE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—Tomorrow, in Savannah, where the Girl Scouts originated, the organization will observe its twenty-first anniversary. The anniversary celebration is to take place at the Lutheran Church of the Ascension at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A feature of the observance will be an address by Mrs. Daisy Gordon Lawrence, of Savannah, who was one of the original members of the organization.

Mrs. Lawrence is the neice of Mrs. Low, the founder of this great body of girls. After the exercises at the church a floral tribute will be placed upon the grave of Mrs. Low in Bonaventure cemetery. The exercises will be attended by the Girl Scouts and the Brownies, little folks too young to become Scouts.

On March 12, 1912, in a little room near the old Low home in Savannah, a group of little girls gathered about Mrs. Juliette Low, of London and Savannah, and pledged themselves to the principles which dominate thousands of Girl Scouts today. The eight girls were initiated then as Girl Scouts and since that day 21 years ago the movement has spread to practically every country of the world.

Mrs. Low received the inspiration for establishing Girl Scouts from Sir Robert Baden-Powell, of England, founder of the Boy Scouts, and her personal friend who urged her to found Girl Scouts in America on the order of the Girl Guides of Europe.

She came home from a visit in England with the idea fresh in her mind and immediately upon her arrival here imparted it to friends who were eager to launch the new movement. She acquired leaders, funds and members with the spirit and alacrity which characterized everything she did and between January and March had laid the foundation on which she organized the first troop in March.

Of the eight original members, Miss Daisy Gordon, now Mrs. Samuel C. Lawrence, niece of Mrs. Low, was the first Scout registered, Mrs. Low signing her name for her on the registry. Miss Catherine Coyle was the first girl to become a Girl Scout through initiation.

From this simple beginning the movement has spread all over the world, and the organization was later known as the Girl Scouts of America. With the same simple ceremony with which Mrs. Low pinned the tenderfoot badge on the early members of the organization she later pinned the badge on the first ladies of the land. Four former "first ladies" are now honorary vice presidents of the Girl Scouts, and have shared the hikes, the spirit and the comradeship of scouting with the simplest Scouts.

The little house standing in the rear of the beautiful old Low home on Lafayette square, the quarters once used as stables, has been converted into Girl Scout headquarters and the main room has been dedicated as a memorial to Mrs. Low. The home itself is now owned by the Georgia Society of the Colonial Dames of America and is one of the most famous beautiful old residences of the city.

Mrs. Low held the cause of Girl Scouting close to her heart until the time of her death and her last words were of the Scouts. Annually her memory is honored with simple ceremonies and it has become a custom to place a wreath on her grave on anniversary day. A plaque of the founder was unveiled several years ago on the outside of the entrance to headquarters on Drayton street. The memorial was given by the national society, a similar one being on national headquarters at Washington.

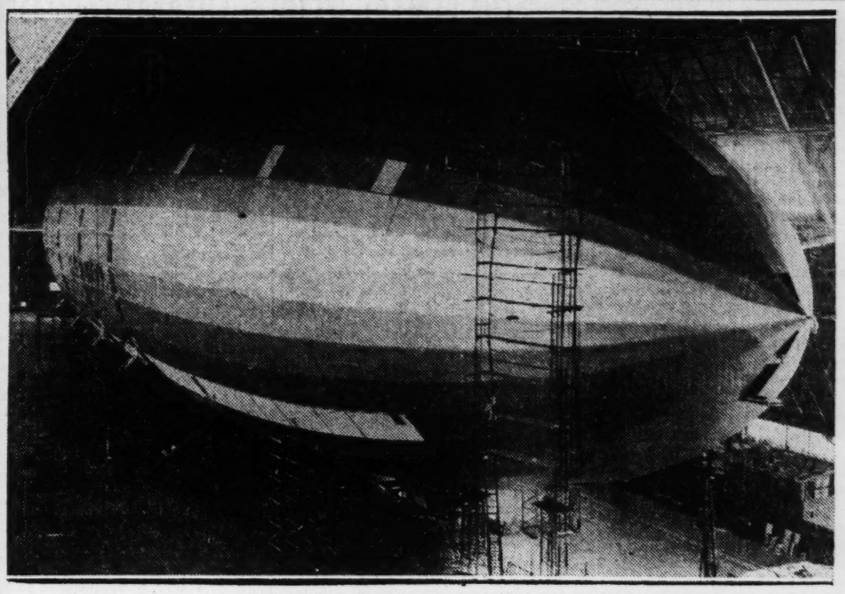

HAVERTY TO ADDRESS AUGUSTA ART CLUB

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11.—Members of the Augusta Art Club are to be addressed by J. J. Haverty, of Atlanta, president of the High Museum of Art, next Thursday. He will speak to the group at the old Academy building, now home of the club, and will use as his subject "A Century of Art." He is well known and popular here and a large crowd will doubtless be present to hear him.

In Auto Tragedy

While attempting to avoid a collision with another car, the auto in which Mr. and Mrs. Carter Randolph Leidy, of Rye, N. Y. (shown in a recent photo), were riding plunged from an embankment into the Bronx river, New York. Mrs. Leidy was drowned and her husband seriously injured. Mrs. Leidy was formerly the wife of Frederick W. Proctor, heir to the soap millions. Leidy was once married to "Fifi" Widener, of Philadelphia.

PROFESSOR HEADS WELFARE MEETING

Athens Pharmacy Teacher Named Chairman for Religious Conference.

ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—Dr. R. C. Wilson, professor of pharmacy at the University of Georgia, has been named general chairman of the ninth religious welfare conference to be held in Athens on April 5, according to announcement of President S. V. Sanford today.

Bishop Francis John McConnell of the Methodist church, New York, noted author, educator and churchman, will be the speaker, and will deliver two addresses in Woodruff Hall on the campus as well as conduct a forum. Bishop McConnell is one of the leading churchmen in America.

The purposes of the conference, as stated by E. L. Secrest, are: To culture and broaden the religious life of the students at the university; to enlist the active interest and co-operation of parents, ministers, alumni, and church laymen throughout the state in the work which is being done for the religious welfare of the students at the university by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. with the assistance of the local churches; to emphasize the fact that the university desires that religious work be done among the students, and to encourage the churches to see that this is their institution as well as that of the state and to help the churches feel their responsibility to the students of their respective denominations at the university.

Other members of the general committee with Dr. Sanford and Professor Wilson are: Paul W. Chapman, state director of vocational education; Jere M. Pound, president of the college of education; Andrew M. Soule, president of the college of agriculture, and E. L. Secrest, director of the voluntary religious associations at the university.

CHEMISTRY CLUB LISTS FOUR GIRLS IN HONOR CIRCLE

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., March 11.—In order to inspire and to reward scholarship among its members, the Chemistry Club of the Georgia State College at Milledgeville has recently organized an honor circle. Election to this circle specifies the completion of three years of college work with an average of A in chemistry and an average of B each semester in all other subjects.

Four students are eligible this year as charter members of the circle: Katherine Owen from Girls High school, Atlanta; Mary Jones from Fairburn High school; Sara Bunch from Glynn Academy, Brunswick, and Ora Guinn from Conyers High school.

SCOUTS PLAN TO HIKE TO FAIR AT CHICAGO

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11.—Scout Executive Rucker Newbery has launched plans that will probably take 25 or 30 Boy Scouts of the Augusta area on an overland trail to Chicago's world fair this summer. The first meeting of scout officials to map out the program will be held Monday night. It is expected that one or more Scouts from each of the 30-odd troops in the Augusta area will be enrolled for the journey. It is probable they will camp out en route and may camp after they reach Chicago.

BANQUET ATTENDED BY MERCER ALUMNI

THOMASVILLE, Ga., March 11.—Approximately one hundred former Mercer University men from this section of the state with many high school senior boys as their guests attended the Mercer alumni banquet here last night. Short addresses were delivered by Judge R. C. Bell, of Cairo, member of the Georgia supreme court, and by Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University. Colonel A. B. Conger, of Bainbridge, acted as toastmaster, and Professors Blair, McLain and Coach Russell were among those in attendance from out of town.

"OLDER BOYS" MEETING HELD AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, Ga., March 11. The South Georgia older boys' conference opened here Friday evening under the auspices of the state Y. M. C. A. council, with approximately 125 boys in attendance, delegates attending from Savannah, Columbus, Waycross, Moultrie, Tifton, Bridgeboro, Dublin, Pavo, Meigs and other towns, most of them being Hi-Y or Y. M. C. A. members. The Thomasville Y. M. C. A. and the Hi-Y and Tri-Y clubs are hosts to the convention and many Thomasville people are entertaining these young men in their homes.

Salzburger Society Holds Bicentennial in Old Church

SPRINGFIELD, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—The bicentennial meeting of the Salzburger Society was held here today in Ebenezer church—166-year-old shrine of worship—and the history of the Salzburgers, who came to America "for conscience sake," was reviewed by Judge M. J. Yeomans, attorney-general of Georgia.

Members of the society, who are descendants of that small band of lovers of religious freedom who left the Austrian Alps in 1733, heard the attorney-general urge them to follow the lessons of the lives of their folk for their courage, sufferings and "devotion to a righteous cause."

Judge Yeomans said the original Salzburgers possessed "qualities that made them great," and "these are the qualities which must be emulated if prosperity ever again comes to the state, the nation and the world."

The first orphanage in America was established by the Salzburgers, the speaker recalled as he traced their journey from Austria, through England, their final landing on Georgia soil, at Savannah, on March 11, 1734. The bicentennial celebration today was not for the landing in America but the beginning of the Salzburger movement for religious independence in 1733.

Mr. Yeomans reviewed the hardships of the Salzburgers in trying to build a community, care for the sick, speak and trade with people of foreign tongue and carry on their work of religious freedom. They were soon established—less than a hundred of them—and soon another colony of 57 arrived.

More Salzburgers followed, generally in colonies of less than a hundred and the society today reflects the courage and faith of the founders of the movement.

In closing his talk, Judge Yeomans said "the Salzburgers, in their quiet, unostentatious way coming to this country . . . for conscience sake, out of a veneration for the true gospel that they might find for themselves and their children that immortal birthright of soul, freedom to worship God at faith's pure shrine, have contributed largely to the history of our state."

FUNERAL RITES TODAY FOR MRS. W. E. BOLDING

GAINESVILLE, Ga., March 11.—Funeral services for Mrs. W. E. Bolding, prominent Gainesville and Hall county woman, will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. She died Saturday at noon at her home here after an extended illness.

Mrs. Bolding recently made a pilgrimage to France to the grave of her son, Paul E. Bolding, who died in service during the World War. He was the first Hall county soldier to die in France and the local American Legion Post honored him by naming this the Paul E. Bolding Post.

Mrs. Bolding is the widow of the late Judge W. E. Bolding. She was a prominent member of the Baptist church. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. W. M. Johnson, Gainesville; Mrs. Urben Bowen, Americus; Mrs. L. B. Bryson, Louisville, Ga.; three brothers, T. H. Robertson, J. A. T. Robertson, R. R. Robertson, all of Gainesville; two sisters, Mrs. F. C. Brice, Gainesville, Ga., and Mrs. Gordon Thompson, Murrayville, Ga.

$20,000 COTTON LOSS IN WAREHOUSE FIRE

TIFTON, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—A warehouse of the Poulan cotton mills at Poulan, near here, in which 500 bales of cotton were stored was practically destroyed by fire last night. Damage was estimated at $20,000. Cause of the fire was undetermined. Operators expected to salvage 150 or more bales of the cotton.

LIFE SENTENCE BEGUN FOR HOMR PADGETT

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 11.—(AP) Homer Padgett, who is under life sentence for participation in the murders of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Browning in 1930, was taken to the state prison at Milledgeville yesterday to begin serving his term.

State Deaths And Funerals

MRS. ELIZABETH LAMBERT.

LA GRANGE, March 10.—Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Lambert, 78, whose death occurred Thursday at the home of her son, J. N. Lambert, in Gabbettville, were held Friday afternoon at the Long Cane church, with Rev. Grady Bradshaw, of West Point, officiating. Burial followed in Bethel cemetery.

Mrs. Lambert made her home with her daughters in Atlanta but was visiting in Gabbettville at the time of her death.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. T. E. Murphy and Mrs. C. T. Kitchens, of Atlanta; Mrs. W. S. Smith, of LaGrange; four sons, J. N. Lambert and Charles Lambert, of Gabbettville; T. J. Lambert and A. J. Lambert, of Atlanta; 19 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

MRS. MARY FRANCES DENNIS.

OGLETHORPE, Ga., March 11.—Mrs. Mary Frances Dennis, 63, widow of the late R. T. Dennis, died here at the home of her son, Rev. W. E. Dennis, Friday.

Her husband served in the South Georgia conference for many years and died in 1931 while pastor at Talbotton. Her son, Rev. W. E. Dennis, is now pastor of the Oglethorpe Methodist church.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist church at Oglethorpe Saturday morning, after which the body was taken to Talbotton to be buried by her husband. Mrs. Dennis is survived by two sons, her mother, three grandchildren and a number of other relatives.

DAVID S. BRANDON.

DUBLIN, Ga., March 11.—Funeral services were held here Friday for David S. Brandon, 64, prominent wholesale grocerymman, who died Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Brandon was a son of the late Dr. and Mrs. David S. Brandon, of Thomasville, spending his early life there, moving to Iron City, Ga., when 27 years old and shortly thereafter coming to Dublin where he had engaged in business since. His wife, formerly Miss Grace Pew, of Gloucester, Mass., together with five children, three of them triplets, all boys, survive.

J. H. W. MARTIN.

WASHINGTON, Ga., March 11.—Funeral services for J. H. W. Martin, 66, who was found dead in bed at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Zadove Smith, at Lovelace, were conducted Thursday afternoon at the Lincolnton Presbyterian church, and interment was in the city cemetery. Mr. Martin is survived by his wife and two children, Mrs. Walton and Mrs. W. L. Dallis. Other survivors are Mrs. E. H. Spires, a sister, of Knoxville, Tenn., and three brothers, Thomas, R. B. and Hamilton Martin.

T. C. GEISE, OF DAWSON, WILL BE BURIED TODAY

DAWSON, Ga., March 10.—Funeral services for T. C. Geise, 62, native of Dawson, a widely known sawmill and planing mill operator, will be held at the Dawson Baptist church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. W. H. Barrett, the pastor, will conduct the services and interment will be in Cedar Hill cemetery here.

Mr. Geise died late Thursday afternoon at the home of a sister, Dr. Mollie Geise, in Norwood, Pa., where he had lived for more than a year. The body was brought to Dawson Saturday afternoon and will lie in state at the Polk Funeral Home until the hour of the funeral on Sunday.

BARNESVILLE BLUES ANNUAL INSPECTION

BARNESVILLE, Ga., March 11.—The Barnesville Blues, officially designated Company B, 121st infantry, Georgia national guard, will hold their annual inspection Wednesday evening, March 22, Captain Homer Sappington, commander of the company, announced this week. Lieutenant Jesse E. Graham, of Macon, instructor of the regiment, will hold the inspection by his own request to the government. New drill regulations now in practice by the company will be used. The inspection will be preceded by a banquet, which will be sponsored by the Augusta Lambden P.-T. A., of which Mrs. D. C. Collier is president.

SPARTA ISHMAELITE 55 YEARS OLD TODAY

SPARTA, Ga., March 11.—The Sparta Ishmaelite, local weekly newspaper, will celebrate its 55th birthday on Sunday as the paper was established on March 12, 1878.

The unusual name of the weekly is the source of interest to all strangers and was recently prominently mentioned the "What's in a Name" column of a New York monthly.

In its more than a half century of service to Hancock county the paper has grown to be one of the largest weeklies in Georgia, being a full-sized, seven-column issue with a modernly equipped plant.

GEORGIAN CONFESSES TO COUNTERFEITING

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 11. (AP)—Berman V. Williams, Cave Spring, Ga., was bound over to the federal grand jury under $1,500 bond today upon his plea of guilty before United States Commissioner Henry F. Irwin to charges of possessing and manufacturing counterfeit money.

Williams, arrested last night, confessed that he had manufactured numerous counterfeit half-dollars here recently after learning the "trade" from a man in Birmingham.

The spurious money appeared to have been made of pewter and was easily distinguishable from United States money.

WOMAN ENTERS RACE FOR TAX COLLECTOR

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., March 11.—Mrs. Annie Simpson Smith, widow of L. D. Smith, Baldwin tax collector, who dieo last week, has made formal announcement for the unexpired term of her husband. She has been appointed to the office temporarily by Ordinary Bertie B. Stembridge, and a special election has been called for April 5 by Miss Stembridge.

Mrs. Smith will have one or more opponents in the race, it is understood. She has been handling the affairs of the office for the past two years, since her husband first became ill.

GEORGIANS ASSIST IN FORMAL RITES AT AKRON HANGAR

Mayor of Macon Presents Silver Service to Commander; Mrs. Moffett Pulls Silken Cord.

AKRON, Ohio, March 11.—(AP)—A mighty airship, monument to aviation and new pride of the navy, today was christened the U. S. S. Macon while representatives from the Georgia city for which it was named stood by, almost in awe.

Shortly before 3 o'clock Mrs. W. A. Moffett, wife of Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, pulled the silken cord that signalized the first formal recognition of the navy's newest ship.

A moment later, during a hush which filled the tremendous air dock where the big ship was berthed, she said: "I christen thee Macon," and the ship was launched. Forty-eight pigeons fluttered from hatchways, circled wildly through the open doors and the crowd of on-lookers, governmental dignatories, citizens and workmen, gave vent to emotions with a mighty cheer.

For many months the ship, sister to the Akron, has been under construction. And for many months, almost, men and women in Macon, Ga., had prepared to attend the christening ceremonies.

It turned out to be a cold day—sub-freezing temperatures in a northern Ohio climate that takes unkindly to March winds. But Mayor G. Glen Toole, of the mid-Georgia city, and eight of its most beautiful young women, to say nothing of numerous others, were too interested to mind.

The mayor stood ready to present a silver service set to Commander Alger H. Dresel, captain of the new ship, while the young women served as attendants to Mrs. Moffett. Included in the group was Mrs. Guyton Abney, Miss Fannie Smart, Miss Mary Shaw Sigman, Miss Marion Rose Napier, Miss Vivian Hay, Miss Leilia Ruth Homes, Miss Margaret Murphey and Miss June Williams.

The big ship, final unit in the navy's airship building program authorized in 1926, is being constructed by the Goodyear-Zeppelin Company.

The formal chirstening today does not mean she is ready to fly, however, as much remains to be done to the huge, silver-colored bulk before the take-off signal is given.

A test flight is scheduled for March 30, however, if this finishing work progresses according to plan.

Contract for building the big ship called for a cost of $2,450,000, while the government has spent nearly $8,000,000 in all in building the elder sister ship, the Akron, and the gigantic air-docks where the work is done.

The ship will carry a crew of 54 men, under command of Commander Dresel, who has been in charge of the Los Angeles and is now being detached from command of the Akron to take over the new ship.

The Macon, although built on the same general lines, will be a better and a smarter ship than is the Akron, her engineers say. It may be a trifle faster, as it is 8,000 pounds lighter, and will have numerous refinements developed since construction of the Akron.

Included in these is an automatic telephone system, a new trapese for picking up airplanes in flight, a changed electrical generating system and a simplified heating plant.

Length, height, gas volume and power plant of the two ships are identical.

The new ship will be floated by 6,500,000 cubic feet of non-inflammable helium gas and is 785 feet long, 132.9 feet in diameter, is driven by 4,480 horsepower, and is capable of speeds of more than eighty miles an hour.

She has a cruising radius of 13,000 nautical miles at 40 knots, and can carry five airplanes and has seven machine gun emplacements.

SWANSON WELCOMES "MACON" TO U. S. NAVY

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Secretary Swanson issued a statement today welcoming the U. S. S. Macon to the navy.

He thanked the citizens of Akron, Ohio, where the huge naval airship was built, and of Macon, Ga., "the former for having worked unceasingly toward the successful completion of the ship and the latter for having shown great interest in its construction and for having presented it with the name of their city."

MACON, PROUD, EAGER FOR VISIT FROM AIRSHIP

MACON, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—Macon folk are proud of the ZRS-5, which today was christened the U. S. S. Macon, but the man in the street is wondering when he will get to see the airship named for this middle Georgia city.

Leaders have invited the Macon to visit here in May during the celebration of the Georgia bicentennial but naval officials have indicated there is slight chance of the airship getting here by that time.

First plans had called for the commander of the ship to drop off in one of its airplanes and alight here, to be presented with the silver service Macon citizens gave him today in Akron. Later he would rejoin his ship in the plane. These plans were vetoed when it was found that in the event of a visit the airship's facilities for launching and receiving planes would not be complete.

FARMER FOUND DEAD OF SHOTGUN WOUND

BROOKLET, Ga., March 11.—(AP) W. C. Lee, 52, was found shot to death in the backyard of his home here today. A shotgun was lying nearby. He was a well-known farmer of this section. His wife and two children survive.

Assembly Faces Final Week With Major Bills on Calendar

Action on All Important Matters Before End of Session Predicted by Two Leaders.

The legislature enters upon the last week of its regular biennial session Monday with leaders confident that all major measures will be acted upon by both houses.

Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the house, and President Hamilton McWhorter, of the senate, said Saturday that night and day sessions of both bodies would be held this week, if necessary, to wind up the business of the legislature.

"Members of the house realize the stress of these times and are more than willing to work night and day to complete our tasks," the speaker said. "We will start from the word go Monday, and there will be not let up before midnight Saturday night."

President McWhorter expressed similar sentiments.

"Of course, the members of the senate realize the time has come for quick action on all important matters," Senator McWhohter said. "Our body will leave nothing undone when it goes home Saturday night."

Saturday Sessions Held.

The house and senate had sessions both in the morning and in the afternoon Saturday, and the vice chairman of the rules committee, Senator George W. Fetzer Jr., of Guyton, in the senate, and Representative Roy V. Harris, of Richmond county, in the house, announced Saturday night that meetings of their committees would be held today at which the program for the entire week will be mapped.

"We will lay out a good program and ask the legislature to live up to it," Senator Fetzer and Representative Harris said.

These important measures appear certain to be disposed of:

1. The appropriations bill, passed by the house but now in the senate, where revisions are regarded as certain to be made, thus requiring its return to the house.

2. Auto tag legislation, now in the hands of a joint conference committee, but with the committee not yet reported anywhere near an agreement.

3. Cotton holiday legislation for 1934 in Georgia, likely to come up for final action Monday or Tuesday.

4. Disposition of a report of a joint legislative committee which investigated rumors of job-selling in the department of agriculture. Impeachment proceedings will be instituted in the house Monday, the house was informed today.

Others Await Final Action.

Meanwhile, numerous other bills of wide importance, including a motor carrier regulatory proposal, a plan for creating a 10-man highway board whose members would be elected by the people, a salary reduction bill and a proposal for a convention to act on repeal of the 18th amendment, have been passed by one or the other of the two houses, and are to be acted on finally this week.

The house Saturday voted 75 to 48 to reconsider the resolution—which Friday failed to pass because it received only 100 votes for to 57 against—to submit national prohibition repeal to the people by popular vote. The rules committee is expected to put the resolution on the calender for action again on Monday. The senate has adopted a plan to submit the national prohibition repeal amendment by county unit vote.

Before hearing the reports of the Sisk committee investigating alleged job-selling in the department of agriculture the house Saturday also passed a resolution by Representative Duncan, of Houston county, directing the superintendent of purchases and all departments, boards and institutions of the state to buy products of Georgia farms, mines and factories for use in the various branches of the state government.

Knox Asks Withdrawal.

Senator Gordon Knox, of Hazlehurst, Saturday informed the senate in a statement that the resolution introduced by him Friday suggesting that the senate go on record as expressing itself as indifferent to needs of the state was offered in a spirit of levity. Senator Knox said that he intended no reflection on the character of any senator and he asked unanimous consent to withdraw the resolution. The senate ordered his statement turned over to the committee on state of republic, which has the resolution.

The fiscal year of the state will be changed from the calendar basis to July 1-June 30, under a house bill adopted Saturday by the senate. The senate also passed house bills allowing municipalities to establish airports without seeking charter amendments, setting forth the manner in which maps of survey should be prepared, and defining gum turpentine and its products as agricultural products.

Senate bills passed by the senate included a bill authorizing payment of pensions to veterans without proof of length of service, and a measure allowing cities to erect public works, relating to sewerage.

The senate agreed to house amendments to the administration-sponsored bill providing for collection, accounting and depositing of state funds. A house bill making of force the new code drawn up by a code commission, to include acts of the present session, was adopted by the senate.

Appropriations Meeting.

The appropriations committee of the senate will meet Monday to begin the work of trimming the house bill to fit within the budget, Senator Walter A. Sims, chairman, said. In connection with appropriations, M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, Saturday said that reports from one-half of the county school superintendents of Georgia show that for lack of funds 283 schools with an enrollment of 16,515 children have been closed, and 1,583 schools with an enrollment of 145,159 children will close during this month unless additional funds are sent to the counties during the month.

Senator Andrew Tuten, of Alma, chairman of the joint committee investigating charges of "undue secrecy" in connection with the letting of textbook contracts, said that his committee will meet at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Piedmont hotel.

Fred Morris Jr., of Marietta, and his bride, who have been visiting Senator Fred Morris, thirty-ninth, his father, have been extended privileges of the senate floor. Mr. Morris retired as a lieutenant in the navy after four years in the submarine service and is now a member of the law firm of Morris & Morris, Marietta.

Pathos and Humor In Wake of 'Quake

By the Associated Press.

Tales of tragedy and terror and of heroism and humor came from the California earthquake area.

Forest Brinkerhoff, young switchboard operator at the Dominguez substation of the Pacific Electric railway, stuck to his post when the first shock came, to throw a switch that would save the lives of many at the cost of his own. Searchers found his body in the ruins of the building.

While her home was being turned into a shambles, Mrs. Eugene Van Winkle gave birth to a girl at a Compton hospital. She was moved from her home at the first pronounced tremor.

Three men were killed when their airplane crashed as they were en route to aid quake victims at Long Beach.

Dr. A. M. Firkins, a Compton dentist, was operating on a patient. The building collapsed. He was pulled from the debris dead. The patient, a woman, walked unhurt from the wreckage, the dental apron and towel still across her shoulders.

Mrs. Naomi Ellers, bookkeeper for a Long Beach laundry, fled from the office of the building. She was killed when struck by an avalanche of brick. Had she remained in the office she would have lived. It was the only room which remained intact.

The bank holiday prevented death to scores of others at the same laundry. Business had slowed down almost to a standstill. The 20 women who did work during the day had gone home early—just half an hour before the quake.

The quakes failed to stop motion picture stars from discussing a prospective 50 per cent cut in salary at Hollywood. The players headed for a door of the conference room when the first quake came. Their chairman reminded them "the safest place is where you are." The meeting went on.

Surgeons were handicapped in their emergency work by shocks which swayed their operating tables.

During the series of quakes "Speedy" Dady defeated "Baby" Palmour in a bantamweight fight at Hollywood.

Several hundred Japanese residents of Terminal Island camped all night in San Pedro Hills, fearing a tidal wave.

Hundreds at Long Beach camped amid the ruins of scores of buildings under blankets on lawns, in parks and on vacant lots, in the glare of many fires.

A food shortage threatened at Long Beach and Compton, but immediate steps were taken to prevent it.

Telephone and telegraph lines were jammed with calls from anxious easterners who sought to learn the fate of relatives or friends.

Throughout the area men and women kept up a steady march through hospitals and morgues searching for the missing and mostly not finding them.

The glare of scattered fires over the stricken area added to the night's terror

Earthquakes are a matter of no consequence to old Doc Stork. Gail Diane Dickerson, a daughter of Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. F. D. Dickerson, of Inglewood, was born just as the first earthquake occurred. The lights went out at the hospital and a flashlight was used by the attending doctor.

If it hadn't been for her black cat Mrs. Blanche Morris, 42, of Hollywood, would not be on the casualty list. Frightened by the shock she rushed through her kitchen door, stumbled over the cat and broke her kneecap.

The feminine earthquake mode featured trousers. Hundreds of women dashed from their homes scantily clad in pajamas while a few donned the new fashioned trousers.

Five young men dashed from a Spring street gymnasium in Los Angeles clad only in bath towels.

One man, with the aid of crutches, hobbled into a Los Angeles restaurant. The shock came and the crutches were left behind as he ran outside

While frightened residents of Long Beach rushed about seeking a safe place an old woman in a wheel chair sat calmly reading a newspaper under the gleam of street light.

Sterling Taylor's last fling at chance cost him his life.

"Let's go home," proposed his wife, after a tour of Pine avenue pier.

"Wait a minute," said Taylor as they passed a corn game stand, where the first person getting a line filled with kernels won a prize. "I want to play this game just once."

Mrs. Taylor went on and lived. Her husband was caught in the debris and died in a hospital today.

Mrs. R. E. Gross, Memphis, Tenn., read the list of reported dead in the southern California earthquake today and stopped on the name of Mrs. Edna Avery Greenmeyer, listed as dead at Huntington, Cal.

"Why, we went through the San Francisco earthquake together," she remarked to friends. "I thought it was the end of the world. For six long miles, Mrs. Greenmeyer and I tugged a trunk down a San Francisco street to safety.

"And now she died in the earthquake of today."

Maurice Chevalier raced off a movie studio stage set with several swans at Hollywood when the first big earth shock struck. The French actor had been recording a song beside a shallow garden pool in which there were several swans.

Marlene Dietrich was autographing a picture for a friend and her pen made an abrupt line off the picture when the 'quake started. She finished her sigfnature and dated the picture as a souvenir of the occasion.

Jack Oakie was in a studio legal department debating whether to sign a 50 per cent salary cut agreement. The building began to shake and the startled Oakie seized a pen and signed the agreement.

Carole Lombard was toppled off a fitting stand while trying on an unusually tight gown in a wardrobe department.

Stuart Erwin almost had a traffic argument because of the 'quake. He had been stopped at a corner by a traffic signal and the driver of a car directly ahead though Erwin had hit his machine. He left his car and started toward Erwin but both suddenly realized what was happening.

Fred W. Cleland, of Long Beach, cashier of the Citizens' State bank, felt his fourth earthquake last night. He was on the outskirts of the San Francisco catastophe in 1906. In 1918 he felt the force of the San Jacinto shock and at Inglewood in 1920 he saw the destruction wrought by an earthquake there.

"This was the worst," he said.

Electric cars and buses ran on temporary schedules to the Long Beach area Saturday, route through Wilmington Junction because of power failure south of Dominguez Junction. An employe of the Pacific Electric railway was killed when the Dominguez Junction station tower collapsed, paralyzing temporarily the car system into Long Beach.

News of the California earthquake was displayed in European newspapers above everything else today and aroused the widest interest and sympathy.

The London Star commented editorially:

"The world will sympathize with America that in the hour of her greatest difficulties, nature should have added this last blow of an earthquake. . . . Americans have an inestimable gift of recovery and a confidence that bubbles like champagne. . . . They will rise to this new occasion as they have done before."

Most London papers used the trans-Atlantic telephone for direct interviews with Californians and the Evening Standard carried a graphic description of actually hearing the sounds of the shocks by telephone.

The pope directed the apostolic delegation at Washington to convey his sympathy and condolences to the population of the California dioceses stricken by the earthquake.

A message of sympathy to the governor of California and the mayors of Los Angeles and Long Beach was cabled to the United Press today by Genryo Kido, chairman of the board of directors of the influential Japanese newspapers Tokyo Nichi Nichi and Osaka Mainichi.

The message read:

"The report of the earthquake in Los Angeles and vicinity has shocked all Japan. I, on behalf of the 3,000,000 readers of our papers, extend the deepest sympathy and pray for speedy recovery in the devastated areas."

Reports arrests had been made for looting in the Long Beach area were denied today by Police Chief J. S. Yancey, who branded the reports as "ridiculous." "Not one arrest for looting has been made," he said. "The city to date has been absolutely free of looters."

Temples of worship at Long Beach will remain closed today, but community church services will be held in four city parks, pastors announced Saturday night

City schools will not open for at least a week, to give engineers time to examine the buildings.

Long Beach also will be without gas, its main item of fuel, until early next week.

The Los Angeles Memorial stadium, where the Olympic games were held last summer and the Pasadena Rose Bowl were undamaged.

Because of fogs it has been impossible to ascertain positions of main channels in the harbor at San Pedro that may have been changed by the earthquake shocks.

The house adopted a resolution of sympathy for the earthquake sufferers of California. It was introduced by Representative Kramer, democrat, California.

MISS SARAH STERRETT PASSES IN 79TH YEAR

Miss Sarah Elizabeth Sterrett, 78 years of age, died Saturday night at the residence of her nephew, Robert T. Sterrett, assistant treasurer of the George Muse Clothing Company, at 52 Maddox drive, N. E. She had been ill for some time.

Born in Lockport, N. Y., Miss Sterrett came to Atlanta in December, 1920. She was an active member of St. Luke's Episcopal church and had many friends in Atlanta.

Besides her nephew here, Miss Sterrett is survived by two other nephews, Bishop F. W. Sterrett, of Bethlehem, Penn., and L. S. Sterrett, of Middleport, N. Y.

Funeral services are to be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Spring Hill chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. Dr. John Moore Walker will officiate and burial will be in West View cemetery.

U. S. Court Lowers 'Bama Smoke Price

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 11. (AP)—A temporary injunction restraining the Alabama tax commission from requiring a 3-cent stamp tax on cigarets selling for 13 cents a package, was granted in United States district court here today by Judge W. I. Grubb.

The injunction, in effect, places the selling price at 10 cents plus a tax of 2 cents.

Petition for the injunction, filed by B. A. Schulte, Inc., contended that the established price of several leading brands is 10 cents and that the tax should be computed on the basis of the state levy of 1 cent for each 5 cents of the retail price.

Cigarets have been selling here from 13 to 15 cents, including tax, and the state contended this should be used as a basis for the tax.

Judge Grubb set next Saturday for a hearing to determine whether the injunction shall become permanent.

Long and Glass Near Physical Encounter

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Senator Glass, democrat, of Virginia, famous for his willingness "to fight at the drop of a hat" in boyhood, showed today that the spirit is still alive despite his more than 70 years.

After a bitter debate on the floor of the senate with Senator Long, democrat, of Louisiana, the two carried their differences on in a warm personal exchange after adjournment.

Glass, shaking his head angrily, told Senator Robinson, democratic leader, that he was "tired" of having Long aim personal attacks at him, after Long had attacked the emergency banking legislation passed Thursday because he said it failed to place state banks on a parity with national banks.

Long, standing near by, heard Glass' remarks and began a heated reply. Glass didn't wait for him to finish but jumped forward toward Long, his eyes ablaze with emotion.

Robinson took the Virginian's arm and despite Glass' momentary resistance, led him away. Long watched Glass a few seconds, then turned away speaking heatedly to no one in particular.

PUERTO RICAN BANKS ALLOWED TO REOPEN

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, March 11.—(UP)—Governor James R. Beverley permitted Puerto Rican banks to reopen today to meet industrial and commercial pay rolls and to prevent a further accumulation of small checks. The banks, closed since last Saturday, were to have opened next Monday.

BANANA COMPANIES UNABLE TO PAY OFF

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, March 11.—(UP)—American banana companies in Vera Cruz and Oaxaca states today were unable fully to meet their pay rolls because of the bank closure in the United States.

Speedy Passage of Sewer Bill By Legislature Is Forecast

Speedy passage of the senate bill providing a sewer district for Atlanta and its vicinity, and a sewer commission, is expected following a conference which will be held at the noon recess in the house Monday.

The conference will be attended by Representative S. Hadley Brown, of Brunswick, cheirman of the committee on counties and county matters, and members of the Fulton and DeKalb county delegations.

The bill was passed by the senate, but certain objections to it were offered. Luther Still, Fulton representative, objected to the charges on fixtures provided in the measure. It was expected that a substitute bill would result from Monday's conference, which would satisfy the objectors and yet would not affect the main provisions.

The sewer bill is largely a sanitary measure designed to do away with polluted streams in the suburban areas of Atlanta in Fulton and DeKalb counties. These areas in the past few years have grown beyond the sewer system provided by the city, with the result that there has been pollution of streams with resulting menace to health.

The sewer district provided in the measure would permit the city of Atlanta to build a sewer system not only adequate to the present needs of the suburban area but also for future needs that will be inevitable with increasing population.

Provision is made for the appointment of a sewer commission to take care of the administrative detail in such expansion.

The peculiar advantage claimed for the measure is that it does not provide for a bond issue, but makes it possible for the city to borrow the required amount of money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. These loans would be paid back from charges made to each person using the system. The charge would be levied on the fixtures necessary for connection.

To meet the requirements of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, municipal projects must be self-liquidating before they can avail themselves of loans. Under existing laws cities are empowered to pay for such developments only through bond issues and taxation. The senate bill empowers them to accept Reconstruction Finance aid without cost to the taxpayer.

REP. S. HADLEY BROWN.

The bill was passed by the senate, but met objections in the house. Mr. Still's objection was that the fixture charge was too high.

"Objections, however, should be met in a substitute bill," said Mr. Still, "which will be drawn and submitted following our conference on Monday. As DeKalb, as well as Fulton, county is effected, both house delegations will attend the conference."

LONE GEORGIA MEMBER EXPLAINS VOTE OF 'NO'

Tarver Declares Congress Abdicating Constitutional Rights.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—As the lone member of the Georgia delegation to oppose the new administration economy bill which gives President Roosevelt broad powers to reduce federal expenditures, Representative Malcolm Tarver, of Dalton, said late today he regarded the measure as an "abdication by congress of its constitutional rights."

While expressing himself in favor of drastic reduction of general governmental expenditures, Representative Tarver declared that a member of the house should surrender his seat and go home rather than vote for such a bill, which passed by a comfortable majority.

The Dalton congressman took the same view of the legislation when the house democrats met earlier in the day in an effort to bind members of the party, declining to be bound. All other Georgia members were in favor of committing the party to a common course of action on the vote later.

Explaining his opposition to the measure Judge Tarver said:

"I have no hesitancy in opposing this bill. The president, with all of the burdens placed upon him during the last few days, has obviously not had the opportunity to give to this legislation his individual attention as to detail, but has necessarily been compelled to rely upon the advice and opinions of others. It is apparent that these advisers have not been friends of those who have defended our country in time of war and their dependents. The legislation bears the earmarks of the propaganda of the so-called economy league, now guided by R. H. Curran, who doubtless feels that he has completed his job of destroying prohibition, in which he has been engaged for the last several years upon the employment of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, and is now free to do the behest of another bunch of millionaires in propagandizing the country against our veterans.

INDEPENDENT POSITION.

"I have maintained an independent position with regard to veterans' legislation in this body. I voted against the immediate cash payment of the bonus and would vote against it again at this time, realizing that it is a matter of impossibility under present conditions. For that position, I have been attacked throughout my district by those who pretended that I was not friendly to the veterans. I am strongly for economy and sound government, and I am ready to vote for economy in every branch of the government, but I do not believe in passing the buck. The first section of Article 1 of the constitution provides:

"'All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and a house of representatives.'

"In this bill, it is proposed to give the president of the United States legislative power, in the face of the constitution. It is an abdication by congress of its constitutional rights, duties and powers. Rather than vote for such a bill, a member should surrender his seat and go home. I am ready to legislate as it is my duty as one member to do. I am ready to vote to cut the emoluments of every officer and employe of the United States, including members of this house, and of every veteran of the United States, to whatever extent is necessary to balance the budget, be it 15, 25 or 50 per cent. But I am not willing to make only a 15 per cent reduction in my salary, and in the salaries of well-paid government employes and to cut down the veterans in amounts varying at different percentages, in the judgment of the president, up to 100 per cent in most disability allowance cases. Let's cut everybody alike, and let's have the nerve to do it ourselves and not delegate our duties to the president.

FAVORS ALLOWANCE.

"I am not willing to cut out entirely disability allowances. For nearly three-quarters of a century, the people of the south have been helping pay non-service connected pensions to Union veterans of the War Between the States, and in addition have been taking care of the Confederate veterans. Now, when a measure proposed by a republican president results in the equal distribution of similar benefits to World War veterans equally distributed throughout the country, New York millionaires start a great hue and cry, through their propagandist, Curran, against paying pensions for non-service connected disabilities. But they are careful to exclude from the power to cut out pensions for non-service connected disabilities the pensions of Union veterans of the War Between States, and their dependents. Why, I say, shall we make fish of one and fowl of the other? Why are our Spanish-American War veterans and our World War veterans not entitled to the same consideration that has always been accorded the Union veterans of the War Between the States? I am willing to go as far as any man in this house in the interest of economy. I am not afraid to vote to cut the benefits of World War veterans, by whatever percentage may be necessary, and I know they are willing to bear their share of our national burdens; but when I vote to do it, I must know that by the same vote I am taking an equal percentage from your salary and mine, from the salary of every government worker, from the salary of every admiral in the navy and general in the army, and from the benefits accorded to all veterans of other wars of the United States or peace time service."

Man Is Badly Injured When Car Hits Truck

Stephen Knowles, 25, of 702 Plum street, received a fractured skull Saturday night when the car which he was driving, crashed into a truck parked on Lee street near Fort McPherson. Knowles was taken to Grady hospital. Two other occupants of the car, George Dixon, 21, of Fayetteville, Ga., and Walter Huddleston, 22, also of Fayetteville, were treated at the hospital for minor lacerations, and dismissed.

The following were treated in the emergency clinic of Grady Saturday:

Charles K. Butler, 27, of 70 Boulevard, N. E., lacerations about the head.

Elizabeth Coble, 6, of Stone Mountain, burns about the head and body.

P. M. Jones, 24, of East Point, lacerations about the head.

Edna Trenton, 8, of Fairburn, superficial gunshot wounds.

Ella Branton, 9, of 171 Fair street, fractured left ankle, and cuts and bruises.

Young Roosevelt Enchanted by West

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 11. (AP)—Being "out where the west begins" was so interesting for Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the president, that he forgot to eat luncheon today.

He rode into the arena to be introduced to the crowd attending a rodeo at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, then munched two hamburgers while autographing programs. The 22-year-old Princeton undergraduate mingled with cowboys and cowgirls in front of the stock chutes and seemed to enjoy it.

Young Roosevelt spent last night here, after arriving by motor car with Ralph Hitchcock, a college classmate, from New York. They planned to leave by plane tomorrow for Tucson, Ariz., stopping en route at El Paso. Both expect to find jobs in Arizona and make their homes there for a time.

Rainey Votes Economy Despite Lack of Tie

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP) Speaker Rainey today voted for the Roosevelt economy bill.

"Clerk, call my name," the veteran democrat said.

"Mr. Rainey," said the clerk.

"Aye," Rainey said.

Usually a speaker votes only in case of a tie vote. His name is not on the roll call.

CAPT. FRIED NAMED MANHATTAN MASTER

Announcement was made by A. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Roosevelt Steamship Company, which operates the United States and American Merchant Lines, that Captain George Fried, U. S. N., retired, master of the new United States liner Manhattan, which was commissioned last August, has been chosen to command the Washington, a sister ship of the Manhattan, now nearing completion at the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J.

Mr. McCarthy also announced the appointment of Captain Schuyler F. Cumings, U. S. N. R., present staff captain of the Leviathan, to command of the Manhattan to replace Captain Fried, and the appointment of Captain Giles C. Stedman, U. S. N. R., master of the American Merchant, to staff captain of the Leviathan.

WASHINGTON TO SAIL FIRST TIME APRIL 25

The new 24,000-ton liner Washington, now within a few weeks of completion at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company for the United States Lines, will put to sea for the first time on April 25, when the builders' trials are scheduled to take place.

The Washington, according to H. J. McCarthy, general manager of the Roosevelt Steamship Company, general agent for the lines, will sail from the Camden yards at noon for a run down the Delaware river and out to sea, carrying officials of the yards and a group of technical experts. During the trials all of the propelling and auxiliary machinery will be tested, as well as the heating, ventilating and refrigerating systems and all gear and mechanical devices.

MONTREAL SAILINGS CHANGED IN TIME

MONTREAL, March 4.—Sailings from Montreal are to be made at 9 a. m., eastern standard time, instead of at 10 a. m. as heretofore during the coming St. Lawrence season, according to an announcement from Canadian Pacific headquarters here.

The earlier departure will enable passengers on the four fast Duchess liners to reach Glasgow on the evening of the sixth day out from Montreal, or land at Liverpool in less than a week. Thus the saving of an hour in sailing time permits of arrival in time for customs and immigration inspection instead of having to wait until the following morning, thereby saving 12 hours in the total crossing time.

"MEANEST" THIEVES ROB BLIND BEGGAR OF DONATED GUITAR

Fate dealth another heavy blow Saturday night to Emory Glenn, aged negro beggar, who resides at 223 Cain street. Emory is blind and Saturday night at the police station his sightless eyes were filled with tears. Some one had stolen his guitar—the instrument with which he earned his daily bread.

Emory had only recently acquired the guitar—it was given to him by a white friend after his own had been smashed to pieces several months ago when his wife, Viola Glenn, sacrificed her life to save his as a hit-and-run car bore down upon the aged couple on Pine street. The wife, who had spent her life leading her blind husband, pushed old Emory out of the way and herself was crushed beneath the wheels of the speeding car. Since then Emory has picked his way carefully about the streets of Atlanta entreating alms from passersby—alone.

Saturday night two youths, who, Emory said, were negroes, asked him to let them play his guitar for him. Emory gladly turned the instrument over. The negroes took it and ran.

AZALEA TRAIL OPENS IN MOBILE TODAY

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—Mobile's famous Azalea Trail will be formally opened tomorrow by Mayor Harry T. Hartwell, with fitting ceremonies in Bienville Square, a park in the business district of the city, which is the zero point of the trail.

The formal opening of the trail, which is a flower lined route through the residential and suburban districts, means that the Azaleas are in bloom and that the trail has been marked to guide visitors. The opening this year is somewhat later than usual. The freeze which occurred in the early part of February delayed the opening of the flowers about three weeks, but otherwise did very little harm. Some few of the early blooming light pinks were caught, but the watermelon pinks and other later blooming varieties which make the best show were not affected.

DR. COPELAND BEGINS REVIVAL HERE TODAY

Dr. Theodore Copeland, Dallas, Texas, evangelist, will begin a city-wide revival meeting for all denominations at 11 o'clock this morning at the Wesley Memorial church. Morning and evening services will be held until the revival ends.

DR. THEODORE COPELAND.

Dr. Copeland, who has conducted meetings all over the country, has just closed a meeting in his home city. The meetng at Wesley, he said, will continue indefinitely.

BILL OPENS WAY FOR CITY CUTS

Savings of $129,000 at Grady Urged in Report of Chambers.

Fulton and DeKalb county representatives in the general assembly Saturday were asked to declare a "period of emergency in the municipal government and to remove charter restrictions to enable the mayor and council to effect economies as W. Evans Chambers recommended annual savings of $129,834 in operation of Grady hospital and planned others to push the total near the $200,000 mark.

The bill asked Saturday by representatives of the Association of Building Owners and Managers, the Northeast Civic and Taxpayers' Leagues, the Atlanta Inter-Civic, Property Owners, Central Improvement, Hotel Men's and Apartment House Owners' Associations, the Real Estate Board and others, would confer on Mayor James L. Key and the council of Atlanta powers never before exercised by that body and with the exception that schools would not be touched by its provisions, it would clothe the mayor and council with absolute authority to conduct all departments of the municipality without restriction.

It should be approved, the mayor and council would have authority comparable to that conferred on President Roosevelt by the national congress. The mayor and council could consolidate, abolish and cut departments, shift employes, fix all salaries and otherwise operate the city without charter restrictions.

The following changes could be made, according to constructions of the proposed bill:

1. Raise or lower the water rates, charter restrictions being removed.

2. Pave the way for establishment of a department of public safety under one head.

3. Abrogate all civil service provisions of the charter, leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the mayor and council.

C. F. Palmer, leading Atlantan, presented the bill to a joint meeting of the Fulton and DeKalb delegations, and further discussion will take place at a meeting to be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the civic room of the Ansley hotel.

Those who presented the bill already have demanded immediate economy in government and told representatives that they want the bill approved so that the responsibility for reforms to decrease taxes can be placed where it should be—"in the mayor and council of the city of Atlanta."

Chambers recommendation concerning Grady hospital recommends abolition of jobs held by 84 employes and discontinuance of furnishing food and laundry for 200 others.

He also is studying a plan to place the white unit of Grady, the Albert Steiner ward, and the Battle Hill sanitarium, under one management, and consolidation of the city health department and the hospital to save "many thousands of additional dollars a year."

Included in the list of recommendations was a proposal to reduce the salary of John B. Franklin, superintendent, $2,500 a year.

"It is the opinion of the writer that the cost of caring for ward patients under the present prices of supplies and labor should certainly be no greater than it was in 1916 and 1917, when war-time costs prevailed and on this basis the cost of operating the Grady hospital in 1932 was $129,- and I strongly urge that this amount $34.15 more than it should have been be cut out of the present budget as compared to 1932 averages," Chambers said.

WALL ST. JOURNAL ACCLAIMS ACTION

New Bank Legislation Deals "Precisely" With Crisis, Paper Says.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The new emergency bank bill proposed by President Roosevelt and passed by congress contains "merits both many and solid," the Wall Street Journal, leading financial newspaper, asserted today in reviewing the legislation. The article in the Journal is as follows:

"President Roosevelt's budget messags lays hands upon the keylog in the country's economic jam—the national credit. He calls upon congress to do the thing without which every other effort at resuscitation will be vain. He tells congress that the United States of America shall not drift nearer to national bankruptcy than it already has; that it can no longer finance an overwhelming deficit from the very banks which it is attempting to save for the everyday uses of the people. He has pointed courageously and unerringly to the heart of a vital national necessity. The issue is in the hands of congress, and congress cannot fail to understand.

"The new emergency bank provisions contain merits both many and solid, which address themselves precisely to the acute phases of the crisis. The immediate and urgent necessity is to get all sufficiently sound banks into operation at the earliest possible moment so that business can resume its natural movement by check.

"The merits of the bank legislation are these:

"1. It settles the question of the gold standard so far as the administration's policy is concerned. We are 'on a gold basis'; the administration clearly intends to stay there. The powers taken to control transactions in gold and in foreign exchange, and to gather all the gold in circulation into the Federal Reserve system—where it should be, and nowhere else—guarantee this.

"2. It provides for resumption of banking functions to the full extent of all the country's 'live' banking assets wherever they are. 'Strong' banks can function without restriction; 'weak' banks can function to the extent of their remaining strength.

"3. It preserves continuity of operation of banks whose condition is one that may require reorganization. Under the principle of 'conservatorship' a bank can either be nursed back into strength or reorganized without receivership and without a complete closure—a most important and useful device of permanent value.

"4. It provides means whereby a bank can raise new capital by issuing preferred stock with priority as to both dividends and assets and without the double liability attaching to the common capital stock. Here also is a new and important departure which is of permanent value.

"5. It provides for an ample supply of currency in the shape of federal reserve bank notes to take care both of interbank exchanges and, if necessary, to meet depositors' needs.

"6. It provides for advances to member banks in the federal reserve system on assets other than 'eligible' collateral.

"All these provisions refer only to banks which are members of the federal reserve system. Any bank can join that system on short notice and thus obtain the advantages that they offer. For banks outside the system it is provided that they, too, may issue preferred stock which may be bought by the Reconstruction Finance Corportion or used as collateral for loans by that corporation.

"Finally, any corporation or individual may borrow directly from the federal reserve system on United States obligations for not more than 90 days.

"The new federal reserve bank note currency is to be issued to federal reserve banks on deposit by them with the treasurer of the United States government obligations and 'notes, drafts, bills of exchange and bankers' acceptances' as security. These notes are redeemable in 'lawful money' and are to have exactly the same 'currency' as have national bank notes now outstanding. They are to pay the same tax as do the latter. They are not directly redeemable in gold as are federal reserve notes.

"By these provisions all acute phases of the present difficulty are met and dealt with. The way is now open for business as soon as the necessary sifting of 'strength' from 'weakness' has been completed.

"All things considered and subject to the necessary defects and inevitable unexpected repercussions inherent in all emergency legislation, the new bank act mus be pronounced an excellent achievement and one that has been accomplished with remarkable rapidity and decision.

"The president's two messages constitute an emergence of real 'leadership' and as such are refreshing and and encouraging in the highest degree. They give solid ground for the hope that, whatever yet remains to be done, the cornerstone of national recovery has at last been laid."

Burns Prove Fatal To Atlanta Woman

Burns she received Friday night when her clothing caught fire from an open grate, caused the death early Saturday morning of Miss Chloe Proffit, 28, of 1814 Howell Mill road. Miss Proffitt was taken to Grady hospital but hope for her life was abandoned by physicians who examined her injuries.

Mrs. S. E. Fields, mother of Miss Proffit, said her daughter had been ill and was sitting in a chair near the fire. When she arose to return to her bed, sparks ignited her cloth ing. Mrs. Fields and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Camp, of the same address, wrapped the young woman in a quilt but too late to save her life. The mother and Mr. and Mrs. Camp were burned about the hands and were also treated at Grady.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, and interment will be in Crest Lawn cemetery. Miss Proffit's only close survivor is her mother.

Gold Is Pouring Back Into Treasury

NEW YORK, March 11.—(UP)—The stream of hoarded gold coming back to the New York Federal Reserve bank increased today until the week's total is expected to be approximately $100,000,000 or almost the amount withdrawn from the entire federal reserve system on the two days prior to the bank holiday. The 12 member banks reported their hoarding withdrawals for that period as $107,546,000.

First Lady's First Talk Made to Girl Scouts

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—In the first speech she has made since her husband became president, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today told the Girl Scouts "Whatever is good for the greatest number of people, we should subscribe to, and should accept whatever changes that will bring to us."

Aiding in observing the 21st anniversary of the Girl Scouts, she afterwards lighted in Constitution Hall, not far from the White House, 21 green candles on a birthday cake to celebrate the organization's coming "of age."

Horse Racing Is Assured Atlanta as Leaders Back Move; Wilbert Robinson Calls Off Deal With Pels for Guy Sturdy

Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson Recalls the Good Old Days

"Those were the days," said Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson, "when we wore those pump-handle mustaches."

We were talking about the good old days. That is Your Uncle Wilbert was talking. I was listening. The good old days sound good in the hands of such an expert talker as Your Uncle Robby.

And naturally any fellow who has spent 50 years in baseball, and cutting quite a figure too, is likely to have quite a few yarns stored away in his noggin.

"I used to have quite a mustache," said Robby, as he meditated on the glories of the good old days. "Yes, sir, quite a mustache. And waxed at the points. All ball players had them."

There was a chuckle from one corner of the room where Mrs. Wilbert Robinson was sitting. Mrs. Robinson, known affectionately as "Ma" Robinson, does not get much chance to talk because Your Uncle Wilbert does the talking for the family.

"What are you laughing at, Ma?" asked Wilbert Robinson.

"It used to be such a job," she said, "to get that mustache to balance. I used to call to the children each morning, 'Come children and help get your father's mustache straight'."

It is really too bad that a fire destroyed a certain building in Philadelphia else the mustache would have been preserved for posterity.

When Wilbert Robinson was catching for the Athletics he became so popular that a wax museum made a figure of him. It stood right near the entrance. And the figure was clad in a uniform of the Athletics.

But a fire came along one night and when morning came Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson had melted and run all over the floor. And so the mustache is preserved only in photographs.

But, as I said; there is no end of yarns in Wilbert Robinson's memory. And naturally the Orioles, the old Orioles who really made baseball, supplied the most of them.

A FOOTRACE FOR FOUR RUNS.

One which Robby likes best concerns the rivalry between the old Orioles and the Washington club. They were not so far apart and the rivalry was intense.

"I was not so fat in those days," said Robby, reflectively, gazing down at his expansive girth. I was pretty fast. The records showed that I usually beat out 18 or 20 bunts each year.

"There was a Washington catcher named Tug Arundel and he was a bit plump like me. They were always kidding him. 'Hey, Tug, Robinson can beat you running', was their favorite jibe and this used to anger him no little. He did not care for me one bit.

"One day we were in Washington and the bases were full and two out. We were three runs behind. I was at bat. And I struck out. But Arundel dropped the third strike. So I started running.

" 'You can't catch me,' I yelled at Arundel.

" 'I can, you so and so', he said in a rage, and started for me.

"Well, sir, I kept running and he kept following me, cussing me with every hop and so he chased me all around the bases and right into home plate with the winning run, the three runners going ahead of us.

"And after that he never argued about being able to outrun me."

THE LEMON THAT ENDED A GAME.

The Washington rivalry, said Your Uncle Wilbert, was such that when the Orioles came into the park, beautiful ladies in the front row would lean out and try to jab the tips of umbrellas into the eyes of the Orioles.

And the management, which seems to have had sordid financial thoughts even in those days, used to refuse to start the game in Washington until 4:30 o'clock so that all the government employes would be able to attend.

"Most of the games went into darkness," said Robby, "but one day we were playing and the game was slow.

"It was almost dark. We kept asking the umpire to call the game but he wouldn't do anything the Orioles asked.

"We had a pitcher who was a bit daffy," said Wilbert Robinson. "He would drink very little water but he would keep lemons in his pockets and get the juice from them to quench his thirst.

"After we had requested the game to be called again and had it refused, this pitcher wound up and threw.

" 'Strike one', yelled the umpire.

"I took what I had caught and showed it to him. It was a lemon. 'Look what you called a strike on', I said.

"He didn't hesitate, but threw up both arms and yelled, 'Game called on account of darkness'.

"But he never would have called it unless that pitcher had thrown in a lemon."

THE SOUTHERN CIRCUIT.

Unless it is my astigmatism again, the chief rivals of the Atlanta Crackers this season are a few steps out in front.

And largely because they have those lines from the farm to the big city. New Orleans, Cleveland farm, should be one of the most improved teams in the league this season. And Chattanooga, with that old baseball rascal, Joseph Willing Engel at its head, should be almost as good as last season. They will not be quite as good because the pitching staff and the outfield will not be as potent.

Nashville is out in front with the league's best outfield and some good pitching. The infield isn't so warm as yet. But the Vols look surprisingly good. Three hard-knockers such as Lance Richbourg, Zack Smith and Stanley Keys in the outfield will give a tremendous punch. So enthusiastic is Charley Dressen that he comes out on verbal flat feet and predicts a pennant. To date he is the only manager with that much stamina.

Memphis will miss Walter Beck's 27 victories of last season. Unless, of course, Beck comes back, which isn't likely. There's no Beck on the staff.

Birmingham may be dismissed as not quite as good as last season. The same for Little Rock. And Knoxville.

Atlanta remains a mystery outfit but Charley Moore is sure to be somewhere in the race and not serving as anchor for the league.

New Orleans, Nashville and Chattanooga look best. But next month is another month.

HE DISLIKES HITCH-HIKERS.

Charley Dressen, the Vol manager, did not enjoy his trip to Columbus, Miss., where the Vols will train, because of the hitch-hikers. Their upraised thumbs reminded him of umpires calling him out at second.

LEADERS BACK HORSE RACING FOR ATLANTA

Running Races Assured During Fair; Leading Stables Coming.

By Ralph McGill.

Horse racing, minus the wagers, is assured for the Southeastern Fair Grounds track on April 10, 12, 14 and 15 with the Southeastern Derby as the big event for the final day, according to announcement from Mike Benton, president of the association.

State and city officials have given their approval of the wagerless races; local merchants and hotels have been contacted and are enthusiastic about having various races named for their establishments; railway express people are working out the details for the shipping of horses from three racing points and plans are about completed.

FAVORABLE HERE.

Announcement of the proposed wagerless racing week was made first in The Constitution two weeks ago and aroused much favorable comment and spurred the work to complete the plans.

Benton has letters from the Cuban American Jockey Club and from owners of racing stables at Miami and New Orleans. At least 100 horses are expected to be present by April 9, when a free day is planned at which the public will be permitted to watch the arrival and the warming up of the thoroughbreds.

There is no law against races without betting, such as are planned for Lakewood Park. This new program is just a part of the entertainment planned by Benton, the progressive new president of the Southeastern Fair.

Racing at Hialeah Park in Miami has been larger this season than ever before. The racing plant was jammed despite the bank holiday. Florida, of course, has the mutuel machines and the state reaps a good amount of taxes which relieves the taxpayers.

OTHERS PASS BILLS.

It is interesting to note that Georgia, which has a race bill before the legislature, would be following the lead of many other states were the bill to pass. Oregon and Washington are the latest states to pass legislation permitting legalized races with wagering through pari-mutuel machines.

Nine states now permit racing and 20 others are considering bills with their chances of passing reported as favorable.

Other states are introducing bills as legislators seek to find some new sources of taxation which will not come directly out of the purse of the citizen. Races always provide good sources of taxes. Oregon, Washington, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Nevada, Illinois and Montana.

Three states allow racing with "oral" betting and the state derives no revenue from them. They are dying out as the admission price is necessarily high. These states are expected to pass legislation immediately bringing in the mutuel machines.

PLENTY OF "TAKE."

Maryland tracks paid $585,436 into the state last year. Kentucky paid a like amount. Illinois brings in bout $1,000,000 a year.

The "take" in the new states would be less, of course, until the racing was established. But it is a new source of revenue.

The Lakewood program will be wagerless as the state law permits races but forbids any form of wagering so that the state may gain revenue from the machines.

Lakewood park has been without racing for a great many years. The one-mile track is ideally suited for running races.

GEORGIA BEATS FURMAN TANKERS

GREENVILLE, S. C., March 11.—(AP)—The University of Georgia swimming team vanquished Furman's aquatic defenders, 61 to 22, here today.

The Athenians excelled in all swimming events but diving honors went to Furman. One first and two second places of the meet went to Furman.

Summary:

160-Yard Relay, Free Style—Georgia (H. Hodgson, Jefferson, M. Hodgson and Jones), first; Furman (McCall, Smith, Adair and Sacco), seconds. Time, 1:25.1.

220-Yard Breast Stroke — Hoppenstein, Georgia, first; Kahn, Georgia, second; Glass, Furman, third. Time, 2:36.3.

150-Yard Breast Stroke—Atkinson, Georgia, first; H. Hodgson, Georgia, second; (Furman unentered). Time, 2:1.1.

40-Yard Free Style—M. Hodgson, Georgia, first; Jefferson, Georgia, second; McCall, Furman, third. Time, 0:19.4.

100-Yard Free Style—M. Hodgson, Georgia, first; Jones, Georgia, second; McCall, Furman, third. Time, 0:57.5.

440-Yard Free Style—Steinberg, Georgia, first; Geer, Furman, second; Murray, Georgia, third. Time 6:31.

Fancy Diving—Sacco, Furman, first; Wilson, Furman, second; Hodgson, Georgia, third.

220-Yard Free Style—M. Hodgson, Georgia, first; Blackman, Georgia, second; Meindel, Furman, third. Time, 2:34.5.

180-Yard Relay Medley—Georgia (Atkinson, Hoppenstein and Jones), first; Furman (McCall, Glass and Childers), second. Time, 2:58.

Macon Team Wins Sunday School Play

MACON, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—Led by Tech Long and Tommy Moran, accurate shooting forwards, Centenary Methodist, Macon's senior Sunday school champions, defeated Pattillo Memorial, Decatur, 27-26, in the finals of the state Sunday school one-day basketball tournament at the Macon Y. M. C. A. tonight.

Peachtree Christian, Atlanta, opened the day's play with a 47-to-34 victory over East Side Baptist, Columbus. In the semi-finals Centenary Methodist, Macon, defeated St. Michaels, Savannah, 29 to 18, and Pattillo Memorial, Decatur, eliminated Peachtree Christian, 36 to 19.

Browns Start Season Without Hard Hitter

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—For the first time in many years the St. Louis Browns will be without a "slugger."

The last "slugger" to leave the Browns was Goose Goslin, who was preceded by Bill Jacobson and Heinie Manush, all heavy hitters.

By Ralph McGill.

It seems to me that Coach William A. Alexander has some very nice looking sophomores and that his squad of spring football players is heavier than it has been in some years.

This means that I will have to dodge Coach William Alexander for a few days to avoid having him put the verbal slug on me for suggesting such a thing.

"Won't your team weigh more next year, Mister Alexander?" asked a timid football reporter Saturday afternoon, as the Jackets went through a scrimmage at the Rose Bowl field.

"I don't know because I am not interested in weights anymore," he said. "It does not matter how large they are. They are no good at all if they cannot show some speed and some brains. I wish all teams we played were big, slow, dumb teams."

LOOKS PROMISING.

And with that he went back to his watching.

Starting with "Circus" Lyons, the Ball Ground center, and running along through the tackles, guards, ends and backs one finds some innocent sophomores showing up.

Pug Boyd, the Tech High star, was used some Saturday afternoon. He showed that he has promise but that he is still a sophomore at college football. All the sophomores always show this very plainly. And that is why the coaches do not go into a dance when they see sophomores and know they must depend on them.

Boyd, nevertheless, shows promise. But Saturday afternoon the play of Billy Street, another Tech High boy, and the play of Bill Martin, the boy from Chester, S. C., was even more promising.

Jim Barbre, of Lanier: Hoot Gibson, of Tech High, and Kitty Katz, of Boys' High, are the sophomore ends.

Lefty Eubanks, of Lanier; Fulton Brittain, of Birmingham, and Phil Chance, of Florala, Ala., are the sophomore tackles. John Wilcox, the Tyler (Texas) fullback, has been shifted to a guard position.

GO BY QUICKLY.

There are other sophomores out there. But their faces are so new that it was quite difficult to learn them all. It was only by dint of much scrambling around that the names already listed were obtained. Because all coaches regard a sophomore as a sophomore until he has aged enough to be otherwise. The Tech schedule, I think, will age the boys by November 1.

The old heads on the squad looked very good. The play of John Poole, center, was very good indeed. That is it was until he went and hurt his ankle in the scrimmage.

And Wink Davis also was looking very good carrying the football, as was Peterson, the Swede.

Edward Laws and Doc Brady, the linemen, have some weight to take off. But they are dependable linemen always.

It will be a heavier squad and it will be a more versatile outfit next fall. But that schedule. Have you seen it?

All hands were mustered for the scrimmage and there was a lot of experimenting. A pleasant time, however, was had by all.

Woodward's Horse Wins Havana Race

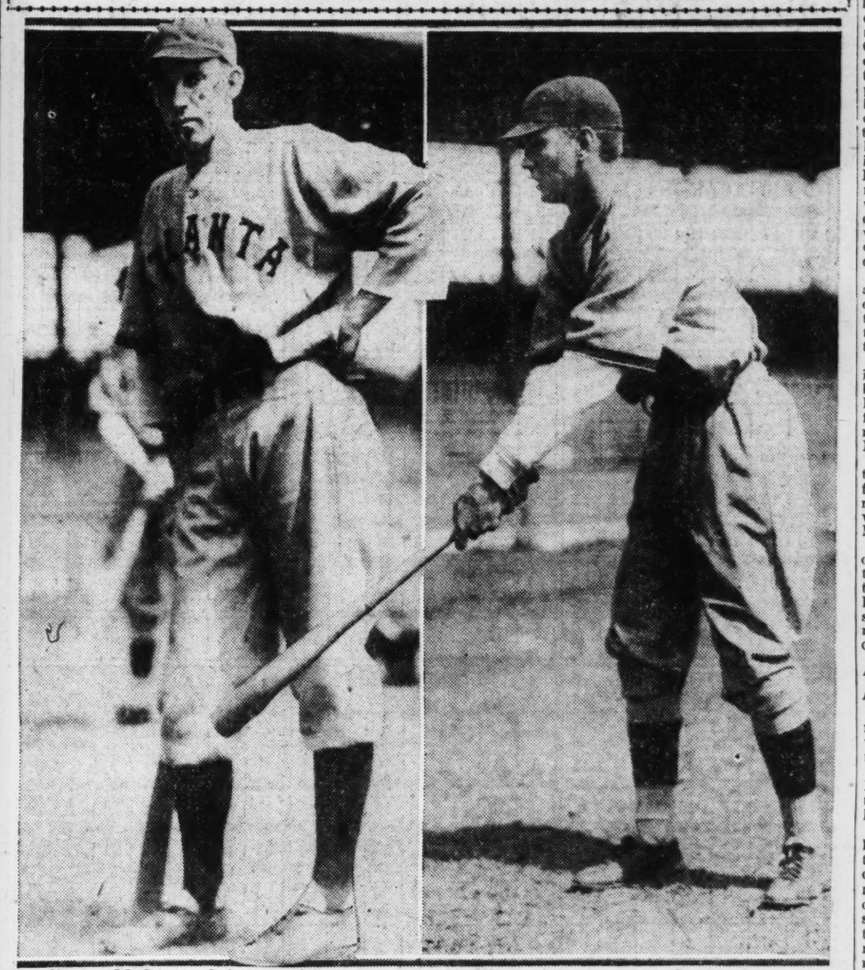

HAVANA, March 11.—(UP)—O. F. Woodward's Sweepilla won the $2,500 added Cuban juvenile stakes, outstanding event on a well-balanced program of eight races at Oriental Park today. J. H. Louchheim's Biddy Gal was second, with Fred Weiner's Shoteur third.

Eight two-year-olds sprinted the four furlongs, run in the creditable time of :48 3-5. W. Curran rode the Sweep filly and her backers collected 8 to 1 in the oral speculation.

NEW YORKER WINS.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 11. (AP)—Mark Stuart, of New York, won the Belmont Manor golf tournament today, overwhelming the youthful Canadian player, L. Miller Jr., 11 and 9 in the final round.

Two Star Prospects at Cracker Camp

Jimmy McCarter, left, promising young shortstop from St. Paul, and Red Rollings, third baseman, are gaining recognition from Manager Charley Moore at the Crackers' Mobile training camp. Both players are looking good in the workouts. Cracker fans are apt to see a lot of these two young men during the season's campaign.

CHARLEY O WINS IN MIAMI RACE

MIAMI, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Charley O., from the R. M. Eastman estate, today won the $10,000 Florida Derby, defeating nine other pick three-year-olds over one and one-eighth miles at Hialeah Park. Mrs. Payne Witney's Jungle King, the favorite, ran second and Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Inlander third.

Johnny Gilbert, the country's leading jockey last year, brought Charley O, a son of the famous Hourless, home with three lengths to spare over Jungle King, ridden by Silvio Coucci. Another three lengths separated Jungle King and Inlander.

The winner was clocked in the fast time of 1:49 3-5, only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record. He paid his backers $22.40 for $2 in the mutuels while his owner received $10,475.

Oh, Dear Me, How Foxx Slugs!

MIAMI, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Jimmy Foxx, who hit 58 home runs last year, struck out with the bases loaded in the seventh inning and hit into a double play in the ninth as the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 4, in the opening game of their spring exhibition schedule today.

Score by innings:

Athletics ..	200	200	000	4	11	0
Brooklyn ..	030	210	00x	6	10	1

'Red' Rollings Fugitive From Cardinal 'Gang'

Cracker Third Sacker Realized Life's Ambition Before He Was Railroaded; Likes Atlanta.

By Jimmy Jones.

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—Russell (Red) Rollings, the new third baseman of the Atlanta club, is a fugitive from a major league chain gang. No, he isn't going to write a book on the subject, but he can sit for hours and pour his narrative of woe into the ear of any sympathetic listener.

The redhead, whose hobbies, as you have no doubt heard several times, include making household pets of snakes and riding in wild west rodeos, is very young as ball players go, despite his nine years in the game. He is 26 to be exact. A few years back his career looked to be as promising as that of any young player. He was with the Boston Braves and going pretty good. Then Judge Fuchs, owner of that club, cooked up a deal with the St. Louis Cardinals for "Red" Worthington, the outfielder, and Rollings was tossed in as lagniappe. The deal went through in 1930 and "Red" found himself shipped to Rochester, a leading Cardinal subsidiary.

It was there he fell into the hands of the Philistines. For the next two years, he was jumped about from one Cardinal "farm" to the other on overnight orders from headquarters. They sent "Red" where they jolly well pleased and he had little voice in the matter.

MANAGED ONCE.

He even had one brief experience as a manager. That was at Columbus, Ohio, in the American association. The manager was fired and Rollings placed in temporary charge until another was obtained. But Rollings' tenure of command was short. He started a young pitcher one day and the latter immediately became wild and began plunking batters in the side and walking them down to first. The president of the club, who always sat in a box seat, kept shouting orders to Rollings to take him out. Now "Red" was never a fellow to be bull-dozed into anything, so he left the pitcher in the game. The club president kept on shouting and waving his arms in frantic jestures, but the manager pro tem. didn't even look at him. After the game he approached "Red" and wanted to know why he had deliberately disobeyed his orders.

GOT OWNER TOLD.

"Because," drawled Rollings in his slow Alabama speech, "I've always wanted to manage a club just for one game so I could tell the owner where to head in; that was the reason I didn't yank that pitcher."

Needless to say, that night "Red" found himself on his way to another Cardinal stop. But he had had his lifetime wish. He went to Denver where he had a big season in 1932, leading the league. Atlanta heard about him and bought him out of the chain. That made Rollings decidedly happy.

At his age, he still figures that he can get back to the big leagues. Certainly he has a better chance now that he is owned by an independent club.

"It is a relief to get signed up, for I know I'm going to like Atlanta and have a big season," Rollings stated. In all of his career below the majors he has rarely failed to hit above .300 and he is the poetry of movement in his fielding. He picks up grounders gracefully and has a snap throw to first that is a peach. He is a left-handed batter and probably the most colorful third sacker Atlanta has had in many years. He will be popular with the fans at Ponce de Leon, especially the bleachers.

Cecil Travis Gets Praise Of Cronin

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—Joe Cronin, 26-year-old manager of the Washington Senators, is thoroughly sold on Cecil Travis, the boy third baseman who went up from Chattanooga.

"He is the best natural hitter of any infielder I have seen come to the big leagues since I've been there, and while he may not hit quite .368, his average in the Southern, I will predict that he will hit big league pitching this year." Cronin told newspapermen today.

Cronin also is fairly sure of Cliff Bolton, Travis' teammate at Chattanooga last year, as one of the Washington team's catchers. Cronin stated that Bolton also had shown him that he could hit and that he had improved as a receiver this spring.

"I feel fairly certain in saying that both Travis and Bolton will start the season with us and that while Travis may not be a regular this year because of Bluege's presence on the roster, his chance of being sent to Chattanooga are slim right now."

Bobby Learns New Sway During Los Angeles 'Quake

By Grantland Rice.

(Copyright, 1933, for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 11.—Bobby Jones had a new experience in regard to swaying last night. The celebrated golfer has always figured that the sway was harmful and something inclined in the general direction of trouble.

He still feels that way. For last night he ran into his first earthquake and as the floor began to rock he admitted that he couldn't tell whether he had most of his weight on the right or left foot.

This was the worst earthquake Los Angeles ever experienced. It was not bad enough to demolish buildings, but it had buildings swaying back and forth as plastering fell to the floor and lamps overturned. Chairs slid along the floor and lights went out. Furniture skidded about and it was impossible to walk in a straight line even on a diet of orange juice or water.

"This is my first earthquake," Bobby said, "and as far as I am concerned it can be my last. After what has happened to the banks lately, all we need now is an earthquake and a tidal wave to make it perfect. Then we can start from scratch again."

Crackers Offered Champ Hog Caller

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—All kinds of ball players have been offered the Atlanta Crackers this spring, but it remained for Mike Kelly, Minneapolis manager, to offer the first hog caller. The player's name is Pea Ridge Day and he holds the hog calling championship of Arkansas.

Day, a right-hander, was on Uncle Robby's Brooklyn staff a few years back. The Minneapolis team, in training at Montgomery, Ala., near-by, sought to peddle Day to the Crackers. But he is a Class A man and the Crackers don't need any more, so he was turned down.

ROBBY SEEKING 10-DAY OPTION ON PETE SUSKO

Phelps Holds Things Up; President Issues Ultimatums.

By Jimmy Jones.

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—President Wilbert Robinson today called off the deal for Guy Sturdy, New Orleans first basemen, in a long distance conference with Larry Gilbert. The move was made partially because Crackers are now seeking Pete Susko of Birmingham, upon whom they hope to get a ten-day option until the class problem is settled and the club has had a chance to look Babe Phelps over. Robinson also sent ultimatums to both Phelps, first baseman, Eddie Phillips, catcher, to report at once and indicated he might give Catcher Ralph Butler, another holdout, his outright release. Robinson also got in touch with Billy West, Birmingham president regarding Susko and he said he would let the Crackers have him on option in event deal now underway does not go through.

Sturdy wanted to play for Atlanta and the salary was agreeable but the class question makes it imperative for the Crackers to look over Phelps. If the latter fails, Susko will be obtained.

Robinson also stated that a move is on in the Southern to reduce bleacher seats to 40 cents and that Larry Gilbert told him he would vote for it. Robinson favors it but the matter is up to the directors he said. Nashville reported in favor of cut.

Robby notified Art Weis, outfielder, to make a deal for himself if he could find something better. If Weis does not come in Robby will sign Bonowitz and start with two class B men, McKee and Sington, in outfield.

Eddie Phillips wrote that he would catch 140 games for the Crackers this year if necessary and Robby thinks he will be signed soon. Theo Kleinhans is kicking over $175 month salary offer. Robby wired he would raise him if he took the place of a class A man on the staff.

Moore Faces Rookie Problem.

MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—The annual question of selecting A's and B's, with the added problem this year of reducing rosters to the new limit of 16 men, will occupy the attention of Manager Charles Moore for the next two weeks of the club's training stay here.

Moore is just beginning to give heavy tought to the situation, now that most of his regulars-to-be are in camp, or headed this way. He soon must start the all-important business of separating the sheep from the goats, so to speak. It is a bit early yet to tell a great deal about some of the rookies, of which there are a goodly number here. During the present week, however, Moore has been sending his young pitchers over the jumps with a view of determining as early as possible whether they have the stuff or not.

One of the most important of the "B" men, however, has not arrived. And his showing here may or may not be the key to the situation. His name is Gordon Phelps, gargantuan first baseman. If he makes the grade at first, Moore can forget about his B infield problem and apply his energies to the pitching staff.

DASHIELL REPORTS.

Another important personage who has now shown up is John Wallace Dashiell, the second baseman, around whom Moore hopes to build his double play combination. "Red" Rollings has signed and is the fixture at third base with the release of Johnny Chapman. Buster Chatham, the wee but highly efficient shortstop, is in the fold. If Dashiell were here, more could be told about how the rest of the infield will stack up, but since

CRACKERS LOSE TO SENATORS, 4-3

HARTWELL FIELD, MOBILE, Ala., March 11.—Charley Moore's Atlanta Crackers, with three kid pitchers on the mound, forced the Washington Senators to the ninth inning this afternoon before bowing, 4 to 3, in a well played exhibition game. It was the first of the season for both clubs.

Lefty Carrithers, who started, yielded the Senators three runs in the first inning, but retired them scoreless in the next two frames. Mayo, Atlanta boy, then pitched two scoreless innings against the big leaguers.

Hoke Smith Long, youthful south Georgian, was the losing Cracker hurler but was more puzzling than any of the Cracker pitchers. He worked four innings, three of them scoreless, but committed a balk in the ninth, letting Kerr score.

Leading Bowlers Entered in Constitution Doubles Duckpin Meet

EVENT BEGINS FRIDAY NIGHT WITH 3 GAMES

Final Set To Be Rolled Saturday Night at Blick's Center.

The line is forming on the right for The Constitution's first annual handicap doubles duckpin tournament to be held Friday and Saturday of this week at Blick's bowling center. Already leading bowlers of the city have entered their names for the event.

The crack five-man team selected to compete in the national duckpin congress at Hartford in April, consisting of Walter Lawson, George McKay, Dewey Bowen, Paul Etheridge Jr. and John Blick, is entered. These star makers of duckpin history have selected partners and are ready for the signal to start rolling.

UNIQUE TOURNEY.

The Constitution tournament is unique in that it requires no entry fee, allows full handicaps in accordance with the ability of the entrants, and permits any two bowlers in the city to team up.

There will be engraved gold medals for the winning team.

Here are the teams that have already entered:

Walter Lawson and George McKay, John Blick and Andy McElroy, Dewey Bowen and Carl Tidwell, John Bell and L. Perryman, George Hiram Tayler and Ed Plant, Gwaltney and Gunn, Billingsley and Rosser, D. I. Tignor and J. Srochi, W. F. Lowry and Herbie Surratt, Paul Etheridge Jr. and Bill McAdams, Howard Lipsius and Wilbur Zurn.

Among other bowlers who are going to compete but have not selected their partners are L. N. Tappan, O. J. Metcalf, Hal Ward, Howard (Strike) Parker, L. B. Outler, Joe Mangum, Fowler, Stuart, O'Neil, Smith Hairston, Paisley, Tillman, Ralph Grist, H. L. Philler, Archie Lewis, Cochran, Syfan, Williams, Warrington, Sustin and Donnofer.

HANDICAPS.

With averages as of March 4 as the basis, handicaps will apply on two-thirds the difference between the bowlers' averages and the scratch mark of 228 for each team.

The tournament will get under way at 8 p. m. Friday, with three games to be rolled. The final three games will be bowled at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

The line is forming to the right. Enjoy a new deal. No entry fees; no restrictions; gold medals for the winners.

BLACKER THE FISH—BETTER THE DAY FOR FISHING

On the above Fisherman's Calendar the best days for fishing are indicated by a solid black fish, days not so good by a partially black fish, and poor days for fishing by a white fish. This calendar is scientifically compiled, using the moon, the signs, and every known factor that has a bearing on fishing as used by the "Old Timer," as well as the modern Sportsman. Use discretion in selecting your fishing days—do not go when it is stormy, windy, tides against you, or the waters muddy—but select clear calm days when the fish shows solid black and you will find this calendar to be surprisingly accurate for both inland and deep sea fishing, and for any waters in or surrounding the United States and Canada.

Letters Awarded To Emory Athletes

Eight varsity and eight freshman numerals in basketball were awarded to Emory students by Athletic Director Jeff McCord. Out of 91 players eligible, only 16 were mentioned for a place on the all-star team, in the coaches' poll, on which basis the players were selected.

The receiving varsity letters were. Morgan Cantey, Jimmy Loveless and Alf Hind, forwards; Grier Martin and S. R. Bridges, centers; Francis Nunn, Irving Greenberg and Johnny Neal, guards.

Freshmen receiving numerals were: Chris Conyers, Charlton Collar, C. W. Dobson, C. A. Sears, Robert Regenstein, Herbert Jones, J. M. Flournoy and P. A. Redmond.

The medical team, which won the Emory intramural basketball championship with 12 games won and two lost, placed Greenberg and Loveless on the star team.

Women Golfers To Play Tuesday

Members of the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association will stage their weekly tourney at the Capital City Country Club Tuesday. Score cards will be filed for use in determining handicaps for a tourney, which is scheduled to begin Monday, March 27, at Capital City.

Washington Seminary Beats North Avenue

Washington Seminary defeated North Avenue Presbyterian, 28 to 23, last night on the Henry Grady court in the close of the two schedules. It was one of the best girl's games of the season and was full of excitement.

The first half was close but N. A. P. S. came back strong in the third quarter to take the lead, only to lose in the final period. The playing of the guards for North Avenue was very good with Kneale and Allais playing exceptionally well. Murrey, with 20 of her team's points, and Timmerman, a sub, were best for Seminary.

PRO-AMATEURS PLAY THURSDAY

Howard Beckett and the Capital City country club will be hosts Thursday at the formal opening of the annual pro-amateur golf tournaments to be sponsored by the Atlanta Golf association in co-operation with the Atlanta Professional Golfers association. The events will continue for several months on a semi-monthly plan.

The tournament will be open to every pro and amateur in the city who is a member of some club or association which is affiliated with the Atlanta Golf association.

The entry fee will be $3 per pair and prizes and golf merchandise will be given to the winners and runners up in the one-day event.

Only players whose club handicap is 12 or less will be permitted to play and three-fourths of the regular club handicap will apply in the pro-amateur meets.

Any two amateurs may team together and play will be in foursomes.

Two Players Tied For Billiard Lead

Skelton and Bosche are now tied for the lead in the city pocket billiard championship with four games won and one lost. Bowden is next in line with three victories and one defeat.

Glase and McConnell follow with two wins and two losses. Martin has one victory and three losses, and Prater and Chambers have one victory and three losses, and Prater and Chambers have one victory and four losses.

Games scheduled Monday at the Crescent Recreation academy bring together Glaser and Chambers at 2:30, Bowden and McConnell at 7 o'clock and Martin and Prater at 9 o'clock.

Born Meets Britt On Howell Mill Card

Sailor Born and Jack Britt will feature a mixed card at the Howell Mill Athletic Club, at Howell Mill and Crooked road, Monday night.

In the wrestling feature, Oscar Williamson faces Benny Jordan in a one-hour, best-two-out-of-three-fall match. Glenn Cowan meets Red Powell, of Buckhead, in another best-two-out-of-three-fall, one-hour-limit affair. A 15-minute, one-fall match between two local amateur wrestlers will start the program.

Y. M. C. A. News

Captain Prater and his Elks defeated the league-leading Eagles two straight games. It was the fourth straight defeat for the Eagles.

In one of the biggest upsets of the season, the Cubs defeated the Wildcats, 15 to 13, after the Wildcats had seemingly won an easy victory with a lead of 13-3. The Wildcats forfeited the last game, giving the Cubs two straight wins and a step nearer the top of the league.

What's Wrong Babe? Bat Silent

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—(UP)—Babe Ruth led his Stone Crabs to a 13-2 defeat at the hands of Earle Combs' Crawfish in an intraclub practice game played by the New York Yankees today.

Ruth hit poorly. He got but one single in five tries. His baseball duties done, the Babe dashed off to Bellaire to play a golf exhibition match with Miss Diana Fishwick, former British champion.

Colonel Jacob Rupert is due tomorrow for a conference over the Babe's salary. Ruppert has offered $50,000, and has indicated it is his final offer. Ruth wants at least $10,000 more than that and has threatened to quit if the Yankees don't increase their bid.

Lou Gehrig, who yesterday signed his contract to play first base, was expected here with Ruppert.

Maybe Babe's Golf Is Back of It.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 11.—(AP) Babe Ruth and Billy Burke, former United States open golf champion, paired today to defeat Miss Diana Fishwick and Miss Barbara Pyman, 2 up, in a best-ball foursome on Belleair golf links.

The women players received seven bisques. The Babe was of little help to his professional partner, who had a 35-33—68. Miss Fishwick required 81 strokes, while Miss Pyman took an 86. Ruth hit long drives but they usually wound up in traps. He came in with an 85.

LACK OF FUNDS KRIMPS BARONS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 11. Working on their own and glad to do it, a half dozen candidates for Clyde Milan's 1933 Barons took advantage of a wintery letup the past week and basked in the sunshine at Rickwood.

While spring training was not in order, because the banking holiday had held up Baron funds, Shine Cortazzo, Pete Susko, Woodley Abernathy, Clay Touchstone, Joe Prerost and Paul Weintraub limbered up and got a jump on the rest of the team which is due to start work next week.

Stories from Atlanta concerning the possibilities of two Barons joining the Crackers caused very little alarm at Baron headquarters.

The Crackers were after Pete Susko, veteran Baron first baseman. Woodley Abernathy is to play first for the Barons.

Andy Moore applied to Atlanta for a contract. Milan must get a Class B man to play centerfield for the Barons.

The whole thing sums up that Milan didn't intend to use Susko or Moore in the first place. Each, of course, will be given a chance to win his position if he remans on the Baron pay roll.

Paul Weintraub, obtained from Terre Haute, may fill the gap in centerfield if Moore goes to Atlanta or fails to make the grade. Weintraub is a 190 pounder and he may be the class man Milan wants.

Southwest League Meets Monday Night

A meeting of the Southwest Sunday School Athletic Association will be held Monday night at the Harbison, Griffin & Short Sporting Goods store, located at 21 Broad street.

All Sunday schools in the West End vicinity who wish to enter a team in this association are requested to have a representative at the Monday night meeting as the registration list is to be closed at this meeting.

Katherine Rawls Breaks 2 Records, Wins 4 Titles

MIAMI, March 11.—(UP)—Diminutive Katherine Rawls, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., broke two records and won four more titles as the indoor swimming championships of the Seaboard Association closed today at the Miami-Biltmore Country Club.

Miss Rawls set new meet records in the 300-yard medley swim, which she negotiated in 4:27.8 and the 220-yard free-style which she swam in 2.44. Both marks previously were held by Miss Rawls.

She also won the diving and 100-yard back-stroke event.

Everett Flannagan, Coral Gables, set a new state record for the 300-yard medley swim in 3:52.4, while Ralph Flanagan created a new state mark of 2.16 for the 220-yard free-style.

VISITING STARS SWEEP HONORS IN PIN TOURNEY

Atlantans Set Records That Stands in Southern Meet.

By Jack Troy.

A crack double team from Nashville, Tenn-O-see, and a sensational singles performer from Gadsden, Alabama, swept through a week of heavy play to win the major awards in the southern tenpin handicap tournament, the largest ever held in the south, concluded last night at Blick's bowling center.

H. J. Smyth and J. C. Barker sent the large balls spinning down the maple paths to amass a total of 1,282, surpassing all other doubles achievements of the week. Smyth had games of 231-204-167 and Barker had 199-206-203 to win this event and the $250 first prize.

The week's best singles exhibition is credited to L. P. Butler, of the Gulf State Steel Company, Gadsden. Butler's brilliant total of 679 represented games of 256-200-178. This was 24 pins better than his nearest competitor. Butler pocketed first prize of $15.

GIRLS' MATCHES.

The tournament's climax brought plenty of glory to the Gadsden entry. In addition to winning the singles, Gadsden's team entry also won.

The Goodyear team of Gadsden rolled a fine 2,895 to win team honors. Members included Neiger, Goodall, Sullivan, Bell and Butler. Atlanta Grinding Company, No. 1, finished second with a total of 2,843; Old Timers third, with 2,842, and Muench and Elsner, fourth, with 2,823.

Blick's girls won a special two-team event against the C. F. Cross Jewelry team of Gadsden by virtue of rolling a 2,257.

The girls' lineup included Mrs. Tidwell, Miss Pearson, Mrs. Tiedeman, Miss Theuring and Miss Bangert.

The nine-game total for all events again brought glory to Gadsden. Butler topped all entries with a total of 1,844. W. Elsner was second with 1,789 and Mataruga and Stein were tied for third with 1,784.

Smyth and Baker, the Nashville doubles kings, drove to Atlanta in one of the well-known pint-size automobiles and drove away last night with their pot of gold.

It was all very satisfying to Mrs. John Strauchan Blick.

ATLANTA SECOND.

An Atlanta doubles team, comprised of Howard (Strike) Parker and Tony Althausen, took second place with a three-game total of 1,226. Other prize winners in this event were Bowling-Stevens, 1,192; Hayward-Scarlos, 1,184, and Humphries-Taubler, 1,184, splitting fourth prize; Foster-Bell, 1,172, and Koren-E. Schwartzwalder, 1,169.

Fred Scarlos, of Chattanooga, was second in the singles with a mark of 645, while F. Burns, of Atlanta, finished third with a 633. Other winners were Peterson, Fort McPherson, 620; Rex Morris, Atlanta, 618; L. C. Train, 616; E. Schwartzwalder, 611; J. C. Stein, 609; J. C. Barker, Nashville, 605; Darragh, 599; L. B. Harkins, Gadsden, 598; Reddien, 596; W. L. Roberts, Fort Benning, 595.

While out-of-town talent swept the boards in the main events of the week, Atlanta bowlers have the consolation of the leading performances for a single game and a three-game doubles set.

Howard (Strike) Parker rolled a 267 in a doubles game Thursday night and watched this mark stand the onslaught of all other bowlers entered in the tournament. John Inman Bell's total of 635 for the doubles also stood up throughout the week.

Petersen, Fort McPherson, rolled the best three-game doubles without a handicap with a mark of 660. L. P. Butler, of Gadsden, who won the singles, also had the best three-game singles mark with a 634.

TOURNEY SUCCESS.

John S. Blick, owner and manager of the alleys, was very pleased with the tournament.

"In view of the times, I think it is remarkable that we drew such a splendid list of entries. It was undoubtedly the best bowling tournament of its kind ever held in the south."

The tournament attracted 208 bowlers, including Atlanta. Others came from Galsden, Alabama City, Columbus, Chattanooga, Rome, Fort Benning, Fort McPherson, Nashville and Birmingham.

There were 27 five-men teams entered.

Doubles totals recorded in Saturday's bowling:

Humphries-Taubler, 1,184; De Young-Radke, 1,081; Williams-Ware, 1,052; J. R. Harkins-A. L. Harkins, 1,105; Train-Bryant, 1,039; Dille-Holt, 1,094; Attridge-Wegner, 1,077; Stein-Jameson, 1,109; Smyth-Barker, 1,282; Butler-Sullivan, 1,150; Hayward-Scarlos, 1,184; Ding-Leighton, 1,167; Neiger-Goodall, 1,146; F. Rogula, 1,128; Frame-Knight, 593; Dean-Fowler, 1,082; Bennett-La Bonte, 1,025; Williams-Hichert, 1,103.

Singles totals follow: Dille, 551; Holt, 583; Attridge, 533; Wegner, 560; Neiger, 582; Goodall, 551; F. Bell, 523; Zieske, 437; Hayward, 562; Scarlos, 645; King, 528; Leighton, 535; Train, 616; Bryant, 554; Stein, 600; Jameson, 479; Smythe, 569; Barker, 605; Butler, 679; Sullivan, 540; Williams, 548; Hichert, 551; L. B. Harkins, 508; Franklin, 540; A. Rogula, 558; R. Ragula, 470; Frame, 537; Knight, 550; Frye, 571; Roberts, 595; Davis, 528; Glenn, 589; Humphries, 569; De Young, 566; Taubler, 541; Propes, 479; Dean, 538; Fowler, 553; Bennett, 520; La Bonte, 522; Elmore, 576; Kibler, 573; J. B. Harkins, 554; A. L. Harkins, 489; Williams, 555; Ware, 548.

Young Clarence Harkins, the 13-year-old wonder boy from Gadsden, Ala., rolled up a 472 total for the three games. Mrs. Fred Bell had 467; Mrs. J. B. Harkins, 439; Mrs. Blanche Whitt, 438; Mrs. A. L. Harkins, 408. All were from Gadsden.

Atlanta Bowlers Defeat Macon.

MACON, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—The Macon duckpin bowling team met its second straight defeat at the hands of the Tidwell team of Atlanta here tonight. The score was 2,428 to 2,369.

Tidwell, captain of the visiting team, had the highest individual average with 105 for the five games. Lawson, another visitor and former state champion, had an average of 104.8. Leyton Renfroe led Macon in scoring with an average of 100 2-3 for the five games.

Atlanta Outboard Third; Miami Wins

NEW SMYRNA, Fla., March 11.—Freddie Nickells, of St. Louis, set a new world's curved course record here today when he averaged 47.44 miles an hour over the five-mile course to win the Class C event of the New Smyrna Yacht Club's annual regatta.

In the Class A event J. Smith won with Bill Frey's Baby American, of Miami, with M. H. Eldridge, of Boston, second, and Gad Miller, of Atlanta, third.

At the Training Camp

Lucas Returns To Red Lineup.

TAMPA, Fla., March 11.—(UP)—Red Lucas, right-handed pitcher, returned to practice with the Cincinnati Reds today after a layoff because of a lame hip.

Johnny Moore, Rollie Hemsley and Bob Smith spent the day congratulating themselves on having been traded by the Chicago Cubs, thus escaping the earthquake on the Pacific coast, where their former club is training.

Hurst Declared Holdout.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 11.—(UP)—Don Hurst, Philadelphia Phillies' infielder, was declared a holdout by his club today.

"The deadline for signing has been passed," Gerry Nugent, president of the Phillies, said, "so we are withdrawing the contract offered Hurst. If he signs later it will be at the figures we set, but meanwhile we are going ahead in our plans without counting on him."

Rain Cancels Tiger Workout.

SAN ANTONIO, March 11.—(AP)—Heavy rainfall today caused Manager Bucky Harris to call off most of the Detroit Tiger workout.

The day developed one situation to make it memorable when Earl Webb, Tiger outfielder, mysteriously missing since last week, accounted for his non-appearance with a brand-new explanation. He said the bank holiday left him without cash sufficient to buy his ticket to training camp. He is still at his Pleasant Hill (Tenn.) home.

Roger Hornsby Reports to Cards.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby, who is back in the St. Louis Cardinal ranks after having served with the Giants, Braves and Cubs, arrived here at noon today.

Tanned and in good condition, Hornsby took a light workout. "I'm more confident than ever that I can help the Cardinals," he said.

Other arrivals were Gordon Slade, George Watkins and Estel Crabtree.

Giants Beaten By Seattle, 8-7.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—The Seattle Indians of the Pacific Coast league defeated the New York Giants, of the National league, 8 to 7, here today. Four home runs figured in the game, two by Leiber, leftfielder of the Giants, and one each by Leslie, Giant first-sacker, and Badgro, Indian leftfielder.

Red Sox Downs Rookies, 3 to 2.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 11.—(AP) The Boston Red Sox regulars today bunched four hits, three for extra bases, in the second inning, to gain a 3-2 victory over the rookies in the first inter-squad game of the spring season.

Dale Alexander opened that frame with a triple, Bob Seeds got another, Johnny Hodapp a double and Mike Meola scored Hodapp with a timely single.

Braves Bow To Rookies, 8-5.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—The Boston Braves today had their last hard workout, a full nine-inning inter-squad game, before starting in the exhibition series with the New York Yankees here next Tuesday.

Rabbitt Maranville, in uniform for the first time this season, led the Tribal second team in an 8-5 victory over the regulars.

Cubs Defeat Giants, 4-1.

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(AP)—Chicago's "Grimm Reapers," with Guy Bush and Charlie Root mowing down Giants from the pitcher's mound and Babe Herman helping with his bat, leveled off the New Yorkers, 4 to 1, at Wrigley field today.

SULLIVAN WINS JUNIOR CROWN

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP) Winning three of the eight titles, Tulane sailed through tonight to become the first champion of the new Southeastern conference boxing circle. Louisiana State and Mississippi State each captured two titles to tie for second place, while the other title went to Georgia.

The team scores were: Tulane 21, Louisiana State 16, Mississippi State 16, Georgia 8, and Alabama 3.

Until the second section of the semi-finals was fought this afternoon, Mississippi had been the dangerous contender for team title. But their hopes were dissipated by the disqualification of their captain, B. U. Jones, who had been favored to take charge of the featherweight division.

After Jones was ruled out, in a bout he already had easily won, the Mississippians lost much of their zest and were worried by referee warnings against their style of in-fighting. Jones was disqualified by what Referee Dick Griffin, of Fort Worth, Texas, termed a rabbit punch.

Page had a close call in his bout with Tharp, of Tulane, winning by a narrow margin. Both boys were careful and seldom shot in solid blows but often missed. It was the slowest bout of an otherwise breezy card.

Zachariah opened the program with a bang, getting hotter as he went along and shooting a straight right to the jaw of Frank Brownlee, of Mississippi State, to floor him for the count in the third round. Brownlee's seconds threw in the towel after the referee had counted eight.

Justrabo handled Willie Strickland, of Alabama, in much the same fashion, fighting with both hands and opening up in the third to set the Alabaman back on his heels with a hard right to the jaw. Strickland was groggy when the final bell rang.

Glaze measured Curran Spottswood, of Mississippi State, off in the first round and then pelted with a fury in the second, halting a charge by the Mississippian with a left uppercut and the towel came in at the count of six.

Jacobs ding-donged with right and left to take the opening round from Morris Goodman, of Georgia, but the red-headed Cracker matched blows with the Tulanian in the second, only to weaken in the third when a hard right to the jaw sent him down for the count of nine. After that he missed constantly and was completely outclassed.

Sullivan showed the classiest boxing of the tournament, hitting hard with left and right to double up W. T. Robinson, of L. S. U. The Tiger seldom landed a solid blow on the shifty Georgian and the referee halted the bout in the third.

Paul Bullard had a walkaway with his bout with John Weed, of Tulane. The hard-smacking Mississippian hit the less experienced Tulanian twice and Weed's seconds threw in the towel.

Hill met a tough opponent in C. D. Blaylock, of L. S. U., and the gallery liked the slugging. The giant Blaylock had trouble keeping his balance and was bowled over by Hill twice in the first round. In the second he went down three times, once for the count of nine, but kept coming back for more. He took the nine-count again in the third and when he crumbled again the towel flopped in to end the pounding.

JEBY DEFENDS CROWN FRIDAY

NEW YORK, March 11.—(UP)—The second championship bout in as many weeks will be held at Madison Square Garden Friday night when Ben Jeby, of New York, recognized in this state as middleweight titleholder, meets the veteran Vince Dundee, of Baltimore.

Dundee holds two decisions over Jeby but both of the previous bouts were 10 rounds each, and Jeby was not then champion.

Druid Hills Defeats Hampton Girls, 33-26

HAMPTON, Ga., March 11.—Druid Hills Methodist girls avenged a defeat suffered earlier in the season at the hands of Hampton, finalists in the fourth district tournament, by defeating Hampton here last night, 33 to 26, in one of the fastest games of the season.

Goodman and Standard carried the brunt of the attack for Hampton, while Mewbourn, Lynn and Cloud led the way for the visitors.

Erskine Succeeds Clark Shaughnessy

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP) The appointment of Robert H. "Doc" Erskine as head football coach at Loyola University of New Orleans, to succeed Clark D. Shaughnessy, was announced by athletic officials today.

Shaughnessy is leaving Loyola to take over the gridiron coaching job at the University of Chicago, succeeding the veteran, Alonzo Stagg.

Erskine will also become head coach of basketball at Loyola, and will serve as assistant track coach. It was unofficially reported that the present footbll coaching assistants would be retained by the new mentor.

MORALES WINS CUP.

HAVANA, March 11.—(AP)—Ricardo Morales defeated Dr. Gustavo Vollmer, 4-6, 6-0, 7-5, 6-8, 6-4, in the finals of the annual tennis tournament for the Guggenheim cup here today.

Dixie Tenpin League Is Now Being Formed

A six-team Dixie tenpin league comprising teams from Chattanooga, Tenn. Gadsden and Birmingham, Ala., Jacksonville, Fla., Columbus and Atlanta, is being formed and there is a possibility that two other clubs will be added to make a strong eight-team organization.

The league is considered an outgrowth of the southern handicap tenpin tournament which was concluded here last night after a week of play.

Macon and Montgomery are other possible entrants. It is planned to map out a regular schedule of matches to be played over a period of 20 weeks on week-ends.

The league will be patterned somewhat along the order of the old Dixie Telegraph league, which flourished in 1924, but ran only for a year, as the Atlanta alleys closed.

Atlanta finished in first place in competition with teams from Mobile, Savannah, Chattanooga, St. Augustine and Jacksonville. High game of 1,114 and set of 3,089 rolled by the Atlanta team composed of John Bell, E. L. Phillips, Henry Elsner, H. De Nise and Jim Conyers still stands.

Whereas the old Telegraph league carried on its competition by wire, sending in results, the new Dixie league teams will travel to member towns whenever weather conditions permit.

John Bell, Atlanta; E. Dille, Chattanooga; Lewis Harkins, Gadsden, and H. Susong, Birmingham, are making plans for the formation of the Dixie league and expect to have it in operation by spring.

JACKSON HILL PLAYS CALVARY FOR LOOP TITLE

Tuesday Game To Determine Sewanee League Championship.

Jackson Hill Baptist, winners of the last half, and Calvary Methodist will battle for the Sewanee league title on Calvary court Tuesday night. Only one game will be played. Both clubs won the same number of games during the season, Calvary Methodist finishing the first half with a perfect record and Jackson Hill Baptist made the same record to finish ahead in the last half.

The following players are eligible for this game, Jackson Hill Baptist, Myrick, Schutte, Watson, Thornton, Castle, Arwood, Berry, Stringfellow, Henderson, Stephenson and Layton; Calvary Methodist, Gene Lewis, J. Lewis, McAfee, Peacock, Stephenson, Mayson, Burnett, Hayes and Wilson.

CIVIC LEAGUE.

The regular playing schedule of the Civic League is finished, but they still have a three-game series between Dental College and DeMolay to decide the season's winner. The details of these games will be thrashed out at the final meeting of the league managers which will be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night at 7:30. All teams should have a representative there as the profits of the season will be divided.

The finals standings of the teams follow:

Tennessee, Alabama Again Stand Out in Spring Grid Selections

L. S. U. STRONGER IN SPRING WORK, REPORTS SHOW

Veteran Backfield Aids Vols; Tide To Miss Only Cain.

By Dillon Graham,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Dixie football fans would be shocked if the experts didn't rate Tennessee and Alabama as the pre-season favorites for Southeastern conference gridiron honors in 1933.

The naming of these teams as the most likely contenders has become a habit. The readers of sport pages expect it. Habits are hard to break. So, those who consider loss of players, replacements and schedule difficulties again rank Tennessee and Alabama as the probable Southeastern football champions for next fall, with Louisiana State as a possible challenger.

A survey of the spring football camps indicates Auburn, Georgia Tech, Tulane, Vanderbilt, Florida, Kentucky and Georgia should be listed in a second group. Mississippi, Sewanee, and Mississippi State would compose the third group.

ALL BACKS RETURN.

Tennessee, sport writers' selection as No. 1 team a year ago, returns a complete first-string backfield—Feathers, Wynne, Brackett and Vaughn—with good reserves.

Major Bob Neyland needs tackles—and has or will find them. Frank, a veteran guard, has been shifted to tackle. Bailey and Hampton, a freshman, are others. Dougherty, a 195-pound frosh, may start at guard.

Except for the departure of the punting fullback, John Cain, Alabama's worries are minor ones. Howell can kick as far and about as consistently as Cain but hasn't Cain's accuracy. Hughes or Riley Smith, a "dark horse" junior, may play fullback. An injury to Tom Hupke, guard, may hurt. The center job still is a toss-up among several capable candidates.

FIVE STARS LOST.

Louisiana State was good last year and Fleming, Wilson, Keller, Almokary and Skidmore were lost. Replacements and freshman prospects are excellent and the Tigers schould be dangerous in their second year under "Biff" Jones.

It is unlikely Auburn will be as strong as a year ago. The inspiration furnished by Jimmy Hitchcock, the departed All-American halfback, will be missed. However, the backfield of Phipps, Dupree, Williams, Rogers, O'Rourke, Kimbrell and Talley, will hold its own with any in the conference. Reserve strength is needed for line posts.

Despite the loss of a full backfield foursome, a center, tackle and three ends, Coach Bill Alexander is optimistic over the Georgia Tech outlook. Reserves saw plenty action last year and will be ready. The freshman squad was one of the best in years.

Vanderbilt probably will depend on sophomores more than any other club. Nine veterans were graduated. The newcomers possess speed and punting and passing ability and reports are the Commodores will rely largely on an aerial offensive.

COX HOPEFUL.

Likely reserves and freshmen have bouyed Coach Tex Cox's hopes at Tulane. The Greenies were shot by graduation of such men as the All-American halfback, Don Zimmerman; center, Lodrigues; tackle, Bankston, and guard, Scafide.

Florida and Georgia will dabble with wing-back formations. Florida's results depend largely on how the new coach, Young "Dutch" Stanley gets along with his players. The outlook is bright with an almost junior club returned. Sophomores may spell the story for Georgia. Halfback Buster Mott and three good linemen are gone.

Kentucky was hit both in the line and backfield by athletes finishing their allotted years of play. Two halfbacks, two tackles, a guard and a center are among those missing. The Wildcats have two crack ends in Rupert and Kreuter, and a fine kicking back in Kercheval.

Mississippi, Sewanee and Mississippi State coaches are pleased with their squads, but these teams face too stiff schedules to return a high standing in the won and lost column. Mississippi needs a punter and a whole right side of a line. A quarterback, an end and a pair of tackles are sought at Sewanee. Lack of weight handicaps Mississippi State.

Y.M.C.A. Sponsors Swimming Classes

Opening tryouts for the Atlanta "Y" swimming team will be held Monday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Bene Baylis, well-known swim star of Atlanta, has been secured to coach the team in speed swimming. Anyone desiring to try for the squad should be on hand either Monday or Friday afternoons at 5:30 o'clock.

A special class in life saving methods will begin at the "Y" Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Frank Huff, chairman of the local board of examiners, will have charge of the class. Anyone desiring to enter the class should register at the Y. M. C. A.

New Baseball League Planned for Georgia

In line with other sections of the state, baseball teams of the western section will organize for the coming season, and a preliminary meeting for this purpose was held at the civic hall of the Clark thread mill Friday night. Douglasville, Clarkdale and Villa Rica were represented. Invitation will be extended Bremen, Tallapoosa, Smyrna, Dallas, Austell, Marietta, Carrollton, Canton and other cities of this section to enter.

Another meeting, to be held at the same place, will be held next Friday night and it is hoped that enough clubs will be represented to form a compact six or eight-club loop. It is planned to open the season on April 15. Teams of this section desiring to play league ball are invited to have a representative at the next meeting.

State Volley Ball Champions

Here is the best volley ball team in the state of Georgia—the Y. M. C. A. champions of the recent state tournament held at Albany. They will compete in the southern tournament to be held here March 24-25. Members of the team, front row, left to right: D. M. Dozier, Moore, W. G. Carpenter, W. H. Wynne and E. C. Lowry; back row, William A. Dodge, J. B. Allen, A. H. Jentzen, J. P. McLean and Albert Hill. Constitution staff photo.

SEEDED STARS WIN MATCHES

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Paced by Gregory S. Mangin, defending champion, eight seeded players marched with varying degrees of difficulty today through the first round of the annual indoor tennis championships as 64 young men battled all over eight courts on the floor of the huge Seventh regiment armory.

All told the top eight, among them four of the first ten ranking stars of American tennis, lost but one set as a group. George M. Lott Jr., of Chicago, seeded No. 5, needed an extra session to down the stubborn resistance of Harold MacGuffin, of Philadelphia, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

But for the rest of the favored eight, the opening day of the tournament that does not get down to the final round until next Saurday was just another day of good and fair tennis.

Sidney B. Wood Jr., ranked No. 4 nationally and seeded in the same position here, locked in a brisk duel with young Edward W. Burns, of New York, that developed the best and hardest tennis of the day. Wood won in straight sets, 6-4, 8-6.

Mangin, seeded No. 1, polished off Frank J. Welton, of New York, 6-0, 6-1, while Dr. Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, seeded eighth, defeated George Key, of Harvard University, 6-3, 6-4. J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., seventh in the seeding, eliminated Clark Andrews, of Yale, 6-4, 7-5.

Sutter, top ranking player in the tourney through his No. 3 place on the national list, displayed uncertainty indoors, though he defeated Dr. William Rosenbaum, of New York, 7-5, 6-3, while Bell, powerful indoors, whipped Bryan Hamlin, of New York, in love sets.

Shields, ranked No. 5 nationally, had an easy time with Allan Swayze, of New York University, winning, 6-3, 6-1.

The lesser known players, mostly New York recruits and college boys, worked through the remainder of the 32 matches exactly as expected.

Two Golfers Share Bogey Honors

J. W. Welch and P. G. Lombard divided first honor Saturday in a blind bogey tournament on the East Lake courses with net scores of 75 each. Second place also was shared between two golfers when T. C. Hull and T. L. Johnson Jr. carded 74s.

Charlie Yates, Georgia amateur champion, set the pace for low gross scores with a 70, one under par, but chose a handicap of seven and finished in a two-way tie for third place with Ralph McClellan Jr.

Others who finished close to the leaders were J. O. Porter, Ralph McClellan Sr., C. A. Miller, J. W. Lunden, George Fogg, G. B. Adair, J. A. Whatley, B. F. Guy, A. Perkerson, T. J. Stewart, D. R. Prescott and Travis Johnson.

Another of the regular Sunday afternoon dog fight tourneys will be held this afternoon on the No. 2 East Lake course. Play will be in foursomes and the best two-ball score will count toward first prize.

Hack Wilson Plans Homestead Holdout

MIAMI, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—The next time Hack Wilson decides to hold out he's going to stay at his home at Martinsburg, W. Va.

"This is the toughest spot I ever picked for a hold out," the Brooklyn Dodger outfielder said. "It's costing me 24 smackers a day for myself and family to say nothing of wear and tear money. For a guy who's facing the prospect of being chopped down to $10,000, it's too much. So I'm on my way if they don't fix up a deal with me or for me."

Volley Ball Champions Prepare

When it comes to placing a volleyball over the net and piling up the winning points, there is no other team in the state and few indeed in the south that can do it as well as the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. team, state champions.

Dixie's volley ball experts will have a chance to prove if they can in the southern championship to be held here March 24 and 25.

The tournament is open to any volley-ball team in the south and entries are expected, among others, from Kannapolis, N. C.; Knoxville, Chattanooga and Nashville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; Macon and Moultrie.

The Atlanta team faces a battle to make its conquest southwide in scope.

But they're good, are those Atlanta players. They were the class of the state tournament at Albany, beating Macon early and then Columbus in the finals, 14 to 4, and 15 to 11.

They practice every week. Volleyball, as those who play it well know, is a game of skill. It takes practice to make the light air-filled globule listen to its master's voice.

William A. Dodge, J. B. Allen, A. H. Jentzen, J. P. McLean, Albert Hill, D. M. Dozier, Moore, W. G. Carpenter, W. H. Wynne and E. C. Lowry are members of the championship team and they are skilled in the ins and outs of the old rotating game.

The southern tournament will be played on a double elimination basis, with the losers dropping into the losers' bracket, the winner of which will meet the winner of the other bracket.

There are thrills in basketball, baseball, football, track, tennis, swimming, et. cetera, but those who play—and there is no small number engaged in the pastime—get as much kick out of volleyball as any of our other athletic performers.

HIGH CLASS FIELD TO RACE TODAY

HAVANA, March 11.—(AP)—With White Clover II, star of William Du Pont's Foxcatcher Farms of Wilmington, Del., the pre-race choice, 100 high-class handicap performers today were named for the $50,000 Cuban Grand National, which will be run over one and one-quarter miles at Oriental park tomorrow.

The big English-bred horse, piloted by Buddy Hanford, will carry 110 pounds, two less than Mrs. Payne Whitney's St. Brideaux, the high weight of the field. Allan Ryan's Larranaga, also well considered, will pack the third highest impost of 115 pounds.

The other entries with their weights are S. S. Friedlein's Fortunate Youth, 106; Mrs. Emile Denemark's Pigeon Hole, 112; the Chile stable's Cambridgeshire, 105; C. Leroy King's Pari-Mutuel, 105; Mrs. S. H. Fairbank's Gold Step, 110; John Marsh's Chief John, 108 and I. A. Carreau's Kincsen, 112.

Dunn and Baker In Return Battle

Dynamite Dunn, stellar West Point fighter, and Red Baker, the boy he defeated last week, have been rematched for a fight Thursday night at the city auditorium at East Point. It will be a winner-take-all fight.

In their last meeting Dunn won on a technical knockout when Baker was unable to continue and his seconds threw in the towel. Baker claims that he was suddenly stricken with illness. He asked for a return bout and Promoter Beall, after many fans urged him, agreed to put on the fight. It should be a corker.

A good set of preliminaries will back up this bout with popular prices prevailing.

Y-Church Leagues To Meet Monday

With the ending of the basketball season, the work of organizing baseball leagues to be sponsored the coming season by the "Y" Church A. A. is slated for a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night at 8 o'clock. All Sunday school baseball teams are urged to have representatives at this meeting.

The series of "Baseball Educational Talks" that have proven to be so popular will be resumed at this time and one of the outstanding players of our national pastime will be heard. These talks will be a feature of these meetings in the future and local players will be able to learn many of the finer points of the game from them.

GINO GARIBALDI FACES TOUGH FOE

Say what you will about the pleasures of watching clean and scientific wrestling, the fact remains that the average customer prefers the blood-and-thunder type of encounter between men not overburdened by respect for the ethics of the game and it is a match of this second variety, between Gino Garibaldi, Italian champion, and Whitey Hewitt, Canadian, which gives every indication of drawing the best crowd of the winter season to Henry Weber's next card at the auditorium Tuesday night.

Hewitt has been storming his way through all opposition here for several weeks. Paul Harper, Jack Zarnos and Tom Marvin in turn have taken much of the rough stuff handed out by the Canadian.

Ranking well among the contenders for the world's title held by Jim Londos, Garibaldi will provide by far the sternest test Hewitt has yet encountered. The Italian has had but one match in Atlanta, a convincing defeat of the far heavier Willie Davis, but that one bout was enough to establish him as a prime favorite and a great wrestler. He is fast, colorful, aggressive and is rough.

The odds will be slightly in favor of Garibaldi in the coming match, but he will be badly outweighed and, in Hewitt, will be meeting a man far tougher and more experienced than was Davis. The Canadian is coming along fast as evidenced by his victory over Pat O'Shocker, the red-headed Irishman, in Memphis several days ago.

As a semi-final for the main event, Weber has lined up another sterling attraction in the one-hour go between Paul Jones, the Texan, and Tom Marvin, Osage Indian. Both are well known here and may be relied upon to wage a stirring battle. The fans will be solidly behind Jones and his dreaded hook scissors, but Marvin, with his stamina, skill at rough tactics and chin lock, will be a dangerous foeman for the popular cowpuncher.

A brisk advance ticket sale is reported at the Miner & Carter Drug Company and the Piedmont Hatters.

'Pepper' Martin Reports to Cards

BRADENTON, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—"Pepper" Martin, hero of the 1931 World's Series, was in the St. Louis Cardinals' training camp today for his first workout with his teammates this year.

Martin, who motored here from his native Oklahoma, said he intended to make a regular berth either in the outfield or infield. Raymond W. Pepper, outfielder from Rochester, also has checked in for spring training.

Pirates' New Brother 'Act,' Young Ken and Floyd Vaughan

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 10.—(CP)—Still another brother act is added to the big league show with the arrival in the Pittsburgh Pirates' camp of Ken Vaughan, brother of Shortstop Floyd Vaughan. However, this one has variations—Ken is an older and not a "kid" brother of Floyd. Floyd is 21, Ken 23.

Ken has never played professional baseball, but Manager George Gibson decided to give him a chance, anyway. The Pirates are strong on brother acts—they have the best in the business, the Waner boys, Paul and Lloyd.

Ken has proven that he is fast and handles fly balls pretty well. But whether or not he can hit big league pitching must be proven. He hopes to land an infield post.

The Vaughans are just the last pair of many big league brother acts. The most famous baseball family unquestionably was the Delehantys. They were all good, with the palm going to Ed, a tremendous hitter.

The Coveleskies shone in the big league firmament for a time, but only Stan achieved greatness, though Harry was a capable pitcher.

The World Series duels of Emil (Irish) Meusel and Bob Meusel, rivals in the all-New York classics of 1921, 1922 and 1923, made this pair of brothers unforgettable.

The two Sewells, Luke and Joe, flourished with Cleveland for a decade, but now Joe is with the Yanks and Luke is a Senator.

ATLANTA STARS PLAY SATURDAY IN ALBANY MEET

Eighteen City Golfers Enter 54-Hole Open Tourney.

By Roy White.

Eighteen Atlanta golfers will invade the Radium Springs course at Albany, Ga., Saturday to participate in the Radium Springs open tournament Saturday and Sunday. It will be a 54-hole affair, with 18 holes slated for Saturday and the remaining 36 scheduled for Sunday.

Charlie Yates, Georgia amateur champion, and Errie Ball, assistant professional at East Lake and former Southeastern P. G. A. champion, will head a group of seven East Lake players, including Berrien Moore Jr., George Harris, C. W. Allen, Muggsy Smith and L. R. Hunter.

Dave and Charlie Black Jr., both former Georgia champions, and Howard Beckett, professional at the Capital City Club, will head Capital City's delegation, which also will include Hugh Carter, Jim Ison, Charlie Nunnally and R. A. McCord.

Julius Hughes, a former city champion, and Bill Terrell, a semi-finalist in the city amateur last year, will represent Druid Hills Club. Dan Sage Jr. and Gene Dahlbender will be entered from Ansley Park.

That group of golfers will give the city one of the strongest representations ever entered in an open tournament in the south, and any one of the 17 players is capable of championship golf.

Preparations are being made for one of the largest entry lists ever to be recorded in an open tournament on the Radium Springs course. Invitations have been sent to all the leading professionals and amateurs who have been playing recently in Florida.

Following the Albany tournament many of the players will go to Charleston, S. C., to participate in a $2,500 open tournament, March 23-25, and the north-south tourney at Pinehurst, N. C., March 28-29.

FIVE ARE TIED IN HAGEN MEET

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Bunched at the top of the pack with scores of 70 each, five of the country's leading professionals today led a classy field that included winners of every major championship this winter, at the half-way mark of the 36-hole $1,500 Walter Hagen golf tournament here.

Topping the 40 entries with scores of two under par, was Olin Dutra, of Los Angeles, whose card was matched for a tie by Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; Al Espinosa, Akron, Ohio; Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., and Horton Smith, Chicago.

Three other stellar shot makers—Walter Hagen, Detroit; Johnny Rouse, Chicago, and Light Horse Harry Cooper, Chicago—turned in sub-par cards of 71 for the first day's play over the Florida Country Club course.

One stroke behind came Denny Shute, slender Cleveland, Ohio, star, and Jim McKenzie, Jacksonville.

With the field so closely bunched, a battle royal down the stretch for the concluding 18 holes tomorrow in quest of the $300 first prize money was promised.

Six players, all bracketed at 73, were within easy striking distance of the opening day's pace setters, however. They were Clarence Hackney, Atlantic City, N. J.; H. T. Allen, Deland, Fla.; Archie Hambrick, Zanesville, Ohio; Dick Metz, Deal, N. J.; Roland Hancock, Stoneham, Mass., and John Recoltz, Menominee, Mich.

Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., tied with 74s and Charles Guest, Deal, N. J., had a 75.

Five players tied with 76 each. They are Henry Von Tempo, Springfield, Mass.; Joe Ezar, St. Louis; Walter Johnstone, Vero Beach, Fla.; George Christ, Rochester, N. Y., and Bill Mehlhorn, New York; Clarence Doser, Rocheter, N. Y., took a 77.

Probable Lineup For Reds Listed

TAMPA, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Here's the way the Cincinnati Reds probably will line up for the opening game, April 12:

Chick Hafey, left field; Johnny Moore, center field, and Harry Rice or Wally Roettger, right field; Eppa Rixey, pitcher; Joe Morrissey, third; George Grantham, second; Jim Bottomley, first; Leo Durocher, short, and Lombardi, catcher.

Larruping Leo.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 11.—Anyone looking for a combination of color, personality and high tension doesn't have to take a step beyond Leo Diegel, the long-hitting pro from Agua Caliente.

Leo has picked himself a pretty fair partner by the name of Bobby Jones for a hot match at Wilshire on Sunday against MacDonald Smith and George Von Elm. And even as strong a combination as Diegel and Jones will need all they have to outpace the Smith-Von Elm combination.

Diegel's descriptions of one of his own rounds in an open championship is always worth hearing.

"3-4-3," says Leo, "and I've decided this is my championship. Then I set into a 5-6-5 and I've decided to retire from all competitive golf and caddie for some good player in the next open. About the time I figure on asking for a caddie's job I pick up two or three birdies and there I am right back in the picture again. And then something always happens and I blow once more."

Yet few realize the fact that Diegel leads them all through the last three opens—having a better combined score than any other entry.

He hasn't been able to slip in one of his old-time 67's, but neither has he moved into the high 70s.

"I'll never forget my start on one of the last nines at Inverness," Leo said. "I was burning hot for six holes and then I skidded for the next three. Just as I was about to cut my throat I started home, 3-3. Then I hit a low shot to the next green—a short hole. I thought the ball was going over. 'Sit down—sit down'—I yelled at the ball.

"It did—right in the cup for a one."

Rapid Action.

One of the greatest sights in golf is Diegel hitting a tee shot, jumping on top of the tee box to follow the flight of the ball, and then dashing over the hill to see just where it stopped.

Leo has all the tension of a coiled steel spring and the wonder is that he has handled it so well since he has a battle with himself, against himself, on every hole.

Thousands of golfing spectators from California to Scotland have wondered why it was that Diegel adopted his odd putting stance, where both elbows are widely extended, well out from the body, along the line of the putt.

The answer is that Leo found he could not control what might be called "wrist reflexes," or "wrist nervousness." He met this situation, which became critical, by lifting the pressure from the wrists to the elbows and arms in what looks to be practically a shoving motion.

Harry Vardon had this same wrist trouble with his putts. I have seen golfers whose wrists locked so badly on short putts they couldn't hit the ball. Diegel almost reached that point in open championships on keen greens, so he switched to the double elbow system.

When it comes to hitting a golf ball, Deigel is one of the longest in the game. A good part of his distance is due to the fact that he dips slightly on the down swing, thereby keeping the head of the club in a flatter arch on through the ball. This flatter arc through the hitting area carries less cut and yields a longer run.

The Big Hunt.

Like Mac Smith, Diegel is still after his first big open. He came within a brief span of winning at Inverness in 1929. A young entry from Detroit, he was sweeping down the stretch with only a few holes to go.

Facing the 13th hole where the drive had to carry a deep ravine, some nearby spectator sneezed loudly, just as Deigel started his down swing.

To the high-tensioned Leo this was exactly the same as if a stick of dynamite had exploded. He topped his drive into the ravine and a simple looking par 4 hole quickly turned into a 7. Leo was beaten out by just one stroke.

He has had stout chances at Worcester, Inverness and other battlefields, only to have wrecking trouble land on the back of his neck at some unexpected spot.

Deigel has won the P. G. A., the Canadian several times, and other leading title events. But the U. S. and the British open have blocked his charges for 13 years. Something always happens.

When you consider the fact that 1,200 of the world's finest pros and amateurs start out for the U. S. open, many of them quite capable of breaking 70 on a good day, you can see the odds against any single player.

Bob Jones' feat of running 1-2 from 1923 through 1930, with a single off year in 1927, is one of the most remarkable contributions to sport.

Sarazen's double victory at Sandwich and Fres. Meadow is another triumph over heavy odds.

In the meantime Mac Smith and Leo Deigel haven't given up hope of bagging their first big open crown. Leo started nearly 10 years after Mac Smith had gotten under way, so he has more time to work with.

But each finds that it is getting harder every passing year.

When so many things have happened to you, you begin to wonder where the axe will fall next. Few realize the amount of mental and nerve punishment a Mac Smith or a Diegel can absorb in watching putts just curl by the rim of the cup, where each putt may mean a title won or lost.

Meadows Is Victor In Free-for-All Race

Clyde Meadows defeated a field of a dozen skaters to win first place Friday night in a free-for-all event that featured the first of a series of racing programs scheduled for the new roller skating rink at 671 Peachtree street. Meadows nosed out K. M. McLennan, who finished second.

First place in a special one-mile race for Class C skaters went to James Reddy, with Cecil Ratley second and Ralph McElroy third. The Class C skaters were those who qualified for that rating by winning free-for-all events when the rink was operated at the Palais Peachtree hall.

Racing programs will be held every Tuesday and Friday night, according to Manager Harry Fisher, with a free-for-all event, a Class C race and a ladies' race slated each night. Free skating tickets will be given the winners in all races. A "block party" will be held each Thursday night, with prizes offered.

Located across from the Fox theater, the new rink which was opened Wednesday night under the same management as the one formerly operated at the Palais Peachtree, already is proving a popular attraction to local sports fans.

Wynne Finds New Rules Okay

AUBURN, Ala., March 11.—After watching the new football rules work during six weeks of spring training at Alabama Polytechnic Institute here, Coach Chet Wynne, who piloted the Tigers through an undefeated campaign last season, is of the opinion that the new edicts handed down by the gridiron governing body are going to be satisfactory to the fans, players, officials and coaches.

Coach Wynne is 100 per cent in favor of the clipping rule, saying that anything that the rules committee can do to prevent clipping is a great step toward preventing injuries as this block is by far the most dangerous of any block in football, whether used intentionally or unintentionally. "Lessening the penalty for clipping will make the officials become stricter in enforcing the rule, Wynne said.

The new rule governing where the ball shall be put in play when it is within 10 yards of the sidelines is a good one, according to Wynne, as it speeds up the game, is a great boon to the offense and adds strategy to the game which the spectators appreciate.

Regarding the new rules which were adopted for the 1932 season, Wynne thinks that they worked out very satisfactory, but believes that the officials and the coaches should have a little more common understanding of the rules.

"The coaches are far more interested in the game of football, far more associated with the game and therefore I think that the responsibility of understanding and interpreting the rules should be made with their spirit," the Plainsmen skipper concluded.

Robby Drops Guy Sturdy Deal

neither he nor Phelps has put in an appearance, that department likewise must wait awhile for completion.

Rollings is a sure bet to play third. This rangy lad who batted .347 and fielded above reproach for Denver of the Western league last year, has the youth, the speed and the arm to fill the role. For him, the club paid the St. Louis Cardinals a cool $3,000.

Chatham will have some competition at short in the persons of Rudy Laskowski, the chunky Polish youth, and Jimmy McCarter, a speedy youngster who seems to have everything but experience. Bobby Goff, holdover second baseman from last year, is being kept on hand to "protect" the club at that position until Dashiell says yea or nay. The deal for a first baseman, which has involved the names of both Guy Sturdy, of New Orleans, and Pete Susko, of Birmingham, likewise is being held in abeyance until Moore has had a squint at the ponderous Phelps.

KLEINHANS TO HELP.

The pitching staff, which has only one new purchase, Ted Kleinhans, a southpaw, is probably the most advanced department of the club right now. Bob Hasty, Andy Messenger, Climax Blethen and Bunny Hearn, seasoned performers, are getting in shape every day and so is Lefty Carithers, another pitcher who saw considerable service with the club last year. Hugh Casey, young right-hander, who had an introduction to Class A pitching last season, is on hand for a rookie role, and so are Jim Henry, Irving Cohen, H. S. Long, Sheppy Hart and Leonard Mayo. Ernie Jenkins, Eastern league southpaw, signed last year, is getting another trial.

Kleinhans, when he reports, is expected to strengthen the pitching corps materially. He set a Piedmont league strikeout record last year while winning 20 games, and, judging from all reports, is capable of commanding a starting place on the staff. Since he is a Class B man, this will help Moore's problem there greatly.

There is a chance that the club might carry a rookie utility man, leaving the club with six pitchers, two catchers, four infielders and three outfielders.

John Windsor (Buck) McKee, ex-Tech star, is looking better at the bat and in the field than he did last year, and right now is waging a terrific battle with the 220-pound Freddie Sington for the Class B outfield post. If both Art Weis and Joe Bonowitz are signed, there will be room for but one B outfielder, as both are Class A players.

The club has three other very capable outfielders, who, unfortunately, are all Class A in rank. They are Red Barron, Jim Bryan and John Cummings. Since there are other Southern league clubs which could use their services, one of the trio is almost certain to figure in a deal or sale. In case both Weis and Bonowitz refuse to sign, Barron or Cummings will have an excellent chance to win an outfielding berth. They are being kept around for such an emergency.

Eddie Phillips, when and if he reports, is tagged for first-string receiver. Freddy Neisler, a hustling rookie, has the inside track for second string, since Ralph Butler writes from his home in Philadelphia that he may quit baseball. Manager Moore, who, while a veteran receiver, has a Class B rating, may lend a hand with the chores alternately through the process of suspending a player and placing himself on the roster temporarily.

GODWIN GIVEN TITLE CHANCE AT ROSENBLOOM

Georgia Battler Meets Champion March 24 in New York.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Bob Godwin, 22-year-old Daytona Beach glove-tosser, will meet Maxie Rosenbloom for the world's light-heavyweight championship in Madison Square Garden March 24. The bout, set at 15 rounds, was closed today by Arthur Godwin, Bob's father and manager, with Jimmy Johnston, Garden matchmaker.

Godwin and Rosenbloom have boxed three times in non-title bouts, two ending in draws and one going to Rosenbloom on a close decision.

In his last start, last week at Palm Beach, Godwin won a decision over Joe Knight. Knight had been touted for a title shot by the National Boxing Association. He was considered among the leading lights and Knight's defeat gave Godwin his chance.

Terms for the championship tussle were not announced, but were agreed to at once by Arthur Godwin.

That's covering a lot of territory, we know . . . but that's just what we're trying to tell you . . . that Varsity-town Clothes have acceptance everywhere.

At the best clubs . . . in the finest offices . . . wherever young men gather you'll see Varsity-towns . . . and plenty of them.

Be clothes conscious in a Varsity-town suit.

On the Air Today

Dave Love and his symphonic orchestra will give another of a series of broadcasts over WGST from 8 to 8:30 o'clock tonight, playing a popular program. Since the inauguration of the series a few weeks ago it has grown in popularity and is now one of the favorite local programs.

The Griffith School of Music will give a program in honor of the Southern Music Educators' Convention from 1:30 to 2 o'clock this afternoon over WGST. An invitation was extended the school to participate in the music program of the convention, which will be held from Wednesday, March 22, through March 25.

Ravel's "Bolero" will be offered by Arturo Toscanini as the feature of the program of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra to be broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House over WGST and a coast-to-coast Columbia network today from 2 to 4 p. m. Given its world premiere several years ago by Toscanini, the "Bolero" created a sensation in musical circles and has remained one of the most popular symphonic works ever since. Other numbers on the program will include the ever-popular Symphony in D minor of Cesar Franck and Respighi's evocative tone poem, "The Pines of Rome." The latter selection is divided into four sections: the pines of the Villa Borghese, the pines near a Catacomb, the pines of the Janiculum, and the pines of the Appian Way. Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, will be heard as commentator during the concert intermission.

The Gauchos, under direction of Vincent Sorey, will be heard in another program of Spanish music, with Tito Guizar as soloist, tonight from 9:30 to 10 p. m. over WGST and the Columbia network. Guizar will offer a group of solos in dance rhythm, including the bolero, "Ojos Verdes;" the serenade, "Te Quiero Dijiste;" and a Spanish rancher's song. Orchestral features of the program will be "Madonna Negra," "Valse Antillienne" and "Salvador."

Ernest Hutcheson, distinguished concert pianist and head of the Juilliard school of music, will feature selections from the lighter works of Mendelssohn over the WGST-Columbia network tonight from 9 to 9:30 p. m. The group will include a piano duetto from the "Songs Without Words," a light and airy characteristic piece, and the famous "Spinning Song."

Mary Eastman, soprano, and Evan Evans, baritone, will be heard as featured soloists on the program Andre Kostelanetz presents...to be broadcast over WGST and the Columbia network tonight from 7:15 to 7:45 p. m. Miss Eastman will sing Nevin's charming juvenile melody, "Little Boy Blue;" and Evans' solo contribution will be the love song, "Give Me One Hour," from Friml's "White Eagle."

Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti, Columbia's nimble fingered two-piano team, will turn serious for a moment when they present a piano arrangement of Debussy's delicately woven tone poem, "L'Apresmidi d'un Faune" today from 6:30 to 6:45 p. m. over WGST and the Columbia network. Another selection from the classics to be offered by the piano duo will be Granados' colorful "Romanza."

Popular numbers on the program will be "Fit As a Fiddle" and "Tea for Two."

When the southland's legendary negro giant, John Henry, strides across the airwaves tonight he will be struggling with a great doubt as to whether or not he is really in love. The program will be heard over the WGST-Columbia network from 7 to 7:15 p. m. and from 7:45 to 8 p. m.

A Congregationalist service from Cleveland and a Catholic period from St. Louis will make up the two half-hour broadcasts of the Church of the Air over the WGST-Columbia network today. The morning period, from 9 to 9:30, will be devoted to the Congregationalist service with Rev. Miles H. Krumbine D D., pastor of Plymouth Congregational church, Cleveland, as the speaker. A program of religious music will be included in the service. The Most Rev. John J. Glennon, archbishop of St. Louis, will deliver the sermon in the Catholic broadcast to be heard from 12 to 12:30 p. m.

An abridged version of Rossini's cantata masterpiece, "Stabat Mater," will be offered during the Cathedral hour, directed by Channon Vollinge, over WGST and the Columbia network from 5:30 to 6 p. m. Soloists on the presentation will include Mildred Rose, soprano; Theo Karle, tenor; and Crane Calder, bass.

John Kirkland Clark, chairman of the section of legal education of the American Bar Association, will be hard in a discussion of law students' problems during the program, "The Lawyer and the Public," to be heard over WGST and a Columbia network from 5 to 5:30 p. m. today. The title of Mr. Clark's address will be "Pitfalls Along the Legal Education Road."

Francis Mitchell and Mike McDowell will play a two-piano program of popular and classic music on the regular Sunday broadcast of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs hour over WSB at 6:15 o'clock tonight. Their selections for the broadcast will include compositions of Arensky, Chabrier and Rachmaninoff.

Dr. Albert Einstein, noted German scientist; Dr. Harlow Shapley, of Harvard University, and Felix M. Warburg will participate in a program broadcast by the National Broadcasting System from 9:15 to 10 o'clock, Atlanta time, next Wednesday. The program will be of interest to all Jewish people.

PHILCO PLANT PLANS FULL-TIME SCHEDULE

Philco Radio and Television corporation factory in Philadelphia, is working on a full-time schedule with prospects of overtime for all employes, beginning next week, according to information received here by J. C. Brown, distributor.

February production set a new high record, Philco has been the world's largest producer of radios for the past three years, and last month smashed all previous highs for February with record-breaking shipments.

New employes are being added to the payroll each week. March prospects in pending orders indicate that production will be again stepped up this month. A Philco factory official, who recently made a trip through the south, said—

"We are elated at the success with which the new Philco merchandise is meeting. This is not entirely from a selfish standpoint—we are providing employment for thousands of workers. The public has responded generously to the new low Philco prices, and we are delighted in being able to increase employment and furnish a steady payroll income for our operatives. Although we have enjoyed a marvelous business all through the depression, recent increase in public demand makes us feel that the economic situation has certainly passed the turning point."

ANSLEY DECORATION PLAN IS COMPLETED

An elaborate scheme of decoration has been completed in the Ansley Coffee Shoppe, according to Carling Dinkler, president of the hotel, who recently engaged Miss Joy Postle, a mural artist of Chicago, to make extensive redecorations about the hotel.

The value of going forward despite business conditions was proved in this instance, Mr. Dinkler stated, as the Coffee Shoppe business has increased considerably since the redecorations. Its famous oyster bar has proved especially popular.

SPECIAL RATES MADE FOR GARDEN OPENINGS

The Georgia railroad has inaugurated its week-end excursions to Charleston, S. C., for the opening of the garden season. Magnolia and Middleton Place Gardens are now in bloom. Owing to favorable weather conditions this year, the gardens will be more beautiful than ever before.

A special excursion fare will be authorized from Atlanta to Charleston and return each Friday and Saturday during March. The Pullman company has also authorized a special round-trip rate from Atlanta to Charleston and return of one and one-half fares.

J. P. GUDGER JOINS ACCIDENT AGENCY

Announcement was made on Saturday that J. Patten Gudger, formerly of Chatsworth, Ga., had become connected with the Atlanta branch of the North American Accident Insurance Co. Before entering this field, Mr. Gudger was connected with various companies in the south and west.

A weather-beaten, bullet-scarred coach, with body suspended by leather straps, reminiscent of the west during the days of the pony express and road agents, made its appearance on Broad street, in front of Rodeo headquarters, late Friday night.

The old vehicle, which ran on schedule between Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Deadwood, South Dakota, over 100 years ago, was placed on display by Colonel Jim Eskew, of Garland, Texas, who will act as judge at the contests to be staged by the Texas Rangers Rodeo at Lakewood park the week of March 20, under the auspices of the Atlanta Post No. 1 of the American Legion.

Allen L. Henson, of the Legion rodeo committee, announced a kids' drawing contest in conjunction with the coach. Any boy or girl in school in Atlanta or suburbs is eligible to enter the contest, which will consist of sketching the old coach in detail. Local artists are being appointed as judges and the best sketches will be awarded tickets, the number of tickets depending on the closest approach to the actual details of the coach itself. Neatness will be the main consideration in judging the drawings, and those which are colored will have the best chance of winning awards—a total of 23 tickets. For the best drawing submitted, in the opinion of the judges, six children's tickets to the rodeo will be awarded; for the second best, four children's tickets; for the third best, three children's tickets; and for the next ten best one ticket will be given for each drawing. The contest will close Thursday, March 16, and drawings should be turned into rodeo headquarters, 72 Broad street, not later than 6 p. m., of that day.

The contestants and stock now at Macon will have a week of rest before opening up at Lakewood park on March 20. In addition, numerous letters have been received from cowboys and cowgirls from other sections of the country stating they would be in Atlanta for the contests here.

Here Are Provisions Of Economy Bill

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—The lengthy and complex economy bill introduced in the house and senate Friday night at the instance of President Roosevelt carries the following striking provisions:

Pensions and allowances to veterans of all wars prior to the Spanish-American War cut 10 per cent flat.

The veterans' groups are divided into four classes and the president authorized to make regulations "respecting the minimum degree of disability and the higher degrees of disability pensionable."

The president is empowered to define the date of the beginning and ending of all wars since the Civil War, permitting him to fix the end of the World War on the date of the armistice, November 11, 1918, instead of in 1921, when the treaty of peace legally terminated it. Under this provision those veterans receiving 1918 and 1921 may be eliminated from the rolls or have their allowances sharply curtailed.

The president is empowered to find or prescribe the number of days of service necessary in all wars except the Civil War to receive a pension, and to fix the time limits on filing of claims, nature and extent of proof, what presumptions shall be accepted and other conditions which he deems just and equitable."

Authorizes domiciliary care of any non-service connected case where the veteran is permanently disabled, while service-connected cases are given medical and hospital treatment free.

Limits benefits to World War emergency retired officers to those whose injury was incurred in the line of duty or prior to November 11, 1918, and eliminates presumptive clauses.

The president is authorized to investigate the cost of living in the United States for six months prior to June 30, 1928, and announce an index figure for the base period and for each subsequent period to be determined by him, and base salary reductions for all employes of the government thereon, the reductions not to exceed 15 per cent.

The salaries of the vice president, speaker of the house and members of congress are reduced 15 per cent.

Retirement deductions authorized by law to be made from the salary of officers or employes and transferred or deposited to the credit of a retirement fund are based on the regular rate of pay instead of on the rate as temporarily reduced.

The treasury is authorized to receive remittances of salary from officers of the government whose compensation cannot be reduced under the constitution.

All funds unexpended in the operation of the bill are to be impounded in the treasury.

No court has jurisdiction in any suit against the United States, any officer or agency arising out of application of the measure, unless the suit involves the constitution.

Whenever the president makes an order under the bill, it must be submitted to congress while in session and not become effective until 60 days after transmission, unless congress shall provide for an earlier effective day.

Urban League Bulletin

By JESSE O. THOMAS.

According to R. W. Bullock, director of colored boys' work of the National Y M. C. A., the boy problem among negroes between the ages of 10 and 19, in the state of Georgia, has reached serious significance. Out of a total number of 129,444 boys of this age, only 5,545 are reached by some type of organized character-building program, such as the 4-H Club, Y. M. C. A., Boy Clubs of America and the Boy Scouts.

In that 100,753, or 77.8 per cent of the total, of these boys are in what would be called rural communities; 3,659 boys, of 66 per cent of the total number reached by some type of organized program, are enrolled in the 137 4-H Clubs in the state. As far as the boys in the urban centers are concerned, there are 760 enrolled in 18 different Y. M. C. A. groups, 716 in one Boys' Club group and 410 in 22 Boy Scout groups.

The foregoing figures show that many rural communities are without programs for these boys. There are an appalling number of urban communities of large size in the state without any type of program whatsoever for colored boys. This means that in the centers where crime and delinquency breed fast there are only 1,886 urban boys out of 28,691 being touched by some type of character-molding program.

"The Negro and Tuberculosis."

From the vital statistics records of the state department of health of Georgia for 1931, we find the negro death rate from tuberculosis 135.8 per thousand in comparison to 37.6 per thousand for whites, a ratio of a little more than 3 1-2 to 1. The combined death rate of 73.7 shows a decline of .9 over 1930. Though there was a decline of 4.3 per thousand in the white rate, there was an increase of 5.2 per thousand in the death rate for negroes.

Recognizing the seriousness of the tuberculosis situation among negroes, the Georgia Tuberculosis Association has called a statewide conference to be held in Atlanta this coming Tuesday, at which time the problem will be gone into by about one hundred representatives from various parts of the state interested in this very vital problem.

ROOSEVELT LAUDS 60-YEAR SERVICE OF NEGRO LACKEY

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(UP) Edward Augustine Savoy today reaped the harvest of more than 60 years of honest, cheerful toil.

Driven by a liveried chauffeur to the White House, the 78-year-old negro messenger was congratulated by President Roosevelt upon his long and faithful service at the state department.

"Yes, sir," squeaked the wizened little man who was breaking the ties of a life time in retiring from his job, "it's a great day for me. I'm going to tell about it in my book."

Eddie, who knows more diplomats perhaps than any other living person, was presented with a purse of $50 and an easy chair by the state department staff before being driven to the White House. Secretary Hull stopped for a chat. He told the old man he had made a wonderful record and would be missed.

And, as Eddie put it in his meticulous phraseology:

"He remembered me handsomely in a material way, too."

HOOVER IS ASSURED OF FAMILY'S SAFETY

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover was in touch with Mrs. Hoover and other members of his family in southern California by telephone early today, his secretary, Lawrence Richey, said, and was assured they were safe.

Dozens Seek Office As Chicago's Mayor

CHICAGO, March 11.—(AP)—Another political campaign opened in Chicago today, with dozens of potential candidates for the honor and power that goes with the mayor's office.

Governor Henry Horner announced he would sponsor legislation to empower the city council to elect a mayor pro tempore until a special election could be held to name a successor to Anton J. Cermak, who was killed in Florida by an assassin's bullet and was buried with lavish honors yesterday.

ROTARY CLUB FAVORS ROAD FUND DIVERSION

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 11.—The Valdosta Rotary Club went in favor of diversion of highway funds this when the matter was debated at the regular weekly luncheon held yesterday at the Hotel Daniel Ashley.

The question became so absorbing during the debate that the time was extended considerably beyond the hour limit, with a virtually unanimous decision in favor of diverting highway funds to help pay the state's debts.

GROWERS TO INSIST ON APPLE TRADE PACT

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—A program insisting on inclusion of apples in any reciprocal trade agreements that may be entered into by the new democratic administration was adopted today by the eastern apple growers' council.

White House Issues 'Help Wanted' Call

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(UP)—Pressure of business has been so great at the White House that it was necessary today to send out a call for help.

The hard-pressed White House staff was augmented by 10 additional stenographers hastily recruited from other governmental departments. They are expected to remain on the job until conditions return to normal.

It was explained that a veritable avalanche of mail has descended on the offices of Mr. Roosevelt and his secretaries since the declaration of the bank holiday and gold embargo.

Democratic Senate Gains Cut Swath in G. O. P. Side

Town Meet Season On in New England

BOSTON, March 11.—Town meeting is the principal concern of New England communities the first two weeks in March. Right up to the city limits of Boston a score of towns assemble their voters on the first or the second Monday and transact the business of appropriating the annual budget. Town meeting remains an utter democracy. Any citizen may speak on any item, and all may vote who can find entry to the hall.

In the suburbs of Boston, the town meeting has generally become an evening session, but that concession to commuters is not universal.

The intense interest in local self-government kept alive by town meeting has caused many large communities in Massachusetts to remain towns long after their population entitles them to city status. Brookline, a town of 40,000, with an annual budget of more than $5,000,000 to be appropriated at town meeting, is an outstanding example.

These larger towns have gradually been compelled to limit the form of town meeting because of the impossibility of seating their whole population in any hall. Every year sees new converts to the representative form of town meeting. Under this form, town meeting members are elected at the polls the first Monday in March and these representatives assemble on the second Monday, together with all town officials, to act on the town meeting warrant.

Towns that keep the pure form of town meeting have come to place a large preliminary duty upon a budget or finance committee which goes over the requirements of every department and makes a recommendation to the meeting.

Massachusetts towns, especially the suburbs of Boston, have resisted drastic cuts in school budgets.

Bay State schools appear to have been better supported through the depression than most public schools. Teachers' salaries have been cut 10 per cent in most places and every possible economy in maintenance has been instituted. Through the past three years reductions have amounted to 10 to 15 per cent.

Where cuts have been made in the school staff special departments in music, drawing, manual training, home economics and kindergartens have been first to suffer. Educators have protested that these most recent subjects more nearly meet modern needs than the more traditional courses, but they are still grouped as "frills" in the popular mind. Most school committees have followed the line of least resistance in letting the newer subjects go first.

Just at town meeting season the New Hampshire legislature has been presented with a report urging fundamental reorganization of governmental units all the way down through the local community. Significantly town meeting is almost the only governmental organization untouched by suggested change.

"The legislative body of the town is the town meeting. No change is contemplated in this institution," says the report of the specialists of Brookings Institute in their survey of what is needed to modernize New Hampshire government.

The essential changes would strengthen county administration at the expense of the town, and strengthen the executive function of the governor and departments under him at the expense of the council. An elected council now has co-ordinate authority with the governor, to approve all executive appointments and check budget expenditures. Massachusetts is the only other state in which the council retains a veto over the governor.

New Hampshire has a score of towns of under 200 and half its towns are under 600 population. It has proved hard to find talent in the smaller places for such specialized functions as welfare, health and highway administration. The unemployment emergency threw

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Dr. Turck Gives World Benefit His Long Research

There is now ready a book on biological research which is of exceptional interest to Atlantans for two reasons. First and foremost, of course, is the extreme value of the volume as a contribution to man's knowledge of the function of living cells. Secondary interest arises from the fact that the author, Dr. Fenton B. Turck, numbered many Atlanta people among his personal friends.

"The Action of the Living Cell," Dr. Turck's book, is published posthumously by the Macmillan company. Dr. Turck died last November while the book was in the press.

Dr. Turck was an internationally known physician and research worker in biology. Beginning his career as a practicing specialist in Chicago, he was later induced to move to New York where, at the head of an adequately endowed laboratory, he conducted experiments for a period of 40 years. It is the rich findings from these experiments that he leaves to posterity.

The volume is centered upon Dr. Turck's conclusion that injury to the cell results in a product of cellular disintegration which he calls "cytost."

Dr. Turck was first attracted to this product through experiments on the appearance and effect of shock after injury to the body. Because the shock did not make its appearance for several hours after the injury, he argues that it is caused, not through the nerves, but by a product of the cells themselves which he calls "cytost." Many experiments are cited confirming this belief and some extremely important deductions which, if later confirmed by other experimenters, will prove of high value in increasing the scientific knowledge of the cellular construction of the body and the reasons for shock, as well as methods of control.

Among other results indicated by Dr. Turck's experiments is the fact that the injury which produces "cytost" may be almost any form of irritation, actual muscular injury, poison or an external irritant. The presence of shock in every case is evidenced by a splanchnic congestion. It was shown that if the injured portion of the body was kept segregated by a ligature, thus keeping the cytost localized, the effects were not produced. An injection of the cytost from an injured animal, if injected in a healthy animal, brought on all the symptoms of shock and eventual death.

Experiments also showed that the administration of minute portions of cytost was, temporarily, beneficial to the animal, inducing greater growth and glossier fur and enhanced vitality.

One theory advanced is that the action of sunlight on the body, so strongly advocated today, is beneficial because of the slight injury from sunburn releasing minute quantities of cytost. It was also shown that, in some circumstances, individuals could be more or less immunized against the effects of cytost. From this is deducted the presence of another substance called, for convenience, "anticytost."

While the presence of the cytost is apparently proved by the many experiments conducted by Dr. Turck, he admits that it has so far been impossible to make a chemical segregation.

In the final chapter of the book Dr. Turck says:

"The writer is confident that the various types of experiments described in the text are capable of substantiation in the hands of other experimenters. It must be remembered, however, that animals vary markedly in their susceptibility to injury of any sort; but, as we have seen, the gross effects which result from various types of injury have in common the liberation of the tissue substance which we have termed cytost. . . ."

"The writer fully appreciates that many of his deductions and concepts will meet the opposition usually accorded new theories. This is desirable, since such opposition frequently constitutes the impetus necessary to provoke experimental researches which will finally prove or disprove the validity of the concept."

Dr. Turck's book is a valuable contribution to the literature of medical science and it should find a place in every medical library.

The research work of this great physician gave him a world-wide reputation, especially as to his successful treatment of ailments of the colon and stomach troubles generally.

His private hospital, first in Chicago and later in New York, became a mecca of distinguished patrons from all parts of the world, and probably no American physician ever had a more distinguished clientele than that treated by Dr. Turck in his notable career. He had methods of his own, based upon long and patient research, the benefit of which he has given to the profession in his book just published by the Macmillan Company, of New York.

SYLVIA THOMPSON.

Unfinished Symphony. By Sylvia Thompson. When the author wrote "The Hounds of Spring" she found her name among the popular young writers of the age, being also the author of "The Battle of the Horizons," "Portrait by Caroline," "Summer Night" and now her many readers are undecided about the best work since reading "Unfinished Symphony." One reader calls it the best because the situation is arresting, the people are absorbingly true to life, and finally because of Miss Thompson's deeply etched picture of modern English society.

The story is interesting, the characters well drawn, and the foundation is strong as well as unusual. It is the story of an English playwright who grows tired of being made a hero, with a hero's endurance, and realizing the shallowness of the admiration so extravagantly bestowed upon him. He slips away from London, taking with him his young daughter with the idea of bringing her up to real things in a real atmosphere, and to be taught to be honest and sincere and far away from the false ideas that men and women of years, by their own conduct, are instilling in the hearts and minds of the youth of today—this not being what Lawrence Marvell wanted for Helena. Then death claims her father and she has to return to London with a picture of English life opening like an attractive panorama of pleasure, happiness and gladness before her. There is London society with all its alluring attractions, her sister and her husband, a member of parliament, and, then, later, an American, a representative of youth, real youth, all this she saw after 14 years of real atmosphere—what did life hand out to her and how? The story is truly an unfinished symphony. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston).

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Clue of the Eyelash. By Carolyn Wells. A Fleming Stone detective story. The author writes in her opening paragraph: "Nine times out of ten you read somewhere on the first page of a mystery story that the detective is in appearance the very farthest removed from the description of the detective in fiction."

This could not apply to Fleming Stone, who was considered the perfect type of the detective of fiction, and, as to his work as a detective, this has been fully displayed in the stories of this famous author.

Have you ever been to Long Island to spend a holiday? Well, that is what a certain member of the detective force did, and instead of it being a day of pleasure he discovered a tragedy for the master of Greencastle, the old collector of coins, curious and rare books had been murdered, when and how would have to be determined for he was a member of a fourth of July dinner party and all the guests were there. Fleming Stone stood silently looking at the victim of some enemy's gun when he noticed, and finally recognized an eyelash, resting on the dead man's cheek. It is then that the interest of this famous detective became keen and centered on a mighty little thing—but, after all, it is the little things of life that really count. The unraveling of this mystery, for it is a real mystery to every one but Fleming Stone, keeps the reader entertained until the last, and while there is a mixture of other things, it is a story in which somebody's eyelash plays the leading part. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia).

The Cotswold Case. By Anthony Wynne. This is another Dr. Hailey Detective Novel. By the author of "The Green Knife." Readers who are familiar with the writings of Anthony Wynne is ever faithful to his great character, Dr. Eustace Hailey. If you will notice the two seem to be inseparable, and the interest displayed in the reading of this story is greater than in any of the others. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

Secret Love. By Louise Gerard. The author wrote "Life's Parade," and several other books that have made her name well-known to readers of modern fiction. The book is not confined to one country, but the heroine is first seen on land and then on sea, and there are many adventures before the story is brought to a happy climax. (Macaulay's Book, New York.)

Into Darkness. By Milton Krims. Plainly and truthfully has been portrayed the story of a millionaire, the weight of whose money had made life one long day of unhappiness. Barry Adams, the son of an aristocratic family who married a beautiful girl because he loved her, even though she was the daughter of a multi-millionaire. From the very first there was a battle with his greatest enemy and rival, money, and while he fought for his happiness and that of his wife, and later that of his child, his enemy, who is still an enemy outside of fiction, has wrecked many a home where love wanted to stay, wrecked his home. (Macaulay's Book.)

Through the Lens. A Thornton Zane Story. By Morrell Massey. Did you hear the story on Broadway or Fifth avenue how the Maharaja of Wadapur land, arrived in New York with all the gorgeous trappings and the pomp of the East, bringing with him the famous jewel of which so much has been said and written, and of the masses and the classes mingled in an effort to get a look at "The Light of India," the name the jewel was called, when a bullet seemingly from nowhere, ended the life of the owner of the jewel which disappeared at the same time? But this is not all, on account of this tragedy international complications follow, with the result that it is found later that an attache of the British embassy is stabbed.

Mr. Massey tells the whole story of thrills and excitement with Thornton Zane, the great psychologist, being called in to follow the trail, the clues leading from a handsome Long Island estate to a China town restaurant, where they surprisingly find the end of the trail. This is one of the best mystery stories of the past year and one that will hold the reader's attention. (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

Hotel Wife. By Ruth Lyons. The following comment covers the story: "This novel is intended to entertain, and critics will agree, that it succeeds in its intention." (Macaulay's Book, New York.)

Wedding. By Melvin P. Levy. In commenting on the style of this story a well-known critic says of the author, "he is a writer who is able to do fine and consistent work." (The Unicorn Press, New York.)

THE HUMAN PERSONALITY.

This new book of more than 300 pages, written by Dr. Lewis Berg, and dedicated to his mother, "who made all things possible," should be in the hands of every thinking man or woman for "personality and character are reflected in human response as a result of conflict in a broad and universal sense."

The book is really a message and one that should be so interesting and impressive as to cause study and thought on the subjects so earnestly discussed by the writer: "This book builds a pyramid of biologic and socio-psychiatric sciences in their relationship to the achievement of personality and to character formation."

In the preface the author, who is an educator and a former practicing sociologist, says: "If we are in understand human life and assist in the solution of its problems, it is necessary for us to assume both dynamic psychology and sociology with their emphasis upon the influence of environment and the limits of adjustment, and biology with its emphasis upon the mechanisms of heredity."

The author has made a most interesting division of his subjects—Personality, Biology and Personality; the Fiction of Normalcy; Personality in Conflict; the Criminal Personality; the Quest for Happiness, being some of the most interesting and instructive.

The editor's introduction by E. George Payne should be read and studied from the first to the last, the last lines being "Everyone who makes a contribution to the literature or practice of effective education procedure becomes a benefactor to the race through his contribution to the modern science of education."

AN AMERICAN IN RUSSIA.

An American Engineer Looks at Russia. By Colonel George A. Burrell. The writer of this book, at the request of the soviet government, worked in Russia. He neither went into Russia nor came out of that country, which the whole world is studying at the present time, a bolshevist, and in the many statements made by him it seems that from his viewpoint matters were not as bad as he expected to find them.

In this book Colonel Burrell tells an interesting story of the conditions in Russia before and since the World War. As you understand the story is written by an engineer who went to Russia under contract to aid in the improvement of the petroleum industry.

The writer covers all the interesting subjects in which Americans are interested, even the five-year plan of soviet Russia is explained, and how it affects the rest of the world. This is a history of life which is so well told, and so authentic, that the reader will find it of real interest. (Stratford's book, Boston.)

TOY DOGS.

The history, care and management of toy dogs is the very interesting and instructive subject of this new book by Josephine Z. Rine, editor of Popular Dogs. There are quite a number of distinguished names in the dog kingdom among the list of celebrities mentioned. It is a most attractive book, in fact it is said to be the most complete work of this kind ever published. The author's name is well known in sporting circles, being a judge and dog show devotee.

No phase of his dogship has been overlooked. If you have a valuable dog, or are thinking of buying one, you will find this book quite helpful in keeping him. The illustrations are also helpful. (Orange Judd Publishing Company, New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

ROMEWARDS. By C. J. Eushtace. This is the Catholic Book Club's selection for February. The author is a well-known writer, having achieved distinction in one of the Edward O'Brien collections—also in the O. Henry Memorial Award collections. The Table of Contents is a tory unto itself and is worth studying by the reader. This is valuable book for the library of every Catholic, for, as the author says, "the truths for which this church stands are not impractical but are the well-springs of all modern thought—they deal with the ultimates with which the modern world must concern itself." (Benziger Bros., New York.)

Henry M. Leipziger, Educator and Idealist. By Ruth L. Frankel. With an introduction by Dr. John H. Finley. In this biography the author tells the story of a pioneer educator who for nearly thirty years was interested in and largely a great influence in New York's great free lecture system. The story of the man and his work is briefly summed up and told in the Introduction by Dr. John H. Finley, of New York. In the foreword Miss Frankel tells, with pleasure, that Dr. Leipziger is her uncle, and she emphasizes the fact that, while he belonged to an era that is gone, and while he would be out of step with the world today, she says "I have tried not to present simply a true picture of my uncle, whom I adored, but a picture of a real educator and philosopher." And to this can be added that those who knew him know their lives to be richer for the contact. (The MacMillan Company, New York.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

"THE SHELTERED LIFE."

Ellen Glasgow's "The Sheltered Life" has just gone into a tenth large printing. Miss Glassgow's story of Eva Birdsong, last of the famous southern beauties, which was published early last season, continues to be one of the best-selling books on the Doubleday, Doran list.

SINCLAIR LEWIS BOOK.

The publication of "Ann Vickers," Sinclair Lewis' first novel since he won the Nobel prize, might well be called a world event in publishing, for it will appear simultaneously in 15 countries and 12 languages. In addition to the United States, these countries are England, Canada, France, Germany, Austria, Poland, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Hungary, Italy, Czecho-slovakia and Yugoslavia.

TARKINGTON BOOK MADE AVAILABLE FOR THE BLIND.

Booth Tarkington's new novel, "Wanton Mally," is being put into Braille. Mr. Tarkington's books are always very popular among blind readers and are in such demand that they are made available in Braille as soon as possible after the books are published.

NEW EDITIONS AT GARDEN CITY.

New editions of several books have come from the Garden City presses this week, among them a fifth large printing of Maugham's "The Narrow Corner," a seventh of "The Bishops' Jaegers" by Thorne Smith, a fifteenth of Don Marquis' classic, "Archy and Mehitabel," and a sixth of Beverley Nichols' "Down the Garden Path."

CAVALCADE PUBLISHED.

Doubleday, Doran & Company have just brought out "Cavalcade," by Noel Coward. This is the play which was the outstanding hit of the London theatrical season and from which was made the screen version which promises to be as popular here as the play was in London.

HOME REMEDY WEEK APPEALS TO BUYERS

By WARDEN LA ROE.

The baby is growing up! Twelve years old this month, and a baby to be proud of!

With a little friendly urging this year, that famous N. A. R. D. youngster — "First Aid-Home Remedy Week"—can do a lot toward paying off the mortgage on the old homestead for druggists all over the land.

Friendly suggestion. Proper advertising promotion and store displays. Real selling talk from every clerk in Drugdom. That is all it takes to put long pants on the boy, and money in his pockets, when March 12 starts another birthday celebration!

Druggists who can look back in business to 1922 will remember that the newly-born "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" was a promising but not particularly healthy infant. But glance at the development chart. Bigger every year. A greater joy to the nation's druggists all the time.

In the 1933 Baby Show of Business, "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" looks like a real prize winner!

There's a reason, of course. "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" gets "under the skin" of the public. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now," the famous slogan of this annual drive to sell first-aid and emergency supplies, has a homely, unselfish appeal that makes drug-store customers check up and stock up. Adequately publicized and personalized by individual drug stores, "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" makes cash registers sing a merry tune that is music to any druggist's ears.

The National Association of Retail Druggists is behind the 1933 anniversary of "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" even more strongly than in past years. State pharmaceutical associations are backing it to the limit. The National Wholesale Druggists' Association and the National Association of Retail Drug Clerks are giving the campaign unusual support. In their radio programs and through other channels, national advertisers are planning to make it the topic of the week.

With all these forces behind it, "First Aid-Home Remedy Week" can be nothing but a success this year. But co-operation of every druggist in the land will make it a red-letter week—in big black letters.

General Motors Introduce Two New Truck Lines

Two new medium-duty trucks, providing truck users in this section a more uniform graduation of capacity, performance and price are now available in the General Motors truck line, according to an announcement by C. M. Alexander, local zone manager for the company. They are the T-33 and the T-43, the former being designed for the three-ton range and the latter for the four-ton.

A major feature of both models is the new GMC "257" six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, redesigned and improved to provide the utmost in power and economy. "This engine," said Mr. Alexander, "has the distinction of delivering the highest sustained torque of any power plant in its field—185 foot pounds at 1,000 to 1,600 revolutions per minute. It is ruggedly built, remarkably smooth-running and has special features of design which make for long wear and low operating cost."

Among outstanding advances provided in the engine and chassis are down draft carburetion, steel-backed precision type main bearings, light weight semi-steel pistons, sturdy frame with ample reserve strength, and rugged transmission and rear axle. Both models conform throughout to the standards of design and construction for which GMC is already well known in this locality.

FOUR LOCAL WINNERS NAMED IN CONTEST

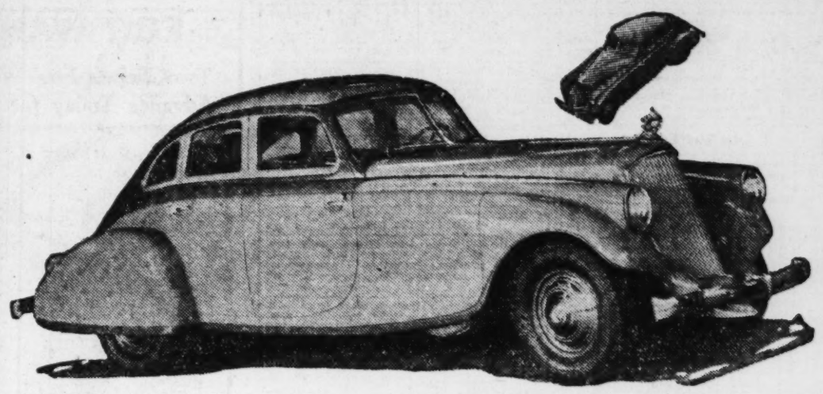

The names of four Atlanta winners in the second of the series of word-building contests sponsored by the Washburn-Crosby company, makers of Gold Medal flour, were announced on Saturday.

These are Mrs. W. H. Pickett, 189 Fifth street, N. W.; Mrs. George L. Otis, 171 Fourth street, N. W.; Mrs. Florie J. Bishop, 2043 Ridgedale road, and Mrs. J. B. Hatch, Decatur. Mrs. Hatch also was a winner in the first contest.

In the contest, each contestant is required to submit as many three-letter words as possible from the words, "Try Gold Medal Kitchen Tested Flour." Each contestant was also required to name his or her favorite grocery store, and in each instance the manager of the grocery store named receives a prize equal to that of the contestant.

The third of the nation-wide contests is now under way. Details, it is announced, can be secured from various grocery stores. The awarding of the local prizes are made by S. W. Branch, Atlanta sales representative of the Washburn-Crosby company.

Sensational Pierce-Arrow Is Here for Showing

In addition to introducing a complete line of twelves and eights at the national auto show in New York city this week, Pierce-Arrow surprised the entire industry by exhibiting a new and revolutionary car called the Silver Arrow. True stream lines, developed as a result of endless wind-tunnel experiments, give the car a maximum speed of 115 miles per hour—while at cruising speeds of from 60 to 80 miles per hour, it slips silently and easily through the air. The Silver Arrow is of cabin cruiser proportions. The interiors are gorgeously luxurious. Only five cars are being built. The car is priced at $10,000. That it will revolutionize motor car design during the next two years seems inevitable. This car will be on display here in the showrooms of the Yarbrough Motor Company, 560 West Peachtree, N. W.

Meet 'Lazy Rubber'

"Lazy-rubber" riding ease is the tire industry's latest contribution to soft riding comfort and safety, according to tire engineers. This newest attainment, according to C. J. Jahant, vice president of the General Tire and Rubber Company, banishes the "tennis ball" rebound which is commonly associated with air under compression, has been achieved in the 1933 line of General blowout-proof dual balloons by the addition of "prismatic" sidewall construction. This wholly new departure, according to Mr. Jahant, stands significantly apart from all previous conceptions of tire design and brings new structural strength as well as new added beauty to distinguish these new 1933 Generals, now in full production.

Thousands See Chevrolet's New Standard Models Here

Chevrolet's new entry in the automobile market—"the Standard Six"—went on public display Saturday at dealer showrooms the country over.

Although certain models are priced as much as $86 below the present series, now known as the Master Six to distinguish it from the Standard, the new car has a wheelbase of 107 inches.

Featuring air-stream styling, the new car resembles in external appearance its companion series. Three body types are offered—coach, coupe and coupe with rumble seat, all with bodies by Fisher and all featuring the new Fisher no-draft ventilation system.

Powered by a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine, the new motor develops 60 horsepower at 3,000 R. P. M. and is said to have a top speed of 65 to 70 miles per hour. It is of the same basic design as the six first introduced by Chevrolet in 1928 and now used in the master series.

While certain features are identical with the master series, a company statement emphasizes that the new standard Chevrolet is an entirely new car, and not a smaller version of the master nor a resurrection of an older model. It is the result of two years of development work, the company states, and is a companion car to the master series designed primarily to consolidate Chevrolet in its position of leadership in the industry, which it has held four years out of the past six, by opening up to it that market represented by people who want lowest first cost and operating costs. The new standard six, the company claims, will deliver more miles per gallon of gasoline than any other full-size car now on the market, and is ideally adapted to the needs of the fleet user and the commercial traveler.

By announcement day upwards of 15,000 of the new models were scheduled to have been built and delivered to dealers for a simultaneous national showing. The cars are being built, just as the master series, in the company's 20 domestic manufacturing and assembly plants, and all cars bearing the Chevrolet name are built of the same materials, to the same precision limits, on the same manufacturing and assembly lines and by the same fine craftsmen.

Prominent in the features of the standard Chevrolet are skirted fenders front and rear, which conceal all under parts of the car, safety plate glass in the windshield, finger tip seat control, the new outward flare of the rear panel to conceal the gasoline tank and other under parts, stabilized front-end mounting, new transmission with non-clashing gears and silent second, downdraft carburetion and new octane selector first introduced by Chevrolet, counter-balanced crankshaft and many other modern car features.

In exterior appearance the standard Chevrolet resembles the master models except for size. One noticeable departure is on the hood, where the slanting doors of the big car are represented on the standard series with louvres—18 on each side symmetrically grouped. The radiator is the popular slanting "V" type with harmonizing paint instead of chromium plate on the shell. The hood has the internally-operated catch.

Beneath the hood a six-cylinder engine of the same basic design as used by Chevrolet since 1928 provides power for the new car. The engine has a displacement of 180.96 cubic inches, with a bore of 3 5-16 inches and a stroke of 3.5 inches. It is equipped with Chevrolet's new octane selector and a down-draft carburetor. The crankshaft has three bearings, has four counterweights forged integrally and weighs 57 pounds.

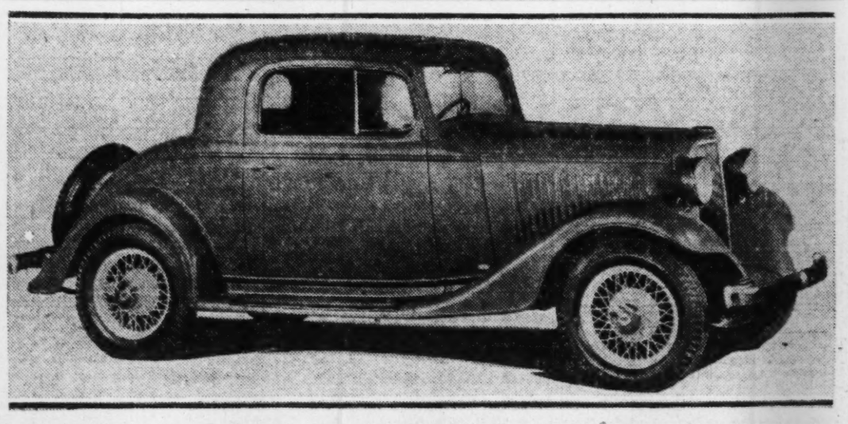

Five wire wheels with 40 riveted spokes on a permanent drop-center rim with a large diameter hub of the concealed bolt type are standard on all models. The wheels carry a generous sized 5.25 by 17 balloon tire perfectly proportioned to balance the rest of the car from appearance and loading standpoints.

All body models have large cowl ventilators and all are equipped with concealed windshield wiper motors, the wiper return being automatic. Free turning door handle locks are provided, with internal button locks. Drivers' seats are easily adjustable on all models and internal sun shades are supported at both ends. All hardware is chrome finished. A number of interior body accessories and conveniences are provided with all models.

Economy is stressed in all company literature, both in first cost and maintenance and operation. The company, according to President W. S. Knudsen, expects the standard car to account for about one-fourth of its total production and sales. The car is called the lowest-priced, full-size six-cylinder enclosed car now on the market, and is ideally adapted to the needs of the fleet user and the commercial traveler.

Addition of this new line opens to Chevrolet three distinct markets in the automotive field, and further entrenches it in its position of leadership. It now manufactures a line of commercial cars and trucks covering 90 per cent of all trucking needs. Its master six has a potential of more than 60 per cent of all passenger car business done by the industry. And the new standard opens up to the company practically the entire market in the passenger car field represented by fleet users and commercial travelers.

Ford Dealer Receives First 1933 Truck Series

Of importance to commercial and fleet truck users, is the statement by officials of the Ford Motor Company, in Atlanta, that the new 1933 Ford truck and commercial cars were being delivered to dealers in the Atlanta territory and to go on display immediately.

These trucks were received here during the past week by Ernest G. Beaudry Motor Company, located at 169 Marietta street, N. W., and are the feature of their display.

These trucks are available in 45 different body types covering every possible hauling need. With new stream-line radiator treatment which gives them new distinction and beauty never before introduced into the make-up of cars for commercial use.

The Ford 1933 line will be powered by their 50 horsepower four-cylinder motor which has proven its power and ability in over a million pleasure cars in use today. It has all of the new features incorporated to add to its efficiency and economy of operation and opens a new field for hauling with an absolute minimum of operating cost and upkeep.

The drivers cabs on these models are of the much improved type, being roomier and fitted with necessary appointments and equipment that will add materially to their appearance and riding quality.

Another feature is the three-quarter floating rear spring arrangement, that has been tried and poven to be among the most successful spring suspension methods on commercial cars today, and Ford is the first in the light car field to introduce it.

The commercial car division of the Ernest G. Beaudry Company is fully organized to demonstrate and recommend for your particular transportation needs, and invite inspection at their place anytime.

R. M. W. Shaw To Address Big City Dealers Here

J. M. Wilson, zone manager for Buick, Oldsmobile and Pontiac, will be host Monday to R. M. W. Shaw, general sales manager for Oldsmobile, and 25 members of big city dealers at a meeting and luncheon to be held at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

R. M. W. Shaw

Mr. Shaw, one of the automobile industry's leaders, will discuss the extensive spring sales and advertising program soon to be launched by his company. Their advertising campaign is said to be the most elaborate ever attempted by an automobile factory and covers every class of medium, with newspapers heading the list which will feature action copy.

Terraplane Used Exide Battery In Breaking Record

"In congratulating the local dealers, J. W. Goldsmith, Inc., for the splendid manner in which a Terraplane Eight sedan established a new record at Daytona Beach recently, we ourselves are naturally proud of the part played by Exide in the test," said Mr. Pope, the local Exide branch manager.

"This Terraplane," explained Mr. Pope, "was a stock car and was equipped with a regular stock Exide battery."

Running under A. A. A. sanction and timed by the same electrical equipment used for Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird, this Terraplane Eight sedan established an entirely new set of records for its displacement class at Daytona Beach. The car was driven by Chet Miller, who set the Pike's Peak hill climb record last Labor Day with a Terraplane Six.

New records were established for all distances up to and including 10 kilometers, the records being for the flying mile and five-mile distances, and for one, five and ten kilometers. All of the flying start records were made at speeds in excess of 85 miles per hour.

One of the notable performances of the sedan making this run was the fact that the mark established for the standing start mile is better than any previous record regardless of size or class. Previous best standing mile was for a class "B" car at 67.03 miles per hour. The time established by the Terraplane was 67.969 miles per hour.

DEALERS ANNOUNCE SEIBERLING CONTEST

A prize contest, during which six new Seiberling tires and other prizes will be awarded weekly, has just been announced by the Brooks-Shatterly Company, Seiberling distributors for Fulton and adjacent counties. These first weekly prizes will be awarded during the week of March 19 and will be publicly announced Wednesdays over WGST at 7:45 p. m. and in the newspapers.

First prize, two Seiberling Duo Tread tires.

Second prize, two Seiberling De Luxe tires.

Third prize, two Seiberling double service tires.

Six other prizes will be awarded weekly for honorable mention.

The prizes will be awarded for the best written description of the new Seiberling tire line, or authentic records of outstanding service secured from Seiberling tires in the past. In order to qualify all contestants must comply with these simple rules governing the contest:

1. Contestants must be car owners and reside in Fulton or adjacent counties.

2. All entries or letters must show the name, address and phone number of contestant with the make and model of car owned.

3. Car owners may compete as often as they wish during the contest, though but one entry will be considered any one week.

4. The winners will be selected weekly from the letters received during the previous week only, and the decision of the judges will be final.

5. The winners will be awarded the size tires required by the car shown on their entry.

One does not have to be a customer of the Brooks-Shatterly Company or associate Seiberling tire dealers to participate in this contest. The rules have been made as simple as possible in order that all may have an equal chance to win a new pair of Seiberling tires, or one of the other valuable prizes to be awarded weekly to those contestants receiving honorable mention for their entries.

The Brooks-Shatterly Company invite contestants to call on them or any Seiberling tire dealer in Fulton or adjacent counties and secure a leaflet giving the complete rules of the contest and an illustrated folder completely describing the new line of Seiberling products. Contest letters should be addressed to contest judges, Brooks-Shatterly Co., 1643 Jonesboro road, S. E., or Spring and Walton streets.

STEADY, NOW!

THIS is a good time to sit steady and not rock the boat. The boil has been lanced, and will soon begin to heal—if too many "doctors" don't try to make it heal too quickly. Motor cars are good property, and should not be sacrificed at this time, as they will sell for more money just as soon as the readjustment is over.

OUR stock of good used cars is large and varied. We will trade in your old car on a better one. Our prices are lower now than they will be later. We offer our normal easy terms. We will continue to pay cash as usual for good cars. Remember our "better than a guarantee" plan fully protects you.

Wheat, spot No. 2, northern Manitoba 49c.
a—Asked; b—Bid.

WINNIPEG, March 11.—(AP)—As a fitting climax to a week of erratic markets, wheat futures prices fluctuated widely but went nowhere on the short session of the Winnipeg grain market today. At one period, more than a cent higher, values closed unchanged to 1-8 cent up, May option at 52 1-4, July 53 1-2 and October 55 1-8. Trading was active throughout.

The cash grain division continued quiet, but coarse grains were active in sympathy with wheat.

Business Indicator

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Statistics appearing during the past week on freight car loadings, electric power production and steel ingot output, showed a declining tendency, according to Moody's Index figures for these factors.

These indexes are corrected for seasonal variation—that is, if each change in the actual reported loadings or production amounted to the usual change for the period, the index itself would be unchanged.

The index follows:

	Freight	Electric	Steel	Combined
Latest week	49.3	90.8	19.2	53.1
Prev. week	51.4	91.6	21.7	54.9
Month ago	51.3	91.3	22.9	55.2
Year ago	57.8	97.0	29.8	61.5
2 years ago	75.4	106.8	59.5	80.6

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER FOR CLOTHING TRADE

Prospects for business this fall look very bright according to E. E. Green, local representative of Curlee Clothing Company, of St. Louis, Mo., manufacturers of men's clothing.

"Our February report shows an increase in the sale of top coats of 36 per cent in money and 46.7 per cent in unit sales, the best record our company has made since 1890. We are looking forward to a splendid season and hope to hang up more records before the year is over."

Sales Decrease.

CHICAGO, March 11.—(AP)—The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company reported today that sales for the four-week period ending February 25 amounted to $61,102,151, against a total of $69,868,307 for the same time in 1932. The decrease was 12.5 per cent, while tonnage sales dropped only 1.6 per cent from 412,811 tons in 1932 to 406,156 this year.

WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR CURRENT WEEK

South Atlantic States—Occasional rain except in southern Florida first half of week, then generally fair until about Saturday, when rain is probable. Warmer Monday and Tuesday, colder Wednesday night and Thursday and warmer by Saturday.

North and Middle Atlantic States—Rain beginning Monday or Monday night and ending about Wednesday, then generally fair until Saturday, when rain is probable over south and rain or snow over north portion, warmer Monday and Tuesday, considerably colder Wednesday night and Thursday and warmer by Saturday.

Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Rain Monday and Tuesday and possibly rain changing to snow flurries over east portion Wednesday. Rain again probable by Friday night or Saturday. Warmer Monday, considerably colder middle of week and warmer by Friday.

Central and East Gulf States—Considerable cloudiness with occasional showers early in week and towards close. Moderately warm weather first part, probably colder in middle or latter part of week.

Southern Plains and Western Gulf States—Considerable cloudiness with showers in most portions at beginning and again in latter part of week. Temperatures near or somewhat above normal first part, probably colder in middle or latter part of week.

Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys—Some precipitation beginning of week, followed by fair and colder weather. Moderating toward end of week, probably with some precipitation.

Miscellaneous Markets.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Price tension lessened today in primary textile markets due to a belief that banks will soon be open and checking facilities resumed.

On a report of sharp advances in the cost of printing cloths effective March 20, buying of gray cloths was a little more active where converters and others sought to provide cloths for processing. Burlaps are firm and quiet. More business was stirring in dress fabrics and coatings but men's wear goods were quiet.

Restoration of trading in silk speculative markets abroad has not yet led to active buying of silks here. Linens have sold more freely on belief that prices will be higher. Rayon yarns are in demand for April and May delivery with prices firm. In several instances where prices have been advanced trading is still going on at lower figures to clean up stocks and nearby deliveries.

METALS.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Metals nominally unchanged.

WOOL.

BOSTON, March 11.—Wool prices showed a tendency to rise during the past week. Quotations were advanced 5 to 10 per cent on the finer grades of western grown wools and in some cases a substantial part of the rise in asking prices was realized on actual sales. The medium and low territory wools on all grades of fleeces were quoted steady to slightly higher following advances in prices of 58s 60s and finer western wools. The inquiry was considerably more active than last week and several lines moved more readily. The volume of business was kept down by numerous withdrawals of offerings.

NORFOLK REPORTS 7 1-2 CENT COTTON

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—The first official price for spot cotton since the closing of the exchanges was reported today from Norfolk with middling quoted at 7.50 cents a pound against 6.26 cents last week. Reopening of the exchange there was the most important development of the day, although the market is strictly for spot dealings. The sales totaled 331 bales.

Reports reaching the spot cotton trade indicated a hardening of the price basis in the south.

Telegrams from the southwest were said to report that holders in the interior were asking, in some cases, 7 cents for cotton basis middling 7-8-inch staple but that many others were holding for prices ranging up to 8 cents, these quotations being equivalent to about 7 1-2 to 8 1-2 cents at the ports. In the eastern belt spot holders were also said to be firmer, some in the interior asking 7 1-2 cents or the equivalent of 8 cents delivered in eastern mills on the basis of middling 7-8ths.

A message received by the New York Cotton Exchange from Augusta said 249 bales of middling cotton 7-8-inch staple had sold at 7 cents in that market. This was the first spot quotation officially posted this week, and it was believed that the sale referred to a transaction reported earlier in the week.

According to some of the local spot houses only a moderate business is being done with the mills but inquiries indicate that manufacturers are attempting to secure quotations on which to base prices and that if they make good sales on that basis, they will take the cotton as a hedge against the business.

The Liverpool market was easier after the advance of yesterday, opening at a decline of 2 to 6 points and closing at net losses of 11 to 12 English points. A good inquiry was reported for middling cotton in that market with the price one point higher at 5.18. Cables received in the trade here attributed the Liverpool reaction to local and outside selling with a small offtake. There were also reports of some hedge selling against imports of Indian, Peruvian and African cotton.

ADVANCE IN COTTON REPORTED AT AUGUSTA

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Spot cotton at Augusta, Ga., apparently the only active market in the south this week, today advanced 25 points to a basis of 7.25 cents per pound for middling. Sale of 292 bales at this figure was officially reported to the New Orleans Cotton Exchange shortly after confirmation of a sale of 249 bales at seven cents flat. Augusta earlier this week reported other sales at 7 cents. Both transactions today were sales to mills.

At 7 1-4c, today's sales represented an advance of 87 points, or $4.35 a bale above the Augusta quotation of .. week ago prior to the bank holiday.

SHARP GAINS NOTED IN PRICE OF METALS

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Sharp advances occurred in all nonferrous metals this week on generally improved demand. Buying of lead was particularly heavy from practically all branches of the consuming trades. Prices advanced $7 per ton on the broadest buying movement during the past year or more, with purchases equally divided between March and April shipment. Zinc quotations have advanced approximately $10 per ton during the past fortnight on a fair demand from consuming interests. Buying tapered off at the higher asking levels, however.

The price for copper advanced 1-2 cent per pound after having remained unchanged for a period of about three months. A moderate demand developed at the new level of 5 1-2 cents for electrolytic. However, there was no general rush to buy. The base price of copper and brass products was also advanced 1-2 cents per pound.

Tin prices were nominally higher. Actual business was not large because of differences in buyers' and sellers' ideas.

Nominal quotations for antimony were also advanced but the market was idle.

In contrast with other metals, there was no change in steel quotations. Some contraction in demand was noted owing to curtailment of automobile production. However, buying has been on a hand-to-mouth basis for such an extended period that further reduction was not anticipated in some lines. Buyers of pig iron remained cautious at unchanged prices.

Foreign Markets

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON—Confidence prevailed on the stock exchange today and the closing tone was steady. American shares were in demand, the leaders showing advances of ¼ to 3 points. Bar gold declined 7 pence per ounce and bar silver 1-16 of a penny. Gold amounting to 1,207,600 pounds was purchased by the Bank of England.

LIVERPOOL—Grains improved in tone today, following Friday's strength at Winnipeg, and wheat closed ¼ of a penny dearer. Cotton futures declined 11 to 12 points on local and Bombay selling and the market closed barely steady.

PARIS—Bourse opened irregular. French stocks were in demand but international shares declined. The market closed heavy.

BERLIN—Prices on the boerse were lower due to profit-taking and the market closed weak.

WIDE GAINS MADE IN STOCK PRICES

MONTREAL, March 11.—(AP)—Stocks made substantial advances on the Montreal stock exchange today, the seventh day of trading since the New York market closed down. A narrow list contributed a turnover of 5,500 shares and gains ranged from fractions to more than two points.

Demand for base metals was brisk, both Consolidated Smelters and International Nickel having sales in more than 1,000 shares. Smelters moved up strongly to 67, up 2 1-4 on the day and 11 1-2 points higher for the week. Nickel added 1-4 at 9 7-8 and Canadian Pacific 1-8 at 11 3-4.

Steel of Canada climbed 1 3-4 points to 17 1-2, a new high. Sherwin Williams advanced a point to 5. Banque Canadienne Nationale dipped 1 1-4 to 128 1-4. Losses of 1-8 each were shown by National Steel Car and Canadian Industrial Alcohol.

Utilities tended easier. British Columbia Power lost 1-4 at 17 and Montreal Power 1-8 at 28 7-8.

FREIGHT LOADINGS INCREASE IN WEEK

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—American Railway Association announced today that car loadings for the week ended March 4 were 477,827 cars, an increase of 18,748 over the preceding week, but 81,652 under the same mark in 1932.

Inflation To Help Real Estate, Raise Values, Morris Ewing Says

Prices on real estate, like prices of merchandise and commodities, will be marked up as a result of additional currency, according to Morris Ewing, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, who was interviewed by The Constitution Saturday.

"With the inflation of currency authorized by the government," said Mr. Ewing, "there is bound to be an increase in the price of commodities. This increase, in fact, has already begun. Cotton, wheat and provisions have gone up.

"With this general increase will come an increase in real estate prices. As the value of the dollar decreases, the price of commodities will increase.

"We real estate men have preached it for a long time, but the public is just now realizing that all wealth is based on real estate. Now that prices are low is the time to buy. The low-priced real estate is coming off the market. Already some of the larger companies are marking up their prices.

"The investor in real estate now enjoys a double advantage. He can take his money out of hiding and put it in safe security, and at the same time he will get the immediate advantage of inflation.

"Today our company had an unusual application, the like of which we had not received for many months. A man came in and said that he wanted to put his cash in a good real estate mortgage. You will find that savings and hoarded money will seek an outlet in first mortgage loans, for the collateral is sounder, and the interest rate higher, than in any other form of security.

"Soon you will see money become easier, and rates for real estate loans will come down. This in itself will result in real estate investment. It will also bring an increase in building, especially in home building. In some respects, I think we are overbuilt, and recovery here will be slower.

"As prices go up and employment increases, we shall see an improvement in the renting situation. Families who have been 'doubling up' in one house will seek detached quarters. As business expands, there will be a greater demand for stores and offices.

"I think that now we can say, without fear of ridicule, that prosperity is right around the corner, and that improvement will set in at once and continue conservatively for sometime."

MORRIS EWING.

Bicentennial Body Plans Program For Governors of Colonial States

Plans for entertainment in Atlanta of the governors of the original 13 colonies in observance of Georgia's bicentennial were released Saturday as Representative Mundy, of Polk, prepared to seek passage in the house Monday of a resolution appropriating $25,000 to enable Georgia to participate in the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago.

The $25,000 would be used as the nucleus of a fund of $75,000 or $100,000 to be raised by subscription, to be handled by the governor with the assistance of Scott Candler, state commander of the American Legion. A Century of Progress commission of 20 members was appointed by former Governor Russell under an act of 1931 to co-operate with the exposition in forming plans for celebrating Georgia's bicentennial in Chicago.

The commission proposes to place in the capitol a tablet commemorating the bicentennial of the state, the cost to be borne by a member of the executive committee, it was said.

The Georgia bicentennial commission is seeking to have its membership increased from 12 to 30 so that all sections of the state may be represented. The commission is seeking an appropriation of $15,000 toward organization expenses, the balance of the necessary $50,000 to be raised by the commission, it was announced.

The date of the meeting of the original 13 states is to be set so that it will be agreeable to the 13 governors. The celebration will include a colonial military parade to Grant field, the military companies to be clad in colorful uniforms. At the field, governors of the other 12 states will congratulate Governor Talmadge and the people of Georgia on the 200th birthday of the state.

A large stage is to be erected on the field for the re-enactment of the first meeting of the 13 original colonial states and the signing of the Declaration of Independence. At the close of the pageant, the governors are to meet at the capitol, "where it is hoped that some great and important matter will be brought up and recommended to the nation as was done in 1776," it was said.

"Such a celebration will focus the minds fo the entire nation on Georgia and bring to Atlanta large numbers of visitors," it was said. "At the Massachusetts tercentary celebration in 1930, planned and directed by Albert R. Rogers, director of the Georgia bicentennial commission, even in a year of depression close to 5,000,000 persons from outside of the state attended the eight-month statewide celebration, leaving in the state more than $200,000,000."

Informal Parties Mark Calendar At Ft. McPherson

FORT McPHERSON, Ga., March 11.—Interest of the army set centers in informal social affairs, the elaborate entertainments which marked the garrison social calendar in years past have been replaced by small gatherings and members of the military group dine, tea and dance along with civilian guests at small parties.

The entertainment committee for the month, including Captain Albert H. Dumas and Mrs. Dumas, Captain Levi W. Foy and Lieutenant Franklin Johnston, have planned an informal dinner-dance for St. Patrick's Day, Friday, March 17. Colonel Christian A. Bach and Mrs. Bach will entertain a group of guests and Major Joseph Benjamin Pate and Mrs. Pate will be hosts at a party.

Captain Frank Childs and Mrs. Childs will entertain at a table, the guests including their mother, Mrs. Albert E. Cowdrey; Brigadier General George H. Estes and Mrs. Estes, Colonel Fay W. Brabson and Mrs. Brabson, Major Walter Fullarton Macklin and Mrs. Macklin, Captain Albert H. Dumas and Mrs. Dumas, Captain Druid E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, Captain Joseph Aman and Mrs. Aman and Lieutenant Charles Landon.

Captain Samuel L. Cook and Mrs. Cook will entertain at a table, when covers will be placed for Colonel Charles Lovelace Foster and Mrs. Foster, Major George Woodward and Mrs. Woodward, Captain Edwin Aldridge and Mrs. Aldridge and the hosts.

Miss Jane Crosby, of Washington, D. C., the guest of Lieutenant Albert Carol Morgan and Mrs. Morgan, will be an attractive guest in a party, the group to include Captain Druid E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, Captain Levi W. Foy, Lieutenant J. K. Baker and Mrs. Baker, Lieutenant C. D. McAllister and Mrs. McAllister, Lieutenant C. R. Smith and Mrs. Smith, Lieutenant Harry Wheaton and Mrs. Wheaton, Miss Frances Barnett, Lieutenant Douglas McNair and Lieutenant George Crosby.

Members of the army set and guests from town assembled at the hop given Friday evening at the Officers' Club. Prior to the hop Captain Thomas H. Ramsey and Mrs. Ramsey were hosts at dinner at their quarters. The table was centered with a silver bowl filled with snapdragons in tones of pink and yellow, and silver candlesticks held pale yellow tapers.

Covers were placed for Major Walter Fullarton Macklin and Mrs. Macklin, Major Harrard Moore and Mrs. Moore, Major Francis Fuller and Mrs. Fuller, Captain John R. Dinsmore and Mrs. Dinsmore, Captain Albert H. Dumas and Mrs. Dumas, Captain Druid E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, Captain Albert G. Wing and Mrs. Wing, Lieutenant J. K. Baker and Mrs. Baker, Lieutenant Albert Carol Morgan and Mrs. Morgan, Lieutenant R. H. Torosky.

Miss Glausier and Mr. Tidmore Will Wed at June Ceremony

Miss Christine Glausier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Weston Glausier, whose engagement is announced to Joseph Christopher Tidmore, of Moundsville, Ala., the marriage to be solemnized in June. Photograph by Asasno, Japanese photographer.

Centering the interest of a wide circle of friends in Georgia and Alabama, is the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Martha Christine Glausier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Weston Glausier, to Joseph Christopher Tidmore, of Moundville, Ala. Miss Glausier is the only child of her parents, her mother having been before her marriage Miss Minnie Davis, of Woodbury, Ga. Her father has for many years been prominent in educational circles. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Donna Guilford Glausier and the late Thomas Jefferson Glausier, of Baconton, Ga., and great-granddaughter of the late La Tasia Palatte, of South Carolina. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Emma Betts Davis and Joseph R. Davis, of Woodbury, Ga.

The bride-elect graduated from the Decatur High school, receiving the state expression medal for 1927. She completed her education at Wesleyan College, Macon. There she made dramatic art a specialty, receiving her diploma in 1931, and during the same year was president of the Wesleyan Dramatic Club. She has received two loving cups for exceptional work in play-writing and play-coaching. She did graduate work at Emory University; played with the Emory players and also coached them. She had the cultural advantages of travel in this country and abroad and is now director of dramatics in the Druid Hills school.

The bridegroom-to-be is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Christopher Tidmore, of Moundsville, Ala. His mother was formerly Miss Ida Mae Borden. He is a brother of Dr. Thomas L. Tidmore, of Atlanta; Bordon Tidmore, of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. J. Wallace Tidmore, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala.; and Mrs. Rogers Elliott, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Tidmore graduated from Emory University in 1932, having held many honors in the college. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, Pi Delta Epsilon journalistic fraternity, D. V. S. senior honor society, Rat Social Club, and is pledged to Phi Chi medical fraternity. He was editor of the Campus, the college yearbook in 1932. He is now in the Emory medical school. The marriage of Miss Glausier and Mr. Tidmore will be solemnized in June. The wedding plans will be announced later.

Miss Sheridan Weds Robert H. Strickland At St. Paul's Church

The marriage of Miss Lettie Alene Sheridan to Robert Henry Strickland was quietly solemnized at 8 o'clock Friday evening, at St. Paul's Methodist church, with the Rev. Henry Jones, pastor of the church, officiating. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Alta Sheridan, who wore pink pebble crepe with beige hat and accessories. Her shoulder bouquet was of pink rosebuds. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Earl Strickland.

The bride, who possesses striking brunet coloring, was lovely in a smart suit of dawn blue trimmed with gray squirrel and worn with gray accessories. Her shoulder spray was of sweetheart roses and valley lilies. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Hugh Middleton sang "Because," accompanied by Miss Josephine Smith, who played the wedding march and rendered a program of appropriate music during the ceremony.

Following the marriage, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Sheridan, entertained at their home at an informal reception for members of the immediate families. Mrs. Strickland is the second daughter of her parents and received her education at Girls' High school and Asbury College.

Mr. Strickland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Strickland. He is a graduate of Boys' High school, a student of the Georgia Tech Evening School of Commerce, and is connected in business with the Retail Credit Company. After a short wedding trip the young couple will reside at 1004 Woodland avenue.

Clyatt-Watkins Rites Solemnized At Church Ceremony in Valdosta

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 11.—The marriage of Miss Mary Frances Clyatt to Benjamin Watkins, of Macon and Atlanta, was solemnized at the First Presbyterian church at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Dr. L. R. Scott read the marriage service.

The church was beautifully decorated in calla lilies, southern smilax, bridal wreath, ferns and palms.

While the guests were assembling, Mrs. Lloyd Greer played appropriate organ selections. Immediately preceding the entrance of the wedding party Mrs. W. M. Oliver sang "Beloved, It Is Morn," by Aylward. During the ceremony Mrs. Greer played "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," and immediately following the ceremony Mrs. Oliver sang "The Life Road."

The ushers were Edmond Roberts and S. M. Gornto Jr. Mrs. Gene Moore, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore light navy rough crepe with trimmings at the neck and sleeves of white sharkskin taffeta. Her hat was of light navy Bangkok straw, with accessories to match. She carried a shower bouquet of pink Briarcliff roses and delphinium.

Bride Enters.

The bride entered with her brother, D. T. Clyatt, by whom she was given in marriage. She wore a becoming traveling costume of mauve charpa crepe with belt and short puffed sleeves of blue matelasse. With this she wore a hip-length cape of blue matelasse and a modish hat of mauve with trimmings of blue. Her shoes and accessories were of a matching color. The bride's shower bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

The bridegroom entered with his best man, Norman Thomas, of Macon.

Mrs. Katheryn Clyatt Johnson, mother of the bride, wore a becoming gown of butterscotch beige crepe with matching accessories, and a shoulder bouquet of yellow roses and blue delphinium.

Mrs. Ben Watkins, of Atlanta, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in sapphire blue sheer and hat of gray straw. She wore a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and snapdragons.

The bride and bridegroom left for a honeymoon in Florida, after which they will be at home at 356 Pierce avenue, Macon.

Prominent Families.

The bride is the second daughter of Mrs. Katheryn Clyatt Johnson and the late David Twiggs Clyatt, a prominent Brooks county farmer. She received her education in the Valdosta schools and studied dancing in New York, later appearing on the stage there. She is a beautiful young woman of the Titian type. She is the granddaughter of J. E. Gornto, of this city.

Mr. Watkins is the son of Mrs. B. D. Watkins, of Atlanta, and the late Benjamin Daniel Watkins, formerly of Monroe and later of Atlanta. His mother before her marriage was Miss Susie Hunt, of Columbus, a member of one of Georgia's oldest families.

Mr. Watkins graduated in June from the University of Georgia, where he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. He was also a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, and the Senior Round Table. Since graduation he has been connected with the Macon Gas Company.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. B. D. Watkins, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Thomas, of Macon; Hal Askins, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Breck Conoley, of Thomasville, and Jimmy Seashole, of Miami.

Miss Patterson Weds Mr. Sams At Church Ceremony in Lithonia

LITHONIA, Ga., March 11.—The marriage of Miss Mary George Patterson and Marion Oswald Sams took place this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the First Methodist church at Lithonia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. B. Sams, pastor of the church and father of the bridegroom. Tall white wicker baskets filled with gladioli featured the church decoration and were placed before a background of ferns and palms with candelabra holding lighted tapers forming an effective archway. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. H. A. Park played "Cadman's Love Song" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni. Mrs. L. R. Sams, of Gainesville, Ga., aunt of the bride, sang "Oh, Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." During the ceremony "To a Wild Rose" was played while the Lohengrin Wedding March and Mendelssohn Recessional were used.

Mrs. Ethel Fee, sister of the bride and matron of honor, was gowned in shell pink crepe worn with a crepe hat in matching tone and brocaded satin slippers. Her shoulder spray was of pink roses and valley lilies. Robert S. Sams, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as best man, and the ushers were W. D. Patterson, brother of the bride, and M. B. Sams Jr., brother of the bridegroom.

The bride was an attractive figure wearing a Chanel model of dawn blue crepe fashioned with puffed sleeves of net trimmed with appliqued flowers. She wore a close-fitting turban of the same shade made with a short veil and brocaded satin slippers of the same shade. Her bouquet was of valley lilies. For traveling Mrs. Sams donned a tailored suit of beige woolen combined with a darker shade, and featuring the new Schiaparelli clips. Her hat and accessories were in beige. After a short wedding trip Mr. Sams and his bride will reside at 1111 Virginia avenue, Atlanta.

Camp Fire Girls To Celebrate Birthday.

Camp Fire Girls will celebrate the twenty-first birthday this week by observing one point of the Camp Fire law each day. Sunday will be "seek beauty" day, with groups attending church in a body and seeking beauty of the soul. Monday will be "give service" day and each group has planned some definite service to render on that day. Tuesday the girls will "pursue knowledge" by attending the "personality apparal" parade to be given at Davison-Paxon Company in the tea room at 3 o'clock. This is one of a series of parties given to raise funds for the club charity work of furnishing food to needy families in Atlanta. Bread and fresh vegetables are distributed three times a week. Reservations for dinner and bridge will be 50c, and may be made by telephoning the club at Hemlock 4636.

Atlanta Woman's Club meets Monday afternoon, March 13, at 3 o'clock in the auditorium of the clubhouse. Mrs. William P. Dunn, president, will preside and a suggestion box will be placed in the foyer and members are urged to put into the box suggestions they may have for next year's officers. Mrs. C. E. Faust is nominating committee chairman, and will report at the April meeting. Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, chairman of music for the club, will present Stanley T. Perry, tenor soloist, in a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Marie Corwine Perry. Mrs. Ed Danforth, artist pupil of Earl Chester Smith, will play two piano selections.

In conformity with the plans of the national chairman of women in industry the second week in March has been designated by the board of the general federation of Women's Clubs as industrial forum week. Mrs. N. O. Newman, chairman of problems in industry for the club, and Miss Eula Land, chairman of problems in industry for the fifth district, will present a program. Steve Nance, president of the Atlanta Federation of Labor, will speak on "Increasing Job Opportunities;" Colonel Edgar Watkins Sr. will speak on the "Moratorium and What It Means to Us," and Miss Rhoda Kauffman, child welfare worker, will speak on "Relief Work in Atlanta." Heads of Atlanta clubs to be special guests seated in the boxes are Mesdames John F. MacDougald, president of the Fifth District; H. G. Hastings, E. V. Carter, K. S. Culpepper, William Schley Howard, A. I. Branham, J. C. Tucker, W. P. Humphrey, R. Murdoch Walker, William P. Dunn, J. F. Bockius, W. L. Ballenger, J. H. Phagan, J. H. Archer, J. T. Lively, Chester Martin, C. J. Evans, Comer Woodward, Emmett Quinn, James E. Fuller and Nellie Nix Edwards.

Membership committee of the club will sponsor a benefit bridge party Friday afternoon, March 17, with Mrs. C. E. Faust as chairman. Refreshments will be served and there will be attractive prizes. Tables will be $1 each and reservations may be made by telephoning the club at Hemlock 4636 or Mrs. Faust at Cherokee 2479.

International relations committee meets in the palm room of the club Wednesday afternoon, March 15, at 3 o'clock and Mrs. W. F. Trenary, the chairman, will preside. Discussion featuring "Russia" will be led by Mrs. J. P. McGovern. A paper on Russian music, written by Mrs. Hal Davison, will be read by Mrs. A. J. O'Leary; Ben Blinov, a native Russian, student at Emory University, will sing Russian songs, and Mrs. George Brower will read a paper on Russia.

Dowdy—George.

Mrs. G. H. Preston, of Atlanta, announces the marriage of her neice, Miss Ruth Nora Dowdy, to Welton L. George, on March 2. The wedding was solemnized at the home of Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church.

Miss Wyche, Mr. Atkinson Wed in Study

The study of Glenn Memorial church provided the attractive setting for the marriage of Miss Rowena Wyche and William Joseph Atkinson Jr., which was solemnized Saturday at an impressive high noon ceremony. The rites were performed in the presence of relatives and close friends by Dr. R. L. Russell, presiding elder of the Atlanta district, and the wedding centered the interest of society. Stately calla lilies and white chrystanthemums, placed in pedestal baskets, adorned the improvised altar, which was composed of palms and ferns in graceful arrangement.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Lovick Pierce Wyche, with whom she entered the study. The bride's brunet beauty was enhanced by a handsome ensemble of gray wool, the cape of the coat being edged with platinum fox fur. Her blouse was of white tucked chiffon, and her hat was a becoming turban of gray silk, trimmed on top with two small white gardenias. The accessories were in harmonizing gray tones, and a shoulder spray of orchids and valley lilies completed her modish costume.

Mrs. L. P. Wyche, mother of the bride, wore black and white chiffon, posed over white silk, her hat being fashioned from black crepe, and she wore a shoulder bouquet of yellow roses. Mrs. William Joseph Atkinson, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in black crepe, trimmed with ecru lace. Her hat was of black straw and her shoulder bouquet was of yellow roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson left on a motor trip through Florida and will enjoy a sojourn in Cuba before returning to Atlanta. They will reside at 1103 Clifton road after March 25.

Mrs. Thomas Yawkey Is Admired Visitor.

An ever interesting and admired visitor in the city last week was Mrs. Thomas A. Yawkey, of New York, who spent a short while at the Biltmore and greeted her Atlanta friends, en route to Florida, where she will join Mr. Yawkey. Mrs. Yawkey spent the past three weeks at her former home in Birmingham, Ala., called there by the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. A. S. Aiken.

Mr. Yawkey is the popular young New York sportsman who recently purchased the Red Sox, of Boston, one of the best-known baseball teams in the country. Mrs. Yawkey, who shares her husband's love of sports and is his constant companion, is most enthuiastic over the team's purchase, for baseball is one of her favorite sports. She left Atlanta to join Mr. Yawkey at Sarasota, where the team is in training.

Mr. and Mrs. Yawkey spent the greater part of the winter season at their hunting preserve, a small island off the coast of South Carolina, where they maintain an attractive lodge. There they shoot deer, quail and duck in profusion, and entertain groups of congenial friends at delightful house parties. Early last fall the Yawkeys journeyed west to Montana, where they spent several weeks on a hunting trip in the Rockies. When in residence in New York they occupy a charming penthouse apartment on upper Fifth avenue, overlooking Central Park. On the bridal paths of the park Mrs. Yawkey may be seen daily, when in the city, astride one of her favorite mounts, for she is one of Gotham's smartest young horsewomen and is an expert rider.

Mrs. Yawkey was before her marriage several years ago at the fashionable Colony Club in New York, Miss Elise Sparrow, of Birmingham, a general favorite in southern society. Of the decided blonde type, she is known for her unusual beauty, her cleverness and charm, and for the smartness with which she chooses and wears her costumes. Equally as popular in the south as in the east, she possesses a wide circle of friends in Atlanta who are ever interested in her goings and comings.

Mrs. Chandler Visits Atlanta Friends.

Numbered among the important visitors in Atlanta this month is Mrs. Walter Chandler, of New York and Miami, Fla., who has been visiting her friend of long standing, Mrs. Henry J. Heinz, at Dogwood Terrace, her Ponce de Leon avenue residence. Accompanied by Miss Eugenia Candler; her sister, Mrs. R. A. Edmondson Jr., the former Miss Mary Candler, and their father, Walter Candler, this visitor will motor to Nashville, Tenn., where she will spend the week-end as the guest of her son, Kirby Chandler. On her return to the city Mrs. Chandler will spend several days with Miss Candler at Lullwater Farms, her home in Druid Hills.

Miss Candler recently accompanied her aunt, Mrs. Heinz, to Miami, when she was entertained at the lovely winter home of Mrs. Chandler there. This attractive visitor, who has a flare for choosing smart costumes, is a devotee of riding, tennis and bridge. She has a beautiful estate on Long Island, where she spends a part of each year, in addition to annual European trips. Due to the experience of extensive travel, Mrs. Chandler's parties assemble many prominent Americans and Europeans, to whom she graciously plays the role of hostess.

New York Visitors Furnish Inspiration for Parties

Important March visitors forming the inspiration for a series of social events during the week-end were Mrs. Kenneth Murchison and her daughter, Miss Aurelia Murchison, who are en route to New York from Miami Beach, Fla., where they visited Mrs. Hays Browning, Mrs. Murchison's daughter. Mrs. Murchison is visiting her niece, Mrs. Henry Newman, at her Cherokee road residence, and Miss Murchison is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Frank S. Ellis, and her cousin, Mrs. Frances Ellis McKenzie at their Montclair drive residence in Brookwood Hills.

New York Society Members.

Mrs. Murchison and Miss Murchison are prominently identified with New York society, and move in the most exclusive circles. Miss Murchison was presented to society in the metropolis with the debutante coterie of two seasons ago, and made her formal bow at a party given at Pierre's. She is a popular member of the New York Junior League, and belongs to the Colony Club. Her father, Kenneth Murchison, is one of the leading architects in the United States, and has served at the head of the Beaux Arts ball committee for a number of years.

Honored at Parties.

Mrs. Frank Ellis entertains today at luncheon at her home on Montclair drive in honor of these interesting New York visitors who were central figures at the luncheon given Saturday by Gus Tolson at his Pace's Ferry road residence. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Newman and Mrs. McKenzie assisted by Mrs. Ellis, were hosts at a buffet supper Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Newman as a complimentary gesture to Mrs. Murchison and Miss Murchison. Mrs. McKenzie entertained at dinner Friday evening, honoring the visitors, who will be feted at a series of informal affairs before their departure for New York during this week.

Miss King to Spend Holidays in Bermuda.

When Miss Judy King leaves Finch school, New York city, where she is a student, for her spring vacation, instead of returning to Atlanta for her holidays, this fortunate schoolgirl will board the S. S. Monarch of Bermuda Saturday, March 18, for a cruise to the island of Bermuda. Aboard the palatial new steamer, this titian-haired Atlanta belle, accompanied by a group of her schoolmates, will enjoy deck tennis, swims in the pool and the novel ship entertainments.

In Bermuda bicycling trips will carry the Atlantan to view the picturesque scenery, and she will enjoy golf, swimming and other sports. Miss King will return to New York on the Queen of Bermuda, new sister ship of the Monarch. Although she will not be in Atlanta before the close of school, Miss King will spend at least a part of the summer with her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Terry Smith, at their Peachtree road apartment.

Atlantan Composes Popular Song.

That popular song, "Now We're on Our Second Honeymoon," coming over the radio, has set everyone humming it, dancing to it, and singing it, but few people know that it was written by Kay O'Donnell, a former Atlantan. The composer of the song will be remembered by a host of Atlanta friends as the former Miss Katherine Johnson. She married William J. O'Donnell 14 years ago and they moved to Detroit 12 years ago. They have three handsome children.

Although as a young girl Katharine Johnson spent her time composing popular tunes and songs for the delight of her youthful friends, and although she has always had a secret yearning to become a successful song writer, the aforementioned hit is her first published song.

Mrs. O'Donnell has a new song coming out soon, entitled "The Music of the Georgia Pines." She says that she likes Detroit, but when this song is published Georgians will glean where the dearest place in the world is to her.

Loyalty Club To Adopt Child.

Loyalty Club of Maple Grove 86 held an all-day meeting Wednesday with Mesdames Mac Lanier and Claude Allen, 1108 Uncle Remus avenue. The club voted to adopt a little girl in the home in Sherman, to care for and clothe. The quilt for Sovereign J. C. Quinn was finished and turned over to be sent to him at the home for aged members in Sherman. This quilt bears the name of each member of circle worked in the colors of the grove.

Plans were made to sponsor a skit to be held at open meeting the last Thursday of this month for the benefit of the Dora Alexander Talley Guards. Admission is 10 cents. The next meeting will be with Mrs. S. E. Stephenson in Eagan, Ga., Wednesday, March 15.

Miss Keys and Mr. Coffin Wed in Winship Chapel

Miss Martha Keys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keys, became the bride of Arthur Coffin Jr., of Kingsport, Tenn., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coffin, at a beautiful ceremony solemnized yesterday at high noon in the Winship Memorial chaptel at the First Presbyterian church on Peachtree road. Rev. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of an assemblage of relatives, intimate friends, and guests from a distance.

Palms and ferns and white tapers adorned the chapel and the altar was flanked by pedestal baskets holding graceful arrangements of calla lilies. Seven-branched candelabra held slender white tapers and the pews reserved for the families were marked with white calla lilies caught with white ribbons.

Musical Program.

Prior to the ceremony a program of nuptial music was rendered by Dr. Charles A. Sheldon Jr., who played Schubert's "Serenade" during the taking of the marriage vows and rendered "Liebestraum" and "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," prior to the entrance of the wedding party. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was rendered as the processional and the wedding march by Mendelssohn was played for the recessional.

Miss Avery Coffin, sister of the bridegroom, acted as the maid of honor and wore a becoming gown in two shades of green. The ankle-length skirt was of Chartreuse crepe and the bodice was made of a lighter shade of the green and featured a soft rolled collar. She wore a wide-brimmed brown straw hat, lifted on the right side and ornamented with Chartreuse-shaded flowers. Her slippers were of brown suede and she wore eggshell kid gloves, and a shoulder spray of Talisman roses and valley lilies completed her costume. W. B. Thompson, lifelong friend of the bride's family, acted as usher, and the bridegroom had his father, Arthur Coffin, as best man.

Lovely Bride Enters.

The bride entered with her father, Harry M. Keys, by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man. She was a lovely figure in her smart coat suit of Forstmann's crissa in pale gray tones. The hip-length jacket boasted a cape collar banded in platinum fox and the neckline was completed with ties caught in an Ascot bow. Her blouse was of gray crepe and she wore a gray felt hat, lifted in the back and banked with gardenias. Her slippers were gray suede and she wore an exquisite shoulder spray formed of purple orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Keys, mother of the bride, was gowned in black chiffon, graced with a vest of ecru lace. She wore a black straw hat faced in white crepe and her flowers were gardenias. Mrs. Coffin, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in midnight blue flat crepe with a becoming blue felt hat, and she wore a spray of violets and valley lilies. Miss Jane Coffin, sister of the bridegroom, wore Majolica blue crepe, with a small straw hat in a matching tone.

Mr. and Mrs. Coffin left by motor for a wedding trip in the North Carolina mountains and upon their return they will make their home in Kingsport, Tenn., where they will take possession of their attractive new home.

Miss Evans Visits Mrs. Wynn Here.

When Mrs. James Osgood Wynn returned from an enchanting western trip last week, she was accompanied by her lovely niece, Miss Betty Evans, of Cantanea, Mexico, who will visit her several weeks at the Georgian Terrace. Miss Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Evans, of Mexico, has a host of friends in Atlanta made during her schoolgirl days at Washington Seminary. Mrs. Wynn journeyed westward to visit her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. T. Evans, and to attend the wedding of their son, William Augustus Evans, and Miss Margaret O'Malley, which was solemnized at a brilliant ceremony in Phoenix, Ariz. Miss Evans and Mrs. Wynn departed after the ceremony for the Evans estate in Mexico, and later on they started for Atlanta by motor, with Miss Evans in the role of chauffeur. En route they visited Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Golden, the former Miss Georgia Rice, in Dallas, Texas.

Miss Evans attended school in Palo Alto, and is enrolled at the University of California. She is a most attractive young person, with light brown tresses and hazel eyes. Tall and slender with decided chic, Miss Evans will be in great demand socially during the coming weeks. She is enthusiastic over sports, and rides, swims, plays golf and tennis. Interesting plans are being made by this feted guest for the summer, for she will visit her cousin, Miss Jane Evans, at the home of her parents on Bolboa Heights in Panama, and will be included in the gay social life of the zone.

D.A.R. Conclave This Week Brings Mrs. Magna Here

Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be guest of honor at the opening session of the 35th state conference of Georgia D. A. R. on Wednesday, March 15. Mrs. Magna will be accompanied here by Mrs. W. E. Becker, of New Jersey, national chairman of national defense. Mrs. Magna will be honor guest at the dinner given Wednesday evening at the Henry Grady hotel, over which Mrs. James D. Cromer, regent of Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., the hostess organization, will preside. Other distinguished guests include Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent; Mrs. W. F. Dykes, vice state regent; Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney, vice president general, the national officers; Mrs. W. E. Becker, former organizing secretary general; Mrs. Sidney P. Cooper, state regent of North Carolina, the former Miss Mary Lou Jackson, of Atlanta; Mrs. Howard H. McCall, former vice president general; Mrs. Julius Talmadge, former vice president general; Mesdames Bun Wylie, Max E. Land, Herbert M. Franklin, former state regents, state officers, presidents and regents of state organizations; Mrs. Eugene Talmadge, first lady of Georgia; Mrs. L. G. Hardman, former first lady of the state, and Mayor James L. Key.

Principal Features.

Principal features of Wednesday evening's program will be the address of the president general, Mrs. Magna, and that of the state regent, Mrs. McCurry. Mrs. Magna, a magnetic speaker, will give an interesting insight into the affairs of the national society, and speak of the continental congress which will be held in Washington, D. C., the week of the 19th of April. Mrs. Magna will be honor guest at the breakfast to be given Thursday at the Henry Grady hotel by members of the State Officers' Club and will leave by plane at 9 o'clock to be guest of the Florida state conference to be held at St. Petersburg. D. A. R. members are urged to attend the open sessions of the conference, as are visiting D. A. R. members.

Business sessions will be held Thursday and Friday, and will be presided over by the state regent, Mrs. Julian McCurry and Mesdames William F. Dykes and W. E. Mann, the vice regents. Mrs. J. D. Cromer, hostess regent, will preside over the opening session and will welcome the delegates. Mrs. Thomas Coke Mell, state corresponding secretary, is the able chairman of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Lucius McConnell as co-chairman. Local committees have been appointed by the hostess regent and every detail has been arranged. Mrs. Bun Wylie, as chairman, has outlined a program which is complete in every detail.

The credentials committee, with Mrs. Eli Thomas, chairman, will be at the Henry Grady hotel at 2 o'clock on Wednesday to register the delegates. Atlanta chapter members desiring to secure tickets to the dinner to be given Wednesday by Atlanta chapter, are requested to apply to Miss Byrd Blankenship or Mrs. Thomas C. Mell.

Mrs. Swanson Holds Especial Place Here.

Beautiful Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the secretary of the navy, has an especial place in the hearts of Atlantans, for she was the former Miss Loulie Lyons, of this city. With her mother and her sisters, Miss Lizzie Lyons and Miss Pinkie Lyons, she made her home here with her uncle, Douglas Dean, in an attractive house located on Peachtree and Baker streets. The hospitable home was the favorite rendezvous for member of the society set, and the golden-haired Misses Lyons were social favorites and the toasts of the town.

Their departure to Virginia to make their home occasioned sincere regret, and their visits to their girlhood home as guests of the late Mrs. Henrietta Egleston were acclaimed with delight, and many an Atlanta swain paid tribute to this trio of lovely sisters. Former romances entered the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Swanson, as the first wife of the secretary of the navy was Miss Lizzie Lyons, sister of the present Mrs. Swanson, who became Mrs. Cunningham Hall in her first marital venture.

Official life is no new experience for this petite southern matron, for she reigned as first lady of Virginia during her distinguished husband's term of office as governor of the Old Dominion. She has resided for years in Washington while Mr. Swanson represented his state, first as representative and later as senator. Many years have rolled around since fascinating Miss Loulie Lyons graced Atlanta social functions with her presence. But, old-time friends proclaim that her loveliness of face and character have won for her an enviable place in official Washington.

Georgia Garden Clubs Meet On April 7-8

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 11.—Fifth annual meeting of the Garden Club of Georgia will be held in Columbus Friday, April 7, and Saturday, April 8. The following garden clubs—Charter Circle, Wynnton, Beautification, Perennial, House and Garden and Marguerite—will combine to act as hostesses to the convention. Mrs. George Burrus Jr., of the Charter Circle Club, is general chairman of arrangements, and these two facts insure the success of the fifth annual meeting.

There are 98 garden clubs composing the Garden Club of Georgia, and it is hoped that every organization will be represented in Columbus. These annual meetings have always proved a delight and an inspiration to those attending the Columbus convention.

Distinguished guests of national importance will add interest to the meeting by their presence, as Mrs. Frederic Kellogg, of Morristown, N. J., president oft he National Council of State Garden Club Federation, and Mrs. Fred Joel Swift, of Nyack-on-Hudson, N. Y., the nominee for the presidency in 1933, will add luster to the convention.

Mrs. Thomas Berry, of Rome, is president of the state organization, and Mrs. F. S. Cooper, of Rome, is state chairman of publicity.

The social program planned by the Columbus clubs includes a luncheon Friday, April 8, at the country club with a tour of the many beautiful garden clubs of Columbus. Mrs. John Martin Jr. is luncheon chairman, and Mrs. Calvin Des Bates is garden tour chairman. Guests will be honored that day at a tea at "Green Island Ranch" the home of Mrs. R. Curtis Jordan in Green Island Hills. Mrs. Frank Lumpkin is chairman of this committee.

Friday evening there will be a banquet at the Georgia Power Company Service Club, followed by a program. Mrs. John Illges is banquet chairman. On Saturday, April 8, the Infantry School Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Ephriam G. Peyton is president, will entertain at luncheon at the Officers' Club at Fort Benning.

Paternal Grandmother Gives Christening Robe

When Callie Jackson Healey, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Healey, is christened, she will wear the exquisite christening robe of sheerest white French batiste, which was purchased in New York city for her by her paternal grandmother, Mrs. William T. Healey. Fashioned with long full skirt, reflecting an old-fashioned influence, the dainty dress has brief puffed sleeves edged with real lace, which outlines the neckline and edges of the skirt, while intricate French hand embroidery features the front panel. A matching white slip, and an adorable little coat and cap of delicate pink, complete the christening ensemble.

Perhaps the first of the baby's gifts after she made her debut to this world at Piedmont hospital, was the pair of tiny flesh-tinted baby pins presented by her young cousins, Billy and Callie Huger, with a card inscribed, "To our very first cousin, from Billy and Callie." Among the most useful of small Callie Healey's presents is a handsome baby carriage, the gift of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Healey.

When little Callie is installed in her new nursery at her parents' Valley road residence, hung on the wall will be the unique gift of her maternal great-aunt, Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore. This is an old-fashioned sampler, executed by the clever fingers of Mrs. Moore, and appropriately framed. In large letters done in cross stitch at the top is the name and birth date of Mrs. Aquilla J. Orme, the baby's grandmother in whose honor tiny Callie was named. Next follow the names and birth dates of the baby's parents, William Thomas Healey and the former Callie Jackson Orme. Then comes in startling letters, "Look Who's Here!" followed by a cunning baby picture, and the name Callie Jackson Healey, with the date of her birth and the embroidered face of a clock with hands pointing to 4 o'clock, the time of the baby's birth. Between each line of lettering is an ornamental line of embroidery, completing this unusual keepsake.

Prized even more for sentiment than for intrinsic value, is the diamond bracelet given to Mrs. Healey, the baby's mother. When Mrs. Healey, the former Miss Callie Orme, was born, her father, the late Aquilla J. Orme, clasped a beautiful bracelet around the wrist of her mother, who is the senior Callie. Mrs. Orme has given this lovely piece of jewelry to the mother of the Callie of the third generation, whose place as one of Atlanta's luckiest infants, is proven by her shower of gifts from countless friends.

Miss Alice Center Weds Mr. Driskell.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hagood Center announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Alice Clark Center, to Melville Morgan Driskell, of Sparta and Atlanta, which took place recently.

The attractive bride attended Sullins College, in Bristol, Va., and completed her education last year at this well-known institution of learning. Mrs. Driskell is a lovely blonde, and is admired by a large circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Driskell are residing with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Center, at 1152 Ridgewood drive in Druid Hills. Mr. Driskell is attending Emory Medical College.

Peachtree Garden Club Sets March 15 As 'Shrub Day'

Peachtree Garden Club members have designated Wednesday, March 15, as "Shrub Day" at the Home for the Incurables, and members are requested to contribute some variety of shrub and carry it to the home on the aforementioned date. Friends of the institution, interested in beautifying the grounds and desiring to contribute to the shrub-planting project are requested to contribute evergreen, bamboo, privet hedge, flowering shrub, ground ivy, honeysuckle and vinca.

The planting on the grounds of the Home for Incurables is attracting attention, the generous donation of plants having been made by Mrs. Joseph D. Rhodes, in accordance with the wishes of her husband, the late J. D. Rhodes, whose bequest enabled the building of the new Home for Incurables. The Home for Incurables committee from the Peachtree Garden Club will be on duty Wednesday to receive and superintend the planting of the shrubs donated for this purpose, the committee including Mesdames S. M. Inman, Jesse Draper and W. P. Hill.

Mrs. Robert L. Cooney is president of Peachtree Garden Club and the corps of officers include Mrs. S. M. Inman, first vice president; Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, second vice president; Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, recording secretary; Mrs. W. H. Kiser, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. E. F. Johnson, treasurer.

A paper on "Citizenship," addressed to the clubwomen of America by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, was read by Mrs. A. B. Conger.

Miss E. V. Bower announced that her department had carried out the instructions of the club in regard to indorsing the "lame duck" amendment. Mrs. S. F. Lewis read an article on the "Peace Movement," and the club voted to send cards to President Roosevelt indorsing the action of the United States senate in regard to peace. Miss Jeannette Rankin will give a talk March 16 in the school auditorium. Bainbridge organizations will be invited to attend and one delegate from each organization will be invited to attend the meeting. The following are the new officers for 1933-34: President, Mrs. W. O. Gaines; vice president, Mrs. H. G. Cliett; treasurer, Miss Olive Morgan; recording secretary, Mrs. W. D. Davis; assistant secretary, Miss Mildred Hicks; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Catherine Wimberly; press reporter, Miss E. V. Bower; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. M. Simmons; assistant parliamentarian, Miss Mildred Hicks, and messengers, Mesdames Mason Flowers, Raleigh Rollins and Al Sims.

Library extension department, of which Mrs. George Sabados is chairman, presented an interesting program at the February literary and social meeting of Albany club. A Georgian products luncheon was served by the executive board members, with Mrs. J. M. Patterson as chairman, followed by a business meeting presided over by the president, Mrs. J. C. Britton. The following program was presented by Mrs. Sabados: Songs, "Georgia Land" and "A Valentine Song," by a chorus of 30 children from the third grade of Monroe school under the direction of Mrs. H. H. Perry; a reading, "A Private Library All Your Own," by Mrs. Menko, and piano solo by Miss Mariwil Brown. A talk, "Interesting Facts About Georgia and Georgians," was given by Mrs. Rowsey, paying tribute to early settlers in the state, telling of the great men and women the state has produced, recounting many of Georgia's natural resources and referring to Georgia's scenic beauty.

Department of Education Holds Important Place in U. D. C. Work

of Sycamore, State Editor of Georgia Division, U. D. C.

No one can doubt the reality of an awakened appreciation for educational projection in the Georgia division, U. D. C., in the past few years. Neither can one measure the success of the department of education, which has been spread, maintained and strengthened through the efforts of Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, state chairman and her zealous co-workers, who have been tirelessly directing their activities in creating a confidence in youthful minds of U. D. C. lineage, that only the clasp of a helping hand is needful to assure a college future.

Mrs. Anderson, assisted by Mrs. R. M. Mobley, chairman of Helen Plane educational fund, and Mrs. R. L. Smith, chairman of World War educational fund, feels that this work is a major responsibility strictly attuned to perfect co-operation with the department of education of the general U. D. C., so Mrs. Anderson takes pleasure in analyzing the program presented by the general organization, by which Georgia students may secure loans, that is so appealing in its simplicity, yet so generous, that she is assured that many Georgia students will be stimulated to take advantage of the offers made by these schools for their benefit. Many colleges are offering free scholarships, as set forth in Mrs. Anderson's letter—and she invites boys or girls desiring further information to communicate with her, and advises boys desiring to borrow from the World War fund to write Mrs. R. L. Smith, 117 Clisby place, Macon, Ga. Girls desiring to borrow funds, write Mrs. R. M. Mobley, of Covington, chairman of Helen Plane loan fund. Only a partial list of the colleges presenting gift scholarships and loans is here listed. Mrs. Anderson writes:

"Communications pertaining to education is to be made through Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, state chairman of education, for the Georgia division, U. D. C., Madison, Ga. Only lineal descendants of Confederate veterans, who have the indorsement of some U. D. C. chapter, need make application. Folders and blanks will be promptly sent on application. Requests for loans have already exceeded those of all previous years. All applicants for loans need the indorsement of U. D. C. chapter and notes to bear names of responsible citizens, who will be directly responsible for re-payments when due. Two of our banner general U. D. C. scholarships are available this fall. The Mary B. Poppenheim scholarship at Vassar College, New York, valued at $1,200; the Matthew Fontain Maury scholarship, St. Johns College, Maryland,

"Tuition and part tuition scholarships are not intended to cover all expenses for attending college. Those available for September, 1933, are Georgia State Woman's College, Valdosta, Ga., value $200; Bethel Woman's College, Hopkinsville, Ky., value $300; College of Charleston, S. C., value $50; Erskine College, Due West, S. C., value $60; Passifern school, Hendersonville, N. C., value $100. There are some preparatory for college offers and many decidedly fine opportunities offered students, both boys and girls, to attend colleges which embrace every department of training. The Gulf Port Military Academy, Gulf Port, Miss., value $100, is among the schools for boys which should prove appealing for a Georgia boy."

Chapter program chairmen have an easy passage through March, with bicentennial suggested programs and prearranged pageants. That really their greatest problem will not be in much striving, but is disentangling themselves from so many helps directed to the task of making charming, the meetings of the chapters, so that they may be able to choose the right number of appropriate selections. Mrs. Lewis Lovett's offering is decidedly timely and appealing as well as the calendar sent to every chapter by Mrs. Bashinski to give aid to working stability. Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, state director of C. of C., has written a most attractive playlet called "Georgia's Children," in celebration of this bicentennial year, this may be used at chapter meetings—she will be glad to send it on request, if self addressed, stamped, large envelope is enclosed. Mrs. Lovett's historical program follows:

March—Slavery in Georgia; Union and state's rights; Parties; The Colquitts.

"He takes the banjo from the wall, and tunes the strings with skill and care. Then strikes them with a master's air, and tells, in melody and rhyme, this legend of the olden time."

J. E. B. Stewart chapter, of Commerce, held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. Claud Montgomery and was presided over by Mrs. A. B. Deadwyler, president. The finance committee reported $1,535.51 on time deposit and the chapter voted to renew the deposit. The following program on Georgia, prepared by Mrs. L. G. Hardman, was presented: Each member responded to roll call by giving a fact of Georgia history; song, "Georgia, the Empire State," was sung by Mesdames W. N. Harden, A. B. Deadwyler and Charles O'Rear, with violin accompaniment by Mrs. O. E. Shankle. Reading, "Song of the Chattahoochee," by Miss Beverly Syfan; "Georgia's War-time Heroines," Mrs. J. O. Montgomery; song, "Georgia," written by Garland Shirley, a Commerce boy, and dedicated to Dr. L. G. Hardman, was sung. Mrs. Deadwyler discussed most interestingly Georgia's 20th anniversary. Miss Helen Morris gave a selection from Joel Chandler Harris, "How Mr. Rooster Lost His Dinner." The chapter stood and repeated Georgia's motto, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation." The hostess was assisted by Mesdames J. T. Quillian and K. N. Sharp at the social hour.

James D. Franklin chapter, U. D. C., of Tennille, held a meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. A. S. Brown, with Mrs. L. O. Daley and Mrs. E. L. Sheppard as hostesses, and with Miss Clara Davis presiding. Mrs. F. T. Brock consented to reconsider her resignation as secretary and served in that capacity. The new president entered into her duties with zeal, and her first month's report of projects started gave evidence of greater activities for the chapter this year and an enlargement of the scope of the work. Insufficient funds has caused the postponement of marking the graves of Confederate soldiers yet unmarked, and Miss Davis and her committee raised enough to place three. A program will be arranged for the unveiling, which will be held at an early date. A letter was read from Mrs. Travis in regard to a marker for the Jefferson Davis highway in this section and the chapter will consider placing one if the committee will designate Tennille as the location.

Mrs. Daley, chairman of Georgia day, stated that the pastors of churches had given a part of their service hour to a program in observance of the day. Mrs. Jordan, chairman of essays, reported the distribution of literature and the rules for the contest to the school children, and the co-operation of the faculty is assured. Mrs. H. M. Franklin is chairman of the committee to arrange for Memorial Day. The program featured an interesting paper on Sidney Lanier by Mrs. E. L. Sheppard; a piano solo, "Berceuse," from Josylin, Miss Winifred Scott; "Facts About Washington," Miss Mollie Scoot, and the singing of the official U. D. C. song, written by Mrs. H. M. Franklin.

Mrs. Jane Walker Fraser was hostess to the Wilkerson County chapter, U. D. C., of Gordon, for the February meeting, and decided to have an "apron party" to raise funds for the general treasury. Georgia was featured on the program.

Carrollton chapter, U. D. C., was entertained at its February meeting by Mesdames J. T. Vaughn and C. K. Henderson at the home of Mrs. Henderson in celebration of the Georgia bicentennial. The president, Mrs. W. J. Millican, conducted the business meeting. Mrs. J. T. Vaughn was in charge of the program, which was rendered as follows: Mrs. R. H. Fletcher read a paper on the "Founding of Georgia," giving details of successive colonizations; "Georgia Land" was sung by the chapter; Miss Mary Alexander made a talk on the character of the early colonists, religion, settlements, extension, etc. Mrs. Vaughn, after a summary of Georgia history, conducted a round-table discussion on Georgia, and many noteworthy facts were brought out.

Dixie chapter, U. D. C., of Eatonton, held the annual Memorial program and tree planting for women of the Confederacy on Wednesday, and four cederous deodaras were planted on the courthouse square in honor of Mesdames Addie Fuller, J. M. Bryant, A. B. McLeroy and Emma Reid, who have in the past year joined their soldier husbands who wore the gray. The program at the tree planting consisted of invocation by Rev. James Thomas; anthem, "God Save the South"; "Tribute to the Women of the Old South," by Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, third vice president, Georgia division. Planting of the trees by Mrs. H. C. Walker, Mrs. J. A. Champion, Mrs. J. R. Batchelor, Mrs. S. T. Wingfield; poem, "Granddad's Day," Juliette Callaway, and a song by Colonel R. B. Nisbet, "Children of the Confederacy"; benediction.

At a business meeting enthusiastic letters of indorsement of Mrs. Frank A. Dennis for the office of first vice president, Georgia division, were read from the following chapters: Rebecca Felton chapter, Atlanta; Alexander H. Stephens, Crawfordville; Kennesaw chapter, Marietta; Oglethorpe chapter, Oglethorpe; R. F. Crittenden chapter, Shellman; Sparta chapter, Sparta; Ida Evans Eve chapter, Thomson; Francis S. Bartow chapter, Waycross, and other Georgia friends.

Oglethorpe County Federation Met In Crawford

Oglethorpe County Federation of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, organized in 1932, held the second meeting on March 4 in the Methodist church at Crawford. The president, Mrs. Mell Blanchard, of Crawford, presided at the session and the club collect was read by Miss Dorothy Whitehead. Mrs. W. W. Armistead welcomed members in behalf of the Crawford Woman's Club, to which Mrs. R. P. Wright, of Union, responded.

State President Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, was welcomed as a distinguished visitor and in her response said since she was the proud member of the county federation she did not want to be called visitor. Mrs. Gholston gave an interesting account of the recent executive board meeting in Washington of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Armistead, president of the tenth district, was also "at home," not only in the county but in the Crawford club. She told of her activities in the district for the past three months, and of the state executive board meeting over which Mrs. Gholston presided so gracefully and wisely.

The inauguration of President Roosevelt took place during the club meeting, and a resolution was passed pledging allegiance and co-operation to the administration, which was signed by Mrs. N. T. Cunningham, Lexington; Mrs. Wise Hausford, Enterprise, and Mrs. W. W. Armistead, Crawford. Mrs. T. N. Crawford offered a prayer, asking the Heavenly Father to guide and guard the president. Program chairman, Mrs. Thad Hawkins, of Arnoldville, presented her subject, "Oglethorpe County's Contribution to Early History of Georgia," which was developed in an instructive manner, being divided into four subheads: "Historic Homes of Oglethorpe," by Mrs. W. D. Smith, of Crawford; "Governors From Oglethorpe," by Miss Dorothy Whitehead, of Sandy Cross; "Historic Spots of the County," by Mrs. Robert Findley, of Masseys, and "The Life of William H. Crawford," by Mrs. T. N. Crawford, of Lexington. Mrs. Eugenia Thelanius, of Arnoldville, rendered vocal solos, the words by Frank L. Stanton.

The federation meets in Lexington the first Saturday in June. Mrs. Thad Hawkins, program chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, county Georgia bicentennial chairman, and the bicentennial chairmen of each club. A county "home-coming" is planned and everybody who has lived in Oglethorpe county is invited.

Many Historic Relics Are Displayed At Brunswick's Bicentennial Meeting

Mrs. Earl Grant presided over the bicentennial meeting of Brunswick Woman's Club, and wore a colonial costume and powdered wig. Miss Lucile Butts, chairman of the music department, opened the program with Charles Wesley's hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King," sung by the club. Mrs. Joe Lambright read one of Wesley's hymns as an opening prayer. Miss Butts sang "Georgia Land," accompanied by Miss Marjorie Wooten. Miss Florine Long gave "The Song of the Chattahoochee," by Sidney Lanier. Prep High girls sang "The Good Ship Ann," directed by Miss Pierce. Miss Caroline Way sang "The Red Old Hills of Georgia." Misses Mary Oates and Bob Shelander, in attractive colonial costumes and wigs, danced the stately minuet, and Miss Charlton Helms played for them to dance.

Historic Relics.

Mrs. G. V. Cate had charge of the presentation of the historic relics brought by members. She exhibited a silver cup, engraved with the letters, N. G., belonging to Nathaniel Greene, and in the possession of his great-grandson, Nat Nightingale. A clock, owned by Nathan Greene, is the property of Douglas Nightingale. Mrs. Cate showed a picture of Mrs. Nathaniel Greene, copied from a portrait by Silbert Steuart. It was Mrs. Greene's second husband, Phinias Miller, who financed Eli Whitney in his invention of the cotton gin.

Mrs. J. E. Lambright presented the marriage license of Ann Harris and Cyrus Dart, dated May 7, 1796—sixty years after General Oglethorpe arrived at Frederica. Ann was 17 at the time of her marriage and lived to be 92 and is buried with her parents in the Frederica churchyard. To this union seven children were born, including Urbanus Dart and Edgar Cyrus Dart, pioneer citizens whose descendants are well-known local citizens. Another relic exhibited by Mrs. Lambright was an extra issue by the Brunswick Advocate, January 11, 1861, telling of the attack on Fort Morris, in Charleston harbor.

Mrs. Madge Merritt presented a bound volume of the American Farming Journal for the years 1821 to 1824. She stated that the articles contained therein on reforestation, although written 112 years ago, read just like the articles appearing on that subject today. Mrs. Cate presented a pewter tea pot from the slave ship Wanderer, and used by the officers to make tea. This relic is owned by Mrs. Nina Clubb Welsh and came to her from her grandfather, who piloted the Wanderer into Jekyll creek on its last voyage.

Mrs. H. M. Branham displayed two canes given to Dr. Branham's grandfather, a noted doctor of his day, by the sixteenth governor of Georgia. One cane contained a daguerreotype of the doctor and his wife, and the other contained a sword.

Mrs. Louisa Stacy exhibited old newspapers—one being printed in 1776, and contained a sermon delivered to the soldiers just before going to war. Another interesting relic owned by Mrs. Stacy is a grant from King George III to John Stacy, dated January, 1775, for lands in St. Thomas parish.

Oldest Relic.

The oldest relic shown was the cradle owned by George D. Lowe, and presented by Mrs. George T. Brown. It was brought to this country in 1750 and has cradled many babies who became distinguished citizens, including General Clement A. Evans. Mrs. Albert Way presented an old Bible, published by Oxford University, in 1784, owned by the Quartterman family and bound in sheepskin. She displayed a cup and saucer owned by John Stevens and acquired by him when he was collector of customs in Savannah.

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Charles Deming, a number of relics were brought from the old Burroughs home. An interesting collection of iron cooking utensils was displayed and a 'piggin" or wooden mixing bowl, with various wooden paddles. Of interest was Dr. Hazlehurst's case of medical instruments and a "quassia cup," a wooden cup from which water was given in sickness—the water acquiring the properties of quinine.

A box containing quilt scraps, belonging to Miss Hazlehurst, was a marvel of dainty needlework, and a picture of General Oglethorpe, done in colors, was shown. Mrs. G. V. Cate displayed her own collection of maps and papers—including bound copies of the Brunswick Advocate from 1837 to 1839—and a copy of the Regimental Journal, published in 1862, containing the names of the soldiers stationed here in training for Virginia. A copy of an old map, found in London, showed the Old Military road used by Oglethorpe, between Fort Frederica and Fort St. Simons. Another paper of interest was a copy of the Weekly News, published in Savannah 50 years ago, when that city celebrated the sesquicentennial of its founding.

Mrs. Cate also displayed a scrip note, issued by the city of Brunswick in 1893, 40 years ago, following the yellow fever epidemic—showing that the present depression is not the first. An iron and glass frame, from an old street light in front of the postoffice, was shown—from the days when Brunswick had oil lights on the streets and then gas. (So why complain if a few electric lights are cut off now.)

A copy of the Weekly Seaport Appeal, dated 1875, had each column bordered black, and contained the names of those dying from yellow fever, also the firms and cities who sent aid to Brunswick during this epidemic. A book, brought over on the ship Anne, published in England in 1721, was entitled, "The Great Law of Consideration," and was a deep and gloomy discourse on Christianity. Mrs. Cate displayed a little book containing the records of the sewing society who made clothing for the soldiers during the Civil War. This book was owned by Miss Maria Blain and given to Mrs. Cate. The diary of Mr. Durfree, of St. Simons, written in 1805, is also a prize possession of Mrs. Cate.

Cameo Brooch.

An exquisite cameo brooch, owned by Mrs. S. L. High, which is 100 years old, was worn by Mrs. Grant, as part of her colonial costume, and its interesting story was told by Mrs. High. Sassafras tea and crackers were served by Miss Mary Cunningham and Mrs. Roy Landane, wearing attractive colonial costumes. The central decoration of the hall was a beautiful silk Georgia flag.

Waycross Club Honors Two ProminentWomen

An outstanding social function of the club year was the luncheon given at Hotel Ware at which Waycross Woman's Club complimented Mrs. Edith D. Dimmock and Mrs. J. A. Rollison. Tribute was paid the honor guests by the president, Mrs. W. G. Townsend who said: "Mrs. Dimmock is state chairman of the division of health and district health chairman. She served as district president for four years, during which time she attended a club institute of Athens and was awarded a loving cup, which at her suggestion is used as Eighth District Club trophy for the highest rating on the standard of excellence. The Waycross club has won it twice. Mrs. Dimmock also served the district as chairman of the Students' Aid and was organizer and first president of the local club."

In presenting Mrs. J. A. Rollison, the president said: "During Mrs. Rollison's administration as second president of the Waycross Woman's Club her outstanding work was the perfecting of the departments of the club, and the tremendous undertaking of creditably entertaining a state convention. Mrs. Rollison at present has the honor of holding the state chairmanship of the division of literature, the district chairmanship of the department of fine arts and the local chairmanship of the department of education."

Among guests of honor were Mrs. A. P. Brantley, past state president and life director of the Georgia federation, director of The Georgians, the sister club of the federation, and an honorary life member of the Waycross Woman's Club; Mrs. J. L. Walker, district historian of federated clubs, chairman of public welfare and health, honorary life member of the Waycross Woman's Club and author of "The History of Ware County;" Mrs. Gus Folks, president of The Georgians; Mrs. Herbert Bradshaw, past president and the present chairman of department of international relations.

Mrs. W. G. Townsend introduced a complete surprise to the club members by presenting a silver trophy to be known as the "Ellen Goodrich Toynsend Loving Cup," which will be awarded each year at the annual dinner to the club member rendering outstanding community service. Mrs. J. L. Walker, in accepting the cup, voiced the appreciation of the members.

It is a custom of the Waycross Woman's Club to bestow upon one member each year an honorary life membership. Upon the recommendation of Mrs. J. A. Rollison the club voted unanimously to bestow this honor upon Mrs. Jack Williams, a charter member, who served as first vice president and chairman of membership and chairman of arrangements during the state convention, as second vice president and program chairman, and is local treasurer.

Mrs. Arthur Lott presided over a program including violin numbers by Miss Miriam Curry, with piano accompaniment by J. P. Matthiessen; a humorous reading, "Don't Ask Me Another," by Miss Alice Patterson, and a contest arranged by Mrs. John Glenn and conducted by Mrs. D. N. Stafford.

Those honoring Mrs. Dimmock and Mrs. Rollison by their presence were Mesdames A. P. Brantley, G. P. Folks, J. L. Walker, Herbert Bradshaw, W. G. Townsend, J. R. Whitman, Arthur Lott, Harry M. Wilson, C. C. Hamilton, Jack Williams, A. C. Snedeker, W. B. Goodrich, D. N. Stafford, G. R. King, A. V. Baldeschweiler, Davis Lane, D. S. McClellan, A. V. Kennedy, Calvin Parker, Mack Barnes, George Fesperman, J. M. Fesperman, R. C. Ulmer, E. V. Spear, Glenn Harn, Opal Lamm, Misses Helen Branham, Dollie Highsmith, Nora Lee Smith, Miriam Curry, Alice Patterson and J. P. Matthiessen.

McDonough Club Plants 170 Trees.

The planting of 170 dogwood trees on the city streets, reported by Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, chairman of the civic committee, at the March session of McDonough Woman's Club, was an outstanding accomplishment of the past month. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Adam Sloan, and in the absence of the president, Mrs. John Hazlehurst, the first vice president, Miss Bertha Dunn, presided. The collect was read by Mrs. Ralph L. Turner, and Mrs. E. J. Reagan reported on child welfare. The corresponding secretary was instructed, by unanimous vote of the membership, to write the local representative and the state senator to urge the passage of Bill 525, relative to the child service bureau.

The hostess for the May meeting will be Mrs. E. L. Reagan, and the program chairmen, Miss Lucile Bowden and Mrs. Ted Turner, assigned the topic as, "Good Books and What They Mean; Latest Trends in Literature."

March program was directed by Mesdames G. W Hamilton and Hugh Turner. Mrs. William B. Pullin led community singing featuring "The Star Spangled Banner," "America, the Beautiful," and "Georgia Land." Mrs. Hankinson made an address on "Citizenship" and concluded with reading original poems not yet offered for publication but that will be included in literature publisher by the state department of education for use in bicentennial programs. The hostess, Mrs. Sloan, was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. Terhune Sudderth.

Norcross Club.

Mrs. W. M. McElroy, chairman of the department of American homes, had charge of the program at the March meeting of the Norcross Woman's Club, held at the home of the president, Mrs. T. D. McDaniel. Miss Lola Key read "George Washington's Prayer for His Country," and the division of community service reported assistance having been given to a needy family. A nominating committee of five, with Mrs. H. J. Reynolds as chairman, was elected to report on new officers at the April meeting. Mrs. L. D. Ewing sang "Home, Sweet Home" and Tom McKinnon Jr., accompanied at the piano by Mrs. F. A. Brinson, sang "Rock-a-Bye Moon" and "A Little Street Where Old Friends Meet." Mrs. C. A. Garner read a paper on the personal care a housekeeper owes herself, and Miss Elsie Garner read a humorous sketch, "The Co-operative Housekeepers."

Miss Lola Key illustrated home economics and the use of Georgia products by describing a luncheon prepared and served by Mrs. W. M. McElroy, who used, with a few exceptions, products from her own yard and garden, showing what can be done toward "living at home." Mrs. T. D. McDaniel read Edgar Guest's poem, "The Old Time Sitting Room." Each month one number on the program features Georgia, and a contest in which questions were answered with the names of counties of Georgia closed the program.

Athens Club Plans Cooking School

Athens Woman's Club, with Mrs. Rufus Turner as president, published a yearbook with the monthly programs taking up a study of Georgia. The educational committee, with Mrs. Horace Ritchie, chairman, had a book shower for the Opportunity school in Athens and will sponsor the educational program of the general federation.

Mrs. Rufus Moss, chairman of the American home department, is arranging for the Woman's Club electric cooking school to be held March 15 and 16, and the teacher will be Miss Dora Burley, of London, England, who held a successful school in Atlanta in January. Miss Burley is a noted home economist, a woman of great charm and with an ability of making a success of her teaching. Michaels town hall will be the place for the classes and women from the surrounding towns and counties will be given special prizes, also a booth will be maintained especially for the rural woman where she may display her handiwork for sale.

Tuesday evening, March 14, the cooking school will be heralded by a Georgia products dinner. The tables will be decorated for each month in the year and a menu including turkey for 50 cents a plate will be served. Committee in charge of the cooking school includes Mesdames R. S. Moss, Rufus Turner, A. D. Gannon, T. F. Green, E. D. Pusey and H. B. Ritchie.

Mrs. Jackson Issues Message on Music.

Mrs. Addie May Jackson, of Savannah, music chairman for Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, in her second message since her appointment writes: "If all districts have not appointed chairmen of music this should be done at once, as much can be accomplished in this department before the close of the club year. The entire state is thinking in terms of celebration, birthdays, accomplishments of the past, and on programs celebrating such occasions music has a vital part. It has been suggested and adopted by most clubs that every meeting open with ensemble singing. If your club does not do this you are omitting a helpful factor. Try it.

"Feature your state composers. Three program suggestions are: 'Growth of Music in America,' 'Influence of American Women in Music, Past and Present.' One program at least of 'A Famous Composer.' As this is the 100th anniversary of Johannes Brahms, his music would be a good choice. Biography is one of the most popular forms of modern literature. Knowledge of famous musicians is essential to the appreciation of music. Creative ability plus personality is bound to be most interesting. Study it.

"Music's place in modern life; the radio, that never ceasing, unending, inexhaustible supply of music that has brought into such common usage the term 'broadcast.' Am asking for a brief and constructive answer to each of these three questions: 1a. What is radio doing to music in your community? 1b. What is radio doing for music in your community? 2a. What are sound pictures doing to music in your community? 2b. What are sound pictures doing for music in your community? 3a. What will greater speed of life do to music in your community? 3b. What will greater speed of life do for music in your community?

"The first week in May is music week. Make it a real gala week. In these difficult days of depression, lagging spirits, distressed hearts, minds tired and strained, let music express itself as the real avenue of joy, a genuine force, supplying a need that makes music no longer an incident nor even a luxury, but a real necessity. Club women have the privilege and as club women are commissioned to be leaders in making their communities excel. Let each chairman of music look to her laurels and sieze every opportunity to make music fulfill its service. Music has the power to enrich, sweeten and uplift lives. Promote music."

Fort Valley Club.

John H. Jones was the guest speaker at the recent meeting of Fort Valley Woman's Club held at the home of Mrs. Claude Walton with Mrs. Julius Glass as co-hostess. The program, in charge of Mrs. W. L. Snow, was a continuation of the study of Georgia, in commemoration of Georgia's bicentennial celebration.

Mr. Jones spoke of Georgia's great men, with emphasis on Georgia's triumvirate; Miss Jo Allen spoke of Georgia poets, and paid tribute to Sidney Lanier; Miss Jule Lambert read a poem by Georgia's poet laureate, Earnest Neal; Miss Betty Green read "The Twelve Gideons."

February 22 is observed as Library Day with the Georgia Federation and a donation of books, collected from club members, was presented to Miss Gena Riley, librarian, who gave library statistics and thanked the club for its co-operation. The president, Mrs. A. M. Solomon, presided over the business session.

Fort Valley Woman's Club has been signally honored in having the district president name several club women as third district chairmen, and Mrs. A. M. Solomon is district treasurer; Mrs. Maxwell Murry is chairman of junior work; Mrs. Frank Titius, chairman of welfare, and Mrs. C. H. Sammons is civics chairman.

Braselton Club.

Mrs. J. A. Davis, chairman of education, arranged an interesting program on "Georgia History and Education" for the March meeting of Braselton Woman's Club. Miss Leita Braselton rendered vocal numbers, and Mrs. John O Braselton, second vice president of the ninth district and chairman of safety in the home and school G. F. W. C., spoke enthusiastically on, "The Part Women Have Played in Georgia History."

Mrs. H. P. DeLaPerriere, ninth district president, was introduced by Mrs. Davis, and spoke on "Georgia History and Education." In a vivid and impressive manner, she portrayed the early events that make Georgia an outstanding state. Her comparisons, in the pioneer methods and present-day plans of education, were informative.

The club will plant and dedicate, with appropirate exercises, a living Christmas tree, and will light it each year in memory of Mrs. Susan F. Braselton, a charter member of the club. During the social hour Mrs. Davis poured tea from a highly prized tea pot that has been in her family more than a hundred years, exemplifying the spirit of the program.

'Club Building' Will Be Theme Of Fifth District Club Institute

The annual institute of the Fifth District of Georgia Federation Women's Clubs will be held Wednesday, March 15, at the Woman's Club, and opens at 9:30 o'clock, with Mrs. L. O. Freeman, the chairman, presiding, assisted by Mrs. J. F. MacDougald, president of fifth district. A program of constructive interest has been arranged by Mrs. Freeman, using "Club Building" as a central theme.

"Essentials in Club Building" will be presented as follows: "A Worthy Purpose, the Surest Foundation," discussed by Mrs. Kate Green Hess, former district president: "A Co-operative Membership, the Strongest Material," Mrs. Norman Pool, recording secretary of the district; "Capable Officers, the Best Architects," Mrs. H. G. Hastings, past president; "Active Department, the Most Efficient Builders," Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, Mrs. James Logan, Mrs. Tom Brooke, Mrs. James R. Little, Mrs. E. V. Carter and Mrs. P. J. McGovern, chairmen of departments.

"Tools for Club Women" will be discussed by women of wide experience; "Finance," Mrs. W. P. Dunn, president Atlanta Woman's Club; "Publicity," Mrs. Walter Stewart, district press chairman; "Parliamentary Practice," Mrs. Howard McCall, state parliamentarian; "Programs," Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, state second vice president and chairman of program for Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Following the theoretical building of an ideal club, "The Place of the Finished Structure in the World Today" will be presented by Mrs. W. W. Stark, of Commerce, director for Georgia in the general federation.

The program is designed to give information and methods whereby the technique of club building may be improved, and the scope and character of club service be widened and promoted. Women's clubs have become a powerful factor in the civic life of state and community and it is the duty of every club member to learn how her club may serve most efficiently. This spring institute has become an outstanding annual activity of the district and is anticipated as a time of social fellowship as well as a period devoted to the study of improved methods.

Maysville Clubwomen Stage Costume Party.

Maysville clubwomen staged a costume party in celebration of George Washington's birthday at the home of Mrs. W. S. Sharp, who impersonated Martha Washington. Each guest, upon being introduced by Mrs. Sharp, performed some stunt associated with the character represented. Guests in costume were Mrs. Billy Pittman, as George Washington; Mrs. John Miller, as Martha Washington; Mrs. W. C. Lockhart, as Mrs. Thomas Jefferson; Mrs. Huram Hancock, a colonial lady; Mrs. Kathleen Voyles, Tomichichi; Miss Ruth Brisendine, Pocahontas; Miss Frances Collins, colonial lady; Mrs. J. P. Cooper, girl of 1878; Miss Emily Dozier, old-fashioned southern girl; Miss Louve Wise, belle of the 90's; Mrs. J. W. Strange, a Japanese lady; Mrs. G. D. Castellaw, Red Cross nurse; Mrs. W. P. Reports on Annual Meeting Mark Methodist Missionary Meetings

The Park Street Methodist W. M. S. meeting was featured by Mrs. Evans Hall's report of the annual meeting of the North Georgia W. M. S. at Newnan. Mrs. Hall found particular inspiration from the spiritual life groups, of which "prayer" was the keynote; and in her report she imparted some of the enthusiasm she had received as delegate. An instructive program was conducted by members of Miss Julie King's circle on the deaconess and her work. Current news from missionaries in Africa and from the home field was presented by the publicity chairman. A birthday card shower was planned for Mrs. P. D. Johnson, a former member, and Mrs. O. A. Sharpless announced the date as March 25 and asked that it be remembered. Luncheon was furnished by the staff and served by members of the Young Girls' circle. Sixty-three members were present. The next meeting will be at the church on Monday morning, April 3. There will be a radio impersonating show by the Young Girls' circle, Julie King, chairman, Thursday evening, March 23, at the church under Mrs. E. E. Aiken's direction. Admission is 10 cents.

Calvary W. M. S. met at the church Friday. Mrs. B. D. Manston gave an interesting report of the annual meeting at Newnan. Members of the brand-new Young Matrons' circle presented the program, wearing costumes of the countries they represented. Mrs. W. R. Mitchell represented Korea; Mrs. R. C. Clonts Jr., Japan; Mrs. W. Howard Morgan, China; Mrs. J. C. Williamon Jr., represented Brevard and Sue Bennett Colleges; Mrs. J. A. Sligh, Brazil; Mrs. Ivy Hubert, Virginia K. Johnson Institute, and Mrs. Malcomb Tucker was the disbeliever. During the social hour Mrs. E. L. McCrory's circle served luncheon.

The business meeting of the Calvary Manston Bible class was held at the home of Mrs. E. G. Pope on Langhorne street on Thursday. Group chairmen made good reports, and Mrs. A. J. McClure had charge of the entertainment.

Payne W. M. S.

Payne Memorial W. M. S. met at the church Monday. Mrs. W. F. Griffin led the devotional. Mrs. P. H. Taylor sang "Songs in the Night," with Mrs. F. K. Frye at the piano. Officers made full reports and circle chairmen made their reports to the vice president, Mrs. W. L. Nabers. The Lucy Jim Webb circle, Mrs. George Sims, chairman, and the Lucile Lewis circle, Mrs. John G. Thatch, chairman, tied in attendance contest.

W. M. S. of Haygood Memorial church met Monday. Splendid reports were made by the following: Mrs. H. H. McPherson Jr., secretary; Mrs. Howard Graf, treasurer; Mrs. Otis Barfield, corresponding secretary; Mrs. R. H. Dommick, junior church; Mrs. C. C. Barnes, mission study; Mrs. W. F. Schell, social service; Mrs. R. L. Powledge, publicity; Mrs. N. C. McPherson, World Outlook, and Mrs. W. F. Micheaux, spiritual life. The outstanding feature of the meeting was echoes from the twenty-third annual session of the Woman's Missionary Society recently held in Newnan, given by the delegate, Mrs. Leo Sudderth. The literary program arranged by Mrs. J. R. Welborn's circle presented the deaconess and her work. Those taking part were Mesdames G. L. Suggs, R. A. Calvert, Wade H. Bell, L. J. McGee, Jack H. Lane, W. W. Jackson and H. H. McPherson Jr.

Circle No. 4 of Inman Park Methodist church met recently in the Friendship Class room of the church. Miss Josephine Glenn, guest speaker, brought an inspiring message taken from Christ's words: "Follow Me." Mrs. Guy Fridell, scrapbook chairman, had five beautiful scrapbooks on display. She gave an interesting outline of the founding of Georgia and the early churches and their struggles. Mrs. Roy Petree conducted a contest planned in celebration of the bicentennial. Mrs. Raiford was awarded the prize for this contest. Mrs. D. T. Passmore, Mrs. M. C. Evans and Mrs. George Macnamara were appointed to attend the mission study classes on "The American Indian."

Center Street W. M. S.

W. M. S. of Center Street church met Monday at the church. Mrs. J. F. Mayes was elected delegate to the district conference to be held in Atlanta in May. Mrs. T. F. Kent was elected alternate. Mrs. E. Willingham gave an interesting report of the annual conference of the W. M. S. held at Newnan recently. Mrs. Mayes spoke on the devotional side of the conference. The president announced the play, "Miss Blue Bonnet," which the society is sponsoring. Devotional was conducted by Mrs. T. F. Kent.

W. M. S. of Inman Park Methodist church met Monday at the church, Mrs. Clarence Bell, president, presiding. Mrs. E. L. Elmore, social service superintendent, made a talk in behalf of the Goodwill Industries on Butler street. Mrs. John H. Hurt gave a talk on temperance. Mrs. J. A. Campoamor told of plans being made for the mission study class to be held during the month of March. Mrs. Roy Petree gave a talk on "Spiritual Life." The literary program was in charge of circle No. 6, Mrs. J. L. Robertson, chairman. The leaflet, "The Deaconess, Who She Is," was presented by Miss Josephine Glenn, the guest speaker. A talk on "Stewardship" was given by Mrs. Charles Robeson. A report of the district meeting at Newnan was made by Mrs. J. O. Mangum. Luncheon was served by Mrs. M. D. Holsenbeck and the ladies of her circle.

Houseworth class of St. Paul church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brownlow on Burns drive Monday evening. The devotional program was in charge of Mrs. A. B. Hutcheson. Visitors included Mrs. Martha Thomson, of Birmingham; Hubert Wood, Hugh Timms, Brownie Logan, W. G. Blankenship, Hugh Middleton, A. B. Hutcheson, M. Harris Dodd and Glenn Smith, of the Young Men's Wesleyan class. Musical numbers were rendered by Mrs. Hugh Middleton, Hubert Wood and Hugh Timms. The class will be entertained in April by Mrs. Hugh Middleton and Mrs. Ruth Houseworth.

Christian Activities In Winder Church.

The Winder, Ga., Christian church, women's council, observed Women's Day for Missions by presenting a program, including a one-act play, "Elaine Shows the Way," written by the pastor's wife, Mrs. Nanna Crozier Wood. An offering was made for the cause of world-wide missions.

Dr. Royal J. Dye, known throughout the country as one of the greatest missionaries, made an address February 15. Dr. Dye was one of the first missionaries to go from the Christian church to Central Africa, going out 34 years ago to Bolenge, Belgian Congo. It was five years before the first convert was won, but now there are 34,000 active Christians in that great mission field, and they are all tithers.

Monday, February 27, the Women's Council held an all-day mission study class, taking as its text "Lady Fourth Daughter of China." Three teachers presented the 6 chapters of the book, and more than 30 people attended the class. A feature of the day was a "shower" of gifts sent to Dr. Jenny English Crozier, sister of Mrs. John H. Wood, wife of the Winder pastor. Dr. Crozier has been for many years a medical missionary in central India, but she is leaving that field next month to marry Frank M. Stead, a missionary in Persia.

Georgia Society, D. A. R., Holds Conference in Atlanta This Week

By MRS. SIDNEY SMITH, of Gainesville, State Editor.

This is D. A. R. Week in Georgia. At least it is to the 5,000 or more D. A. R. members who are looking toward Atlanta, where the 1933 conference will be held with the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., as hostess, of which Mrs. J. D. Cromer is regent. With such hostesses, those of us who are going can think only of the delightful time ahead, while those of us who are not going will be present in heart and spirit. Mrs. Julian McCurry, of Athens, state regent, will preside over the sessions with Mrs. W. F. Dykes, first vice regent, assisting.

The presence of the president-general, Mrs. William Russell Magna, accompanied by Mrs. William Becker, chairman of national defense embodying education, on the opening evening is of great interest. Mrs. Magna is not unknown personally to the Georgia daughters, having attended the state conference in Thomaston with Mrs. Grace Brosseau, the former president-general, and at a later time having been the guest with Mrs. Lowell Hobart, the president-general, of Mrs. Howard McCall, vice president-general from Georgia. Mrs. Magna will be guest of honor at the Officers' Club breakfast on Thursday morning, the officers of the club being Mrs. Julius Talmadge, of Athens, the president; Mesdames H. Fay Gaffney, Howard McCall and Max Land, chairmen.

Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent, announces that in celebration of the Georgia bicentennial colonial costume will be worn the second night of the state conference in Atlanta. This is, of course, optional with those attending, but is a request coming from many sources.

Mrs. B. C. Ward, state chairman of transportation, calls attention of members attending the state conference Daughters of the American Revolution to be held in Atlanta March 15, 16 and 17, to the following schedule: Delegates can leave Savannah by Central of Georgia at 9 p. m., eastern standard time, and will arrive in Atlanta at 6 a. m., central standard time. Returning, leave Atlanta 10 p. m., arrive at Savannah 8 a. m.; leave Macon on the Southern, eastern standard time, 5:45 a. m., arrive in Atlanta at 6:55 a. m.; returning, leave Atlanta at 8:30 p. m., arrive in Macon at 10:40 p. m. From Brunswick, over Southern railway, leave 9:50 p. m., arrive in Atlanta at 6:50 a. m.; leave Atlanta at 9:15 p. m., arrive at Brunswick 7 a. m. Leave Columbus at 7 a. m., by Southern railway, arrive in Atlanta at 11:40 a. m. Leave Atlanta at 4:15 p. m., arrive at Columbus at 8:40 p. m. Leave Dalton by Southern at 7 a. m., pass Rome at 8 a. m., arrive in Atlanta at 10 a. m. Leave Athens at 6:20 a. m., by Seaboard railroad, arrive in Atlanta at 7:15 a. m. Leave Atlanta at 8:20 p. m. Leave Augusta, by Georgia railway, at 1:10 a. m., arrive in Atlanta at 7 a. m., or leave at 12:50 p. m., arrive in Atlanta 5:35 p. m. Inquire of local agent for latest reduction in rates.

Conference Delegates.

Elijah Clarke chapter, Mrs. McCurry's own chapter, will send to the state conference the regent, Mrs. M. R. Redwine, and Miss Annie Crawford, delegates. This chapter has held two most interesting meetings lately, the February one celebrating not only Georgia Day and George Washington's birthday but the birthday of the chapter itself. The speaker, Dr. Andrew Soule, using as his subject "Georgia of 1933—a Land of Promise," was introduced by Mrs. Arthur Gannon, and toasts were proposed by Mrs. Julius Talmadge, Miss Laura Blackshear, Mrs. Alex Rhodes and Miss Moina Michael. Through the World War memorial fund and the Elijah Clarke Student Loan Fund this chapter has been instrumental in placing at the university the amount at present date of $8,571.13 for loan scholarships. At the January meeting, with Mrs. J. T. Dudley, Mrs. Henry West and Mrs. D. F. Miller, hostesses, the report that the chapter had begun the restoration of the historic cemetery used by the university when first established was most interesting. The program, a talk on Georgia's colonial period by Professor Peter F. Brown, also observed Benjamin Franklin's birthday by the reading of excerpts from Poor Richard's Almanac by Mrs. Paul Morrow. These programs were broadcast over radio in the evening. Mrs. Julian McCurry, Mrs. Julius Talmadge and Mrs. M. R. Redwine will be representatives at the Washington congress. Miss Frances Talmadge will be a member of the house committee and Miss Lucile Buchanan was appointed a page.

Samuel Elbert chapter of Tennille will be represented at state conference by Mrs. N. M. Jordan, regent, or alternates, Mesdames Will Brantley, W. H. Colgate and A. B. Gilmore. They were elected at the February meeting held at the home of Mrs. Herbert Franklin with Mrs. Graham Franklin as co-hostess. A Georgia Day program, in charge of Mrs. W. B. Smith, featured an address by Rev. J. C. Saville. The state U. D. C. song, composed by Mrs. Herbert Franklin, was sung and historical facts about Georgia were stated by the members. Mrs. Herbert Franklin and Mrs. Will Brantley will represent the county on the state D. A. R. bicentennial committee. Child welfare work is one of the leading lines of work of this chapter and further plans were made to aid children with defective eyesight.

John Benning chapter, of Moultrie, elected as delegates to state and national conferences Mesdames L. L. Dickinson, regent; M. J. Vereen, F. L. Lawson, Grady Adams, J. D. McKenzie. This was done at the January meeting. Mesdames Cliff E. Ray, J. D. McKenzie and Grady Adams hostesses. A program featuring early Georgia history and Franklin's birthday was given.

At the February meeting of the LaGrange chapter, delegates and alternates elected were Mesdames T. G. Polhill, regent; R. A. Malone, A. E. Mallory, J. M. Handley, F. F. Rowe. To the national conference Mesdames Polhill, S. D. Hooper, E. U. Bain, B. J. Mayer, Miss Ida Bell. This was a prominent day in the history of the chapter, marking the thirteenth birthday of this active branch of D. A. R. A most pleasing Georgia Day program was given by the Children of the Revolution, Mrs. R. A. Malone, director; those participating being Billy Hutchinson, Margaret Reynolds, Arthur Mallory, Barbara Bain, Mary Page Sargent, Misses Mary, Sarah and Pauline Hutchinson. Birthday greetings to the Daughters were given by the entire children's chapter. A beautifully embossed cake with the dates 1920-1933 carried out the birthday idea.

Jackson Delegates.

Delegates from William McIntosh chapter of Jackson include: Regent, Mrs. J. D. Jones; alternates, Mesdames John Edward Lane, C. W. Buchanan, A. T. Buttrill, James Warthen, J. B. Harrison, T. G. Willis; to the Continental Congress Mesdames John Edward Lane, C. T. Singleton, C. W. Buchanan.

Hawkinsville chapter: Regent, Mrs. Ruel Anderson, elected as state conference alternates. Mesdames Lee Jordan, N. A. Jelks, L. J. Baggott, Miss Reba Jordan, Mrs. John DeLamar, Mrs. J. D. DuPree; for national conference, Miss Emma Caldwell, Miss Virginia Jelks, Mesdames Frank Dortch, J. J. Whitfield, D. E. Duggan. A memorial tree to Oglethorpe, presented by the regent, has been planted near the Wilson and Washington trees by this chapter.

Barnard Trail chapter of Sylvester: Regent, Mrs. I. H. Mann; alternates, Mesdames J. S. O'Neal, H. C. Camp, D. G. Jefferds, J. H. Tipton, W. J. Manderville, Miss Josibel Johnson. The cachet for the Oglethorpe bicentennial stamp was sponsored by the chapter and over 100 mailed from Sylvester. The history of Worth county, written by members of this chapter, is nearly finished and many lines of D. A. R. work have been carried on during the year.

A delegation from the Toccoa chapter will attend the Atlanta convention, and Mrs. Roy Tabor was elected a delegate to Continental Congress. Mrs. J. W. Marks, regent of this active chapter, will be the official representative at the state conference.

Miss Edna Rogers is regent delegate of the Stephen Heard chapter of Elberton; alternates to the state conference being Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, Mesdames J. E. Webb, S. S. Brown, Clark Edwards, J. N. Love Through the Ages

What the Slave Girl Told the Caliph

SUNDAY, MARCH 12, 1933

Trade Mark Registration Applied for

1 Selim, the Slave Girl

IT MAY be a long jump from the crude and prehistoric love affairs of Mr. Caveman to the perfumed philanderings of Abdul the Caliph in "Arabian Night" days. But just compare the barbaric, but none the less artistic, wiles of Momo, the cavewoman, with the gentle bewitchery used by Selim, the slave girl, in catching a man. The modern student of love-making will agree with Kipling that the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady were "sisters under the skin."

How old is modern love-making anyhow?

As old as man and older than human speech. But today, as for centuries past, word are a vital part of the technique of the tender emotion. When the earth was young women charmed men with looks and gestures.

They are still doing it. But a great aid was the spoken word.

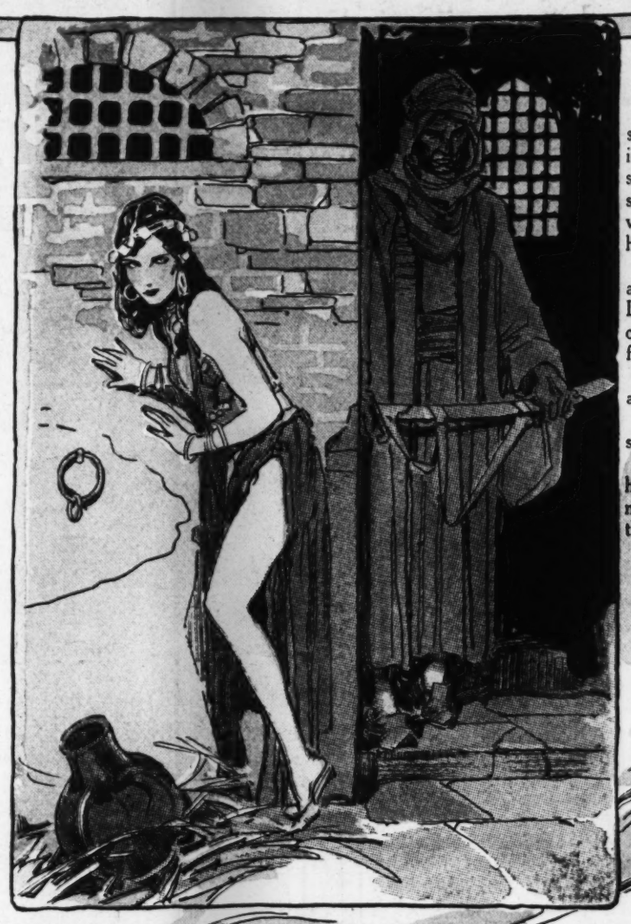

Glance at Selim, the Turkish slave girl at the right. Presently she will become the wife—one of a thousand beautiful wives—of the cruel and capricious master.

Hearing of the whim of the lord of Arabia—that each wife should be the queen of a night unless she could tell a story without an end, one in which his interest should never be allowed to flag for a moment. Abdul has adopted the same system. Failure means death, means that the beautiful head of the slave girl shall fall under the cruel blow of the court executioner's scimitar.

But the little slave girl is unafraid. Soon she will be brought into the Caliph's presence and asked to unfold a wondrous tale. She is thinking of the story now as she crouches against the wall.

"Come," says the harem guard, fondling the blade of Damascus steel that lies sheathed in his hand. "Your master awaits."

"I am ready," she tells him and prepares to go into the Caliph's private chambers.

The Story Without End

NOW Selim, the slave girl, is seated at the feet of the great Caliph. She has been perfumed and bedecked with the finest rubies and sapphires in the empire. But Abdul looks as her without interest. It is Selim's night of nights, the one that will decide her destiny. Will she join the hundreds of other unfortunate girls whose lives were snuffed out because the tales they spun did not intrigue him? Or will she succeed and save her lovely head? Glancing coquettishly at her master, she begins her story:

"Once, oh master, whose wisdom is greater than that of the stars and whose might is second only to Allah's, there was a great ruler. Like you, he was fond of tales told in the evening while he drew on the long tube of his fragrant water-pipe. But there was a penalty for the teller who ended her story."

Slowly Selim continued the tale, dramatizing the scene that she and the Caliph were enacting.

"And when she had finished her tale," asked Abdul "Was she slain?

"Nay," said Selim softly, "the great ruler spared her, made her his favorite wife. This was because she didn't finish the story, not knowing the end which had to be lived out by both Selim and the man she adored."

How Selim Was Saved

THE next morning Selim's father came to the royal palace fearfully expecting to be told that his beloved daughter was no more. Instead he was ushered into an elegantly-appointed chamber.

"My daughter," said the happy man, "how has Allah preserved you?"

Selim laughed. "I used my head," she told him and related her clever trick in telling the Caliph a story that could not end until both of them died. "He has dismissed his favorite wife and put me in her place."

"You are wise beyond your years," said her parent sagely.

"The Great Abdul only imagines it was the story that enchanted him," she said. "I used my eyes, flirted with him as I spoke, yet was neither humble nor presumptuous. And he fell for it, the big sap."

Selim's Lasting Triumph

NO LONGER does Selim sit at Abdul's feet and fear for her head. She has found that even the "Greatest of the Great" can be subdued with a wink, as well as a story.

Little Eros grins down at them from his perch, thinking to himself, "What a woman is this Selim!"

And now it is Abdul who tell her tales. "A kiss, my adored one, if I spin you a yarn of my conquests in far lands."

"Maybe," she says. "But it better be good."

Abdul, keen as he is, has hardly noticed the transformation of himself from master to slave. Selim has, of course, but she is too intelligent to let on that she realizes the tables have been turned.

Counsel she gives Abdul always and her fair white hands are the unseen manipulators of the reins of the household. And like the ruler in the story, Abdul has become both wise and kind. He thinks he wills all this himself but those close to the throne perceive the ex-slave girl's influence.

Great is the power of words in the art of love and wise is she who knows the proper use of them.

MURDER RIDES THE BUS

Match your wits against the criminal in the mystery puzzle story on Page 3 of this issue.

By WILLIAM HENRY WISNER

The Count of Monte Cristo By Alexander Dumas

One of the World's Great Stories Is Retold for You in Condensed Version by Winston Churchill, English Statesman and Writer.

THE basic idea of "Monte Cristo" can be stated in two sentences. An innocent man is condemned through the machinations of three of his fellow men to perpetual, or at least indefinite imprisonment and the loss of all that is dear to him. On his escape, chance makes him master of unlimited wealth and power; he has vowed revenge on the three malefactors and wreaks it without haste or mercy.

But the working out of this main idea is unimaginably rich and complicated, and here only the dry bones can be given. Whole scenes of vivid action and glowing color must be passed over, and there is no room for a thousand delicate and skilful touches by which Dumas persuades us of the unlikely or the impossible. I shall tell enough, I hope, to give some notion of the enthralling quality which has made the story famous.

One morning in February, 1815, the Marseilles shipowner, Morrel, was on the quay watching his good ship Pharaon, Capt. Leclère, enter the port on her return from a Mediterranean voyage. But there was no captain on board: Leclère had died off Naples and handed over the vessel to the handsome young second-in-command, Edmond Dantès; and there had been a mysterious day's delay at Elba, which had aroused the suspicions of the ship's accountant, Danglars.

In a few words with Morrell, Dantès cleared the mystery up. The dying Leclère had charged him with a letter for Marshal Bertrand; he had delivered it, and had even had a word with the captive Emperor Napoleon himself; but of its contents he knew nothing. Morrel was satisfied, and promoted him captain to his great delight and the corresponding disgust of Danglars, who had an old grudge against him, and had hoped for the captaincy himself.

Dantès had now two visits to pay, to the only two persons he cared for on earth: his aged father, and his sweetheart, Mercédès, a beautiful girl belonging to the Catalan colony at Marseilles, with hair as black as jet, eyes as velvety as a gazelle's, and sunburnt arms which might have been modeled from the Venus of Arles. As Dantès entered her cottage she was refusing for the twentieth time to marry her cousin, Fisherman Fernand, who loved her with a consuming passion, and whom she also loved, but not in the way he wished. With the return of Dantès, Fernand's last hope was lost; and with rage and hatred in his heart he left the young couple arranging to celebrate their betrothal on the following day.

Meanwhile, the dastardly and embittered Danglars had put two and two together, and rightly guessed that Dantès must have in his charge a letter from Marshal Bertrand to some Bonapartist conspirator in Paris. Not to lose touch with his enemy he had followed him to the Catalan village and taken his seat with his friend the fisherman, Caderousse, in a tavern to keep an eye on events; and when Fernand stumbled past in his misery he summoned him to join in the bout, and easily wormed out of him the tale of his discomfiture and his hunger for revenge.

"Revenge?" said Danglars. "Nothing easier."

"How?"

Danglars called for pen, ink, and paper and wrote in a disguised hand an anonymous letter denouncing Dantès as a Bonapartist agent, entrusted with a conspiratorial letter which could be found by searching his person, his father's house, or in his cabin in the Pharaon.

"There," he said, "one would only have to send that to the magistrate and there would be no more question of Edmond Dantès. But, of course, no one would dream of doing such a thing;" and crumpling up the paper he threw it into a corner. Caderousse was too fuddled to have more than a vague perception of all this, or to take it seriously; and Danglars led him away, leaving Fernand with his eyes glued on the crumpled paper.

Next day was the betrothal feast, where all was congratulation and merriment, and no one noticed the cold eye of Danglars or the nervous apprehension which made Fernand start at every sound till at the climax of rejoicing there came a knock at the door. Dantès was torn from Mercédès' arms and haled away, with no reason given, by minions of the law.

We must now introduce the third of Dantès' destroyers. M. de Villefort was a brilliant and ambitious young lawyer who had just attained the untranslatable post of substitut du procuraur du roi. [Shall we say "deputy district attorney?"] The path to fame and power lay open before him, and there was only one fly in his ointment: his father, M. Noirtier [the full family name was Noirtier de Villefort, but the father used one-half of it, and the son the other], was a Bonapartist, and this compromising relationship was the terror of Villefort's life.

On this very day he, too, was celebrating his betrothal to Renée de St. Méran, the daughter of a great royalist family, who must have been almost as beautiful as Mercédès herself, for we are told that she, too, had an eye of velvet swimming in a fluid of mother-o'-pearl. This entertainment was in its turn interrupted: M. de Villefort was wanted at his office to deal with a dangerous conspirator, and he tore himself away, promising Renée that he would if he could temper justice with mercy in honor of the day.

Dantès told his story with such candor and simplicity that Villefort was strongly prepossessed in his favor, and saw every hope of keeping his promise to Renée. The man was clearly the most innocent of catspaws, and the two were on terms of growing confidence, when on being asked to whom the letter from Marshal Bertrand was addressed, Dantès uttered the fatal name of Noirtier.

Here was ruin staring Villefort in the face—his own father a moving spirit in a plot which could have no other object than the return of Napoleon to France! Nothing mattered but to eliminate the man, who in whatever ignorance and innocence held the clue to this deadly secret. But Villefort's self-control was perfect. The kindness of his manner increased and he completely reassured Dantès by burning the incriminating letter before his eyes.

They parted with expressions of trust and goodwill, but on leaving the room Dantès was hurried off to prison, and in the evening rowed across the bay to the terrible rocky island on which stood the lonely prison called the Chateau d'If, famous for the incarceration of Mirabeau.

That night, February the 28th, 1815, Napoleon escaped from Elba. His eagle flew from steeple to steeple till it lighted on the towers of Notre Dame. Louis XVIII. fled from Paris, the hundred days followed, and the emperor went to his final ruin at Waterloo. Throughout the second restoration Villefort kept his head and his feet, and the second restoration saw him married to Renée and promoted to the magistracy of Nimes. The shipowner, Morrel, moved heaven and earth to discover what had become of Dantès, but he had disappeared without leaving a trace.

For the next four years he was confined in a cell, unvisited except by the gaoler who brought him food morning and night, and once by an inspector of prisons. He passed through every extremity of agony and despair. At last, resolved to end his sufferings by starvation, he cast out his daily meat and soup through the one little grilled opening by which the cell was lighted. On the fourth evening, just as he was passing into the twilight of death, he heard a dull sound from the wall behind his bed, a regular scraping, as of some strong tooth or claw upon the stone.

Hope sprang up in him, and he drank the soup which that evening he had wanted strength to throw away. There is no space to describe the vicissitudes of this new hope; how he convinced himself that the worker was a fellow prisoner, not an employé of the governor; how he provided himself with a couple of tools to carry on the work from his own side; how after many days he heard a voice, and how in the end the last obstacle was broken through and the head of an old man appeared in the opening.

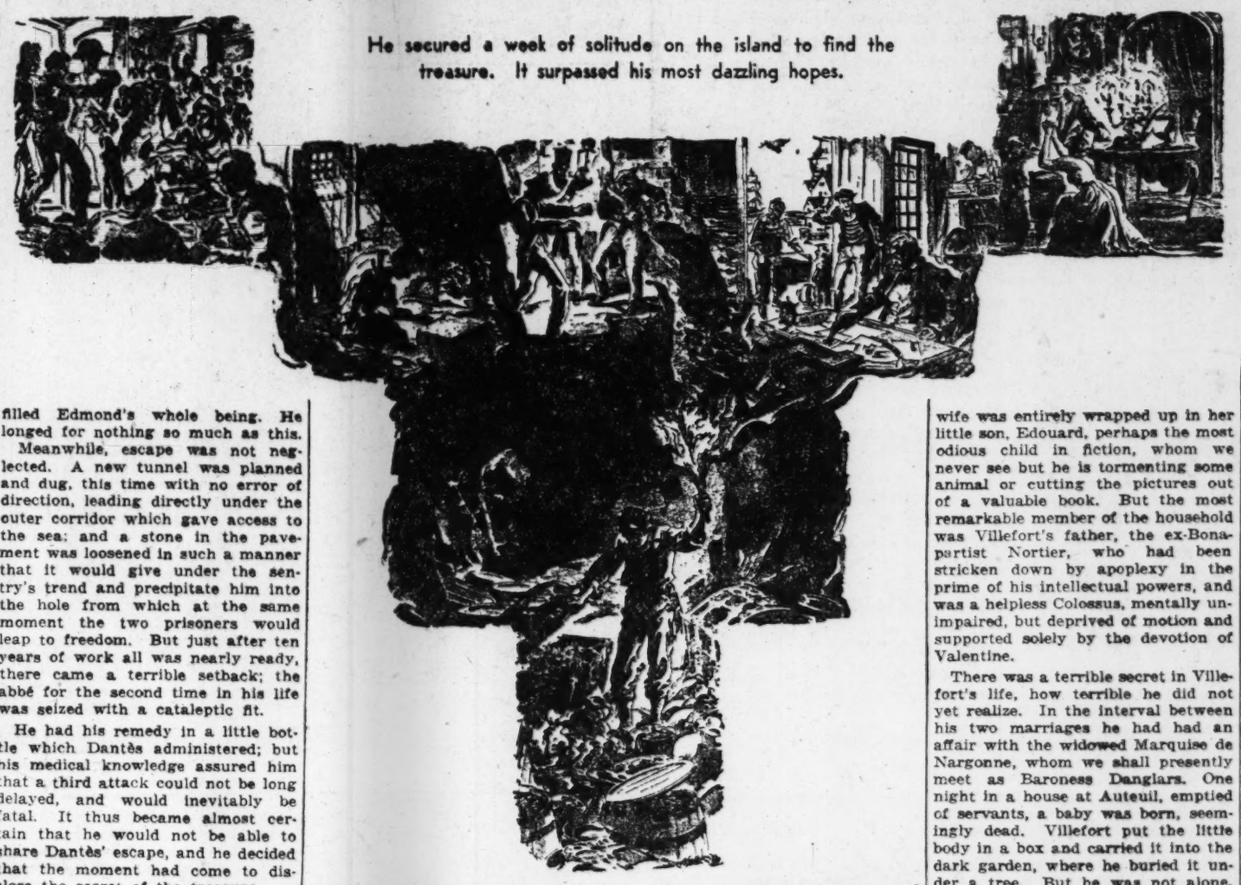

We are now presented to the Abbé Faria, decidedly one of the most extraordinary men who ever lived. Like Dantès he was a political prisoner, entombed in the Chateau d'If since 1811 for scheming the unification of Italy. Unlike him, he was a man of encyclopedic knowledge and vast experience of men and affairs. Ever since his incarceration he had been using his infinite skill, patience, energy and resource in the construction of tools and in the excavation of the tunnel which through a small initial error in his calculations had finally brought him to Dantè's cell instead of to the sea wall of the castle.

The prison authorities looked upon him as a madman, because he was always claiming to be the possessor of a secret treasure and offering an ever increasing number of millions in return for his release. This was so obviously impossible that the thing became a joke and visitors to the prison, such as the inspector who had interviewed Dantès, were offered the spectacle of his delusion as an entertainment.

The disappointment of the tunnel would have broken any other man, but the abbé's morale was as remarkable as his intellect, and his courage remained unshaken. Only second to liberty was the blessing of a companion; and he immediately organized a new life for both, in which they could spend as many hours as they pleased in the same cell, provided only that each was in his own for the gaoler's two daily visits. The strongest admiration and affection sprang up between the two, and for the next ten years the abbé gave up all his energy to the communication of his varied knowledge and experience to Dantès.

Edmond's innate, but hitherto uncultivated powers were of the highest order; he had a prodigious memory and capacity of assimilation, and a boundless desire to learn. The abbé had decided in earlier life that all necessary knowledge was comprised in a hundred and fifty books, and those books he had learned by heart; so the absence of a library was no drawback, and Dantès was systematically crammed with language, history, science, mathematics and philosophy. Moreover, the abbé had been a man of the great world and was thus capable of imparting to him those niceties of deportment which would equip him to move with grace in any society.

Another benefit was that his penetration enabled him to divine from Dantès narrative the separate motives of his three enemies, Danglars, Fernand and Villefort, and the procedure by which they had worked his ruin. He exposed to him in detail the part which each had played. A consuming passion for revenge filled Edmond's whole being. He longed for nothing so much as this.

He secured a week of solitude on the island to find the treasure. It surpassed his most dazzling hopes.

Meanwhile, escape was not neglected. A new tunnel was planned and dug, this time with no error of direction, leading directly under the outer corridor which gave access to the sea; and a stone in the pavement was loosened in such a manner that it would give under the sentry's trend and precipitate him into the hole from which at the same moment the two prisoners would leap to freedom. But just after ten years of work all was nearly ready, there came a terrible setback; the abbé for the second time in his life was seized with a cataleptic fit.

He had his remedy in a little bottle which Dantès administered; but his medical knowledge assured him that a third attack could not be long delayed, and would inevitably be fatal. It thus became almost certain that he would not be able to share Dantès' escape, and he decided that the moment had come to disclose the secret of the treasure.

Centuries before, the Borgia pope and his son, Caesar, had formed designs on the property of two immensely rich cardinals, Rospigliosi and Spada, and as the usual first step invited them both to dinner. The procedure was perfectly well understood, but invitations were invitations—the cardinals attended the dinner and were well and truly poisoned.

Rospigliosо's wealth was confiscated, but of Spada's no trace could be found; there was nothing of value except an exceedingly beautiful breviary. This remained in the Spada family, which sank into comparative obscurity and came to an end in 1807 with a Count Spada, who bequeathed the breviary to his friend and secretary, the Abbé Faria. No more than a month later the abbé was arrested and imprisoned in the Chateau d'If. But before the prison doors closed he had penetrated the mystery of the cardinal's fortune.

One afternoon he fell asleep over his books, and waking up in the dark beside a dying fire, felt for something he could use as a spill to light a candle. Ready to his hand, between the pages of the famous breviary, was a black strip of old faded paper which had lain there unconsidered since the cardinal's death. No sooner had he put this to the fire than invisible writing started into sight; and though many words had been burned away before he could blow it out, he was yet able, with his incredible ingenuity, to supply the missing sense.

The paper was the cardinal's missing will and contained minute directions for finding an inestimable treasure of gold and jewels in a grotto on the uninhabited isle of Monte Cristo, which lies between Corsica and Elba. But before he could use it, his wonderful secret was buried with him in his cell. He now bestowed it on Dantès.

Hardly a day too soon, for hot on the disclosure came the abbé's third attack and, after agonizing convulsions, he died in his young friend's arms. Hidden in the tunnel which connected the two cells, Dantès heard the governor directing the gaoler to make sure the prisoner was dead by burning his heels with red hot irons, and then to dispose of the body. It was to be put in a sack, Dantès presumed, for burial.

Thereupon he conceived and carried out a plan for laying the body in his own bed with its face to the wall and himself taking its place in the sack, which he thought would be buried, not too heavily covered, in the earth outside the prison for him to thrust his way out with his trusty knife, and swim by night to the nearest uninhabited island. But the event was very different. Instead of being carried to a burial ground, as he had expected, the gravediggers toiled along the rocky shore and the noise of the waves dashing against the rocks reached Dantès' ears. Suddenly, a cord was fastened round his feet with painful violence.

"Have you tied the knot?" enquired one of the gravediggers.

"Yes, and pretty tight, too, I can tell you."

What was the knot for? thought Dantès.

"Bad weather," observed one of the bearers, "not a pleasant night for a dip in the sea."

"Why, yes, the abbé runs a chance of being wet," said the other, and there was a burst of laughter. Dantès did not comprehend the jest, but his hair stood erect on his head.

"Well, here we are at last," said one of them.

"A little farther! A little farther," said the other. "You know very well that the last was stopped on his way, dashed on the rocks, and the governor told us next day that we were careless fellows."

They ascended five or six more steps and then Dantès felt that they took him, one by the head and the other by the heels, and swung him to and fro.

"One," said the gravediggers, "two, three and away!"

Dantès had been flung into the sea, into whose depths he was dragged by a thirty-six pound shot tied to his feet. The sea is the cemetery of Chateau d'If!

By a desperate effort, with superhuman strength, in the nick of time he managed to cut the rope and came to the surface free and unseen in a dark and stormy night. His old knowledge of the waters stood him in good stead, and after swimming a league he was cast up exhausted on the island of Tiboulen. By good luck for him a little boat was driven on the rocks by the storm, all hands lost, and only some planks and a sailor's Phrygian cap cast up on the short. Equipped with these, he swam out at daybreak and was picked up by a smuggler captain to whom he passed himself off as a sailor from the shipwrecked boat. After giving proof of his skill in navigation he was adopted a member of the crew and had the satisfaction of sailing past the Chateau d'If under the very noses of the guns which were notifying his escape.

It would take too long to tell in detail how he bided his time till a few months later the smuggiers had occasion to land a cargo on Monte Cristo itself, or how, by feigning an accident, he secured a week of solitude on the island to find the treasure. It surprised his most dazzling hopes. When the pirates picked him up on their return journey to Genoa he took in his pockets enough diamonds to buy a superlative little yacht, which he sailed by himself to Monte Cristo and packed with gold and gems. Then after nearly fifteen years, he once more landed at Marseilles, armed with unmeasured wealth and burning with unquenchable wrath.

The vengeance of Monte Cristo constitutes the remainder of the book. It was long drawn and deep drained. No one was spared and nothing was hurried. It was the sole occupation of his life. It had about it a "cat and mouse" quality very peculiar and impressive to all who study the unstinted pages of Dumas.

His father was surely dead. Mercédès, where was she? Danglars, Fernand, Villefort—all had disappeared. Of all his friends and enemies the first he traced was the fisherman, Caderousse, now struggling with adversity as the landlord of an unprosperous inn on the road to Beaucaire. Disguised as an Italian abbé who had consoled the dying moments of Dantès in prison and had been charged with his last commissions, he found no difficulty in learning all he wished from Caderousse, who had never forgiven himself for the cowardice which had withheld him from exposing the villainy of the anonymous letters. He told his late friend. The old Dantès had turned his face to the wall and died of hunger; and the good shipowner, Morrel, after losing as many argosies as the merchant of Venice, was threatened with bankruptcy. But the wicked had flourished like the greenest of bay trees.

Villefort had passed out of Caderousse's ken—no doubt he was prospering at Nimes, but certainly Danglars and Fernand were on the heights. Danglars, who was "born with a pen behind his ear and an inkpot instead of a heart," had established himself in Spain, profiteered in the war of 1825, and speculated fabulously with the results. Returned to France, he was now Baron Danglars, married to a daughter of Charles X.'s chamberlain, with "a house in the rue du Mont Blanc, ten horses in his stables, six lackeys in his anteroom and I don't know how many millions in his strong box."

Fernand's rise to wealth and station had been still more surprising and mysterious. A conscript at Ligny, he had done some shady service to a general who was betraying Napoleon's cause, and who later kept him under his wing. Spain, where he was once more hand-in-glove with Danglars, the Greek war of independence, Ali Pasha of Janina, all these had yielded featners to his nest; and now, however, he had managed it, he was a general, and Comte de Morserf, with a magnificent house in the rue du Helder. Worst of all, he had married Mercédès! The unhappy girl, alone in the world, thinking that Dantès must be dead, knowing nothing of the treachery, had accepted him in desperation, not more than eighteen months' after her lover's disappearance; and now she was queening it as a great lady in Paris.

After this agonizing interview, Dantès' first care was to save Morrel from ruin. Impersonating an English merchant, and utterly disguised, he made himself responsible for all his promissory notes, including two which were in the hands of the very inspector of prisons he had been visited at the Château d'If, from whom, by the way, he also obtained confirmation of the part which M. de Villefort had played in his ruin. At the moment when Morrel, unable to bear the shame of bankruptcy, was putting a pistol to his forehead, the money necessary to restore his fortunes poured in upon him; and the ship he had believed sunk sailed into port.

Dantès had thus paid his only debt of gratitude; and now the way was clear for revenge. Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; but was not Dantès his instrument? Was not this the purpose for which he had been so miraculously released and endowed?

For nine years he bided his time, building up his plans and his equipment. He traveled the earth from end to end, mastering the history, the manners, the language of every country, and perfecting himself in every science and accomplishment. Medicine was his especial province, and no secret of drug or poison was hidden from him. Swordplay and marksmanship, too—he could take the aces and deuces from a pack of cards and shoot them into threes, fives, eights, nines and tens. From the grand duke of Tuscany he bought the island of Monte Cristo, and with it the title of count [for in those days if you were not a grand seigneur you were nothing]; and in the grottos where the treasure had been hidden he made himself an Aladdin's palace. Human implements, too, he would require, and these he chose with nicety, Haidee, the beautiful daughter of Fermand's employer, Ali Pasha, had been sold on her father's downfall to the sultan.

Monte Cristo, as we must now call him, bought her, with all her secrets, for a priceless emerald; thenceforth he looked on her as his adopted daughter, and she on herself as his slave. Vampa, the most accomplished bandit in the History of the Campagna, had been in danger of his life: Monte Cristo put a bullet through his assailant, and so won his obedience and allegiance. A dumb servant of supreme intelligence and devotion would be a convenient possession: Ali [not the pasha] had been condemned by the dey of Algiers to a three days' punishment—the first day his tongue was to be cut out, the next day he was to be put to tortune, and on the third to death; and Monte Cristo bought him after the first day. There was also his steward, a Corsican Bertuccio, of whom more hereafter.

Monte Cristo had further created for himself two alternative personalities which he could assume at will: the Abbé Busoni, whom we have seen at work with Caderousse, and a rich and eccentric Englishman, Lord Wilmore. His own appearance had changed beyond recognition. The nobility of his presence, his black hair, his deathly pallor, his haughty and mocking lip, his great eyes shining with a strange fire and reading the secrets of every heart, the crease in his forehead which betrayed the incessant travail of bitter thoughts, all these combined to make him the embodiment of a Byronic hero, Manfred or Lara; and there were those who could not see him without thinking of a vampire. Yet, on the rare occasions when his heart was reached, his eyes and his smile could show forth treasures of benevolence and tenderness.

By this time his three enemies are at the heights of Parisian fame and fashion. Villefort was procureur du roi [or as we might say, public prosecutor] and the dignity, ability and industry with which he filled his position gave him high distinction. His first wife had died, leaving him an only daughter, Valentine, as good and beautiful as herself. His second wife was entirely wrapped up in her little son, Edouard, perhaps the most odious child in fiction, whom we never see but he is tormenting some animal or cutting the pictures out of a valuable book. But the most remarkable member of the household was Villefort's father, the ex-Bonapartist Nortier, who had been stricken down by apoplexy in the prime of his intellectual powers, and was a helpless Colossus, mentally unimpaired, but deprived of motion and supported solely by the devotion of Valentine.

There was a terrible secret in Villefort's life, how terrible he did not yet realize. In the interval between his two marriages he had had an affair with the widowed Marquise de Nargonne, whom we shall presently meet as Baroness Danglars. One night in a house at Auteuil, emptied of servants, a baby was born, seemingly dead. Villefort put the little body in a box and carried it into the dark garden, where he buried it under a tree. But he was not alone. There was a Corsican, Bertuccio [remember, reader, the name of Monte Cristo's steward] who had threatened Villefort with a vendetta for the political execution of an innocent brother. Bertuccio had struck down Villefort and rescued the baby boy, still breathing. Villefort, unconscious for hours, had no doubt the child was dead.

Fernand, comte de Morcerf, general and senator, husband of Mercédès and father of the gallant and charming Albert, a worthy son of his mother, had also a skeleton in his cupboard. The origin of his main wealth was the dastardly and richly rewarded betrayal of his master, Ali Pasha, to the sultan, and Monte Cristo knew the truth from the pasha's daughter, the beautiful Haidee whom he brought with him to Paris.

Danglars was vulnerable through his fortune which, though enormous, was at the mercy of the variable winds of high finance. His aristocratic wife had a lover, Lucien Debray, who held a high position in the ministry of foreign affairs and was in the habit of giving her secret information helpful to speculators which in their joint interests she communicated to her husband.

Into the lives of all these three families the mysterious and terrifying influence of Monte Cristo now began to penetrate. The count with his boundless wealth and his grand air, and his enigmatic personality made the sensation in Paris society, which was to be expected. He opened a credit of six millions with Danglars, and installed himself not only in a sumptuous palace in the Champs Elysées, but also in a country house at Auteuil, the same, oddly enough, which had been the scene of Villefort's intrigue with Madame Danglars. It was not long before things began to happen to Baron Danglars. All over Europe firms with which his credit was bound up went bankrupt; and information of a successful Carlist rising in Spain received by the official semaphone-telegraph and duly passed on by Debray to his mistress, proved next morning to have been falsified in transmission, not before Danglars had lost a million by the operations he had based on the news.

Villefort was the next to get a fright. Monte Cristo gave a dinner party for him and his wife in the villa of Auteuil. The Danglars were among the guests. The whole house was transmogrified into splendor by the magic wand of Bertuccio—all except the red damask room where Madame Danglars had given birth to her bastard, and the staircase down which Villefort had carried the new born child. To this room Monte Cristo led his guests after the Lucullian banquet. Had it not, he asked them, an aspect of sinister suggestion; did they not feel an aura of some terrible event? Could they not imagine the kind of horror that had been enacted there? And he proceeded step by step to tell, as if from his fancy, the whole hideous tale. Villefort kept his self-control; but Madame Danglars fainted.

Fernand's turn came next. His son was informally engaged to Danglars' daughter. This was a subject on which Danglars was not at his ease. Though Morcerf was such an old friend, there was a mystery about some parts of his life and the sources of his wealth. "But," said Monte Cristo whom Danglars consulted as a friend, "you must have correspondents at Janini—why not make enquiries?" Soon afterwards a paragraph appeared in one of the newspapers: "A correspondent in Janina writes that an old story has come to light; the man who betrayed Ali Pasha to the sultan was a French officer by the name of Fernand."

The publication caused no stir for no one dreamed of identifying this obscure individual with the distinguished general and senator. But his son, whose engagement had been broken off by Danglars, divined that his father must be the man. Further paragraphs appeared and Albert, putting together more twos than can be enumerated, made the terrible discoveries that the charge was true and that the assailant of his father's honor was no other than the friend he had learned to love and admire, Monte Cristo. He went to the opera where he knew the count would be and flung his glove in his face. There was no alternative but an immediate duel.

That night, while Monte Cristo was making his grim preparations for the morning's encounter, Mercédès, who had recognized him from the first, came to him to plead for her son's life. After a moving scene, in the course of which she learned for the first time of Fernand's old treachery to Dantès, she got his promise that Albert should be spared. This meant, of course, that Monte Cristo would probably himself be killed; his wealth, his knowledge, his power, all his long schemes and his proud post as the minister of God's vengeance might in one moment be utterly lost and destroyed.

But on the duelling ground the next morning Albert excused himself from fighting and declared that the count of Monte Cristo was fully justified in all that he had done to ruin his father. Mercédès had told him the whole truth. Leaving all their possessions, mother and son quitted their home together. Fernand, peeping from behind his window curtain saw them go, realized that Albert had not fought for him, that he was repudiated by wife and child, and fired a bullet into his brain.

We must now pass to Villeforts. The second Madame Villefort took a great interest in poisons, and the count of Monte Cristo had given her some valuable lessons in toxicology. One by one the relations who stood between her detestable child, Edouard, and valuable inheritances died in suspicious circumstances. Valentine, her step-daughter, the sole surviving human obstacle, in her turn fell ill and lay between life and death. Monte Cristo so guided matters that the public prosecutor learned beyond doubt that his wife was trebly a murderess.

He was just setting out to prosecute in a famous case in the courts: a murder by a young man well known in society. Nothing but work could keep him sane. Before leaving, he tells his wife that if he finds her alive on return he will give her up to justice. The trial scene is the climax of Monte Cristo's revenge. The prisoner, a youth named Cavalcanti, is accused of the murder of one Caderousse who, it appears, had brought him up. Villefort marshals every fragment of evidence against him with unerring skill. There seems to be no chance for the accused. But his defender, inspired by Monte Cristo, was peculiar. When asked his name and parentage, he answered he did not know his name, but that his father was the procureur du roi.

"And if you don't believe me," he added, "look at him." Villefort and the audience alike saw the truth in a flash. Cavalcanti was the child he had buried in the garden at Auteuil. He stumbled out of the court and drove to his already stricken house. Among his most terrible thoughts was that he had condemned his wife to self-destruction. Who was he, who had burned his own child alive, to pronounce such a sentence? His horses galloped.

They arrived too late. The miserable woman had shared the last of her poison between herself and her son, and as Villefort entered she expired, pointing to the door behind which little Edouard lay dead. The end came in Noirtier's room, where the Abbé Busoni revealed himself first as Monte Cristo and then as Edmond Dantès. Villefort's reason at last gave way, and we leave him in his garden, a raving maniac, digging frantically for his son's little coffin.

By comparison with these horrors, Danglers was let off lightly. Monte Cristo called on him one morning to draw the remainder of his credit, amounting to five millions. Precisely this sum Danglars happened to have by him; but it was the property of a charity whose affairs he managed and due to be paid over the next day. However, he made no bones about handing it to Monte Cristo in exchange for a receipt; and that night he levanted to Rome, where he intended to cash the receipt at the count's bank. But before he could bring off this coup he was captured by our old friend Vampa, and immured in a catacomb which the bandit used as his headquarters. Here he was starved with many refinements into surrendering the receipt, not to Vamp, but to Monte Cristo himself, who now took the opportunity of revealing himself for the last time as Edmond Dantès. He returned the five millions to the charity, contemptuously dismissing Danglars with a present of 50,000 francs wherewith to start afresh.

The three revenges were now accomplished—good measure pressed down and running over—each in its complete and perfect horror. There only remained for Monte Cristo to settle Mercédès in his father's old house at Marseilles, to send her son, Albert, to make good in Africa with the Spanish, and to arrange a happy marriage for the resuscitated Valentine with her lover, the son of his old friend the shipowner, Morrel. This done, he sailed away with Haidee, no longer his adopted daughter, but his bride, into the waters of the east.

By William Henry Wisner

A MILD, bright morning followed the blustery night of winter's first snowstorm, and Amos Jarrett, his frail form almost hidden behind the newspaper announced to his two breakfast companions that he had sent the chauffeur upon an errand and would ride to town atop a city bus.

His wife, masking her astonishment at this unprecedented departure from a daily habit of twenty years, meekly expressed the hope that her husband would "bundle up" warmly for the two-mile journey.

Harley Grimes, secretary and bodyguard to Pittsville's leading banker, civic reformer and, since yesterday, sole owner of the Panthers—the city's major league baseball club—continued to munch his toast in customarily morose silence.

Jarrett, an almost garrulous little man, with the heart of a crusader in his feeble frame and an unquenchable vocal enthusiasm for his every remedy to heal an ailing world, seemed to entertain a real affection for his burly, taciturn, undemonstrative secretary.

The aging philanthropist seldom appeared at his offices on Saturday, but himself had set the time for this morning's conference with three members of his newly acquired ball club.

Since the world's series a wisp of scandal had grown to a thundercloud of ignominy blackening the character of this aggregation of athletes, and Jarrett yesterday bought out his associate owners of the club, in order, as his interview in this morning's papers phrased it, "to clean up the mess and send the guilty to prison."

"At tomorrow's conference," the interview continued, "I shall meet with Terry Burns, manager and shortstop of the Panthers; 'Canny' Fleming, southpaw pitcher; Greg Sills, catcher and the district attorney of this county. I shall confront with unassailable documentary proof of their guilt two members of the team, and I confidently expect that the morning will reveal the identity of the 'man higher up' in their contemptible cabal."

At ten minutes of 10, but a moment after the announcement which opened our tale, Jarrett and his secretary rose from the table and without delay left the house and walked fifty feet to the street corner. The banker, warmly dressed, wearing a heavy velour hat and carrying in his left hand a bulky briefcase and in his right a sturdy cane, picked his way along the walk, while Grimes, his gloved hands empty, strode beside him, unmindful of slush and snow.

They were the only passengers who there boarded the double-decked, open-topped bus, manned by a single attendant, which in less than a minute stopped at the corner.

Grimes half lifted his employer up the high step at the vehicle's front and only door and followed him into the coach. Then, as Jarrett tottered and groped through the aisle, the huge lorry lurching and bumping over traffic-packed snow piles, the secretary paid their fares to the combined chauffeur-collector, joining the older man before the bus had traveled half a block, and just after Jarrett opened the swinging door between the lower deck passenger compartment and the inclosed vestibule of the upper deck stairway at the rear end of the coach.

The seats on the lower deck were taken—all of them by women. On the upper deck the two front benches were occupied by a rollicking quartet of high school boys. The only other passenger on this open deck, a young woman whose unwieldy luggage forced her to face obliquely, was seated in the fourth place from the rear, on the side facing the curb.

She saw Jarrett, followed by Grimes, at the topmost steps, the younger man almost carrying his companion. They lurched into the rear seat. The old man's head was lowered, his body supported against the plunge and sway of the bus by Grimes, who also helped his employer to maintain a grip on his briefcase and cane.

According to her account, the experience was the occasion for great amusement, the younger man jesting loudly and merrily for some moments after they settled in their places, with Jarrett in the seat at the rail.

By this time the bus had reached the next corner, where ten women and four men boarded it, none of them ascending to the upper deck. As it started again, the girl with the luggage glanced casually at the pair in the rear seat. The younger man was engaged in an earnest, low-toned discourse, and to some of his remarks, said the girl, the silent but apparently deeply interested banker occasionally nodded as if in agreement. Two blocks from Jarrett's home the boulevard enters a park, and as the bus approached the corner opposite this entrance the chauffeur noted the time as five minutes of 10 and saw a man run across the path of the bus, waving at him.

The coach stopped and this man got aboard. Slightly behind schedule, the driver started again and drove some distance through the park before accepting the new passenger's fare; and when this man, worming his way through the crowded passage, reached the door at the rear, the careening bus had traversed a quarter mile of the public tract.

As the coach entered this playground, the observant young woman aloft said, a group of long-trousered boys engaging in a snow battle turned their attentions momentarily toward the four youths in the front seats, and while no snowballs reached her or them, it was her impression that the "rowdies" had hurled a volley of these missiles in their direction. A few moments later this same witness saw Grimes arise and wave to two men standing on the path beside the road, who did not return the salute, but gazed in some amazement at the big secretary. Grimes resumed his seat and conversation, the new passenger had not yet reached the head of the stairway, and the girl's interest was attracted elsewhere.

Hardly three seconds elapsed when she heard Grimes cry: "The old man, Burns—something s happened to him!"

She turned quickly and saw the newcomer join Grimes in an unsuccessful effort to rouse the grotesquely slumped figure of Jarrett, and it was she who ran down to the driver and had him stop the bus and hail a passing motorcycle policeman.

Amos Jarrett was dead, killed instantly by a blow on the right temple, the livid bruise covered by his hat. On the floor near his dry-shod feet was a puddle of melting slush. Upon his hat was no mark except a slight dampness on the crown at a point an inch above the contused temple.

The briefcase was missing and never was recovered. Grimes gave it as his opinion that it had been dropped from the bus when the old man lost consciousness.

A heavy automatic pistol, which Grimes habitually carried, was found in the dead man's left overcoat pocket. It was fully loaded, its safety catch set. The secretary declared that the old man had asked him for the weapon just before they left the house, that he himself might guard his precious briefcase.

Burns said his presence on the bus was a coincidence. He had left his parkside hotel to go to town for the conference with Jarrett.

Jarrett's chauffeur, dispatched to a downtown bank with a letter from Jarrett, said that he had driven about a quarter mile through the park when two men, identified as Fleming and Sills, stopped him, looked into the car, then walked away. He placed the time of this encounter at approximately 9:50. The girl on the bus roof, a New York school teacher who had been on a week's visit to her widowed mother in Pittsville, the first in five years, and was on her way to the railroad depot and the metropolis, identified these two as the men greeted by Grimes on the park path.

The police verified this girl's estimate of the snowballing youths as "rowdies." They were members of a notorious petty pilfering neighborhood gang, whose bailiwick was far from the park. These boys, five of the eight of whom had reform school records, declared they were "out for a walk."

At the inquest Mrs. Jarrett testified that her husband, though left-handed, was greatly troubled by a stiffening of the fingers of that hand, of which he seemed free only on the warmest of summer days.

In the group and diagrams are every clew necessary for the correct solution of this mysterious crime. In answering the questions take only for granted those actions indicated by clews or by normal or usual courses of conduct established beyond a reasonable doubt. When details of a course of action are omitted you must assume that nothing in that action contributes to the mystery. For instance, when the girl descends to stop the bus, no clew indicating that she then disposed of the briefcase, you must assume that she did not at that time do so.

1—When was Jarrett last seen alive?
2—When was he killed?
3—Where?
4—How?
5—By whom?

The answer to these questions and the solution of the mystery will be found below:

:-: :-: THE SOLUTION :-: :-:

FOLLOWING are the answers to the questions asked above, containing the solution to the mystery, "Murder Rides the Bus."

1—When he walked through the lower deck of the bus, by any of the passengers who may have noticed him. The girl on the upper deck never heard him utter a syllable, never saw him walk a step.

2—Between the time when he entered the vestibule at the rear of the coach and appeared, supported by Grimes, on the upper deck. No pitched snowball could have inflicted mortal injury through his hat band and heavy hat, even if loaded with a slug. No person had an opportunity to kill him while on the bus top, because of the girl's presence.

3—In the rear vestibule at the bottom of the upper deck staircase.

4—By the blow from the butt of the heavy gun. His stick might have served the purpose, if heavy enough, but there was no room in the vestibule for the assailant to achieve a strong enough swing.

5—By Grimes, the only person present with him in the vestibule.

The clews which make this conclusion inescapable are:

1—Jarrett was a garrulous man, Grimes taciturn, yet from the moment the girl first saw them, until Burns appeared, Grimes was unceasingly talkative, Jarrett uttered not a word. The careening of the bus caused the nodding of his head, which the girl took for indications of assent.

2—Would the feeble Jarrett, burdened by briefcase and stick, be likely to ask for Grimes' gun?

3—Grimes' suggestion as to the manner in which the briefcase was lost is impossible, and no one knew it better than Grimes. The dead Jarrett had the pouch in his lap, as the picture shows.

4—The most damning evidence against Grimes is that he is the only human being who possibly could have committed the murder.

From the waylaying of the chauffeur by Sills and Fleming we may assume that there was a plot, at least to steal the old man's briefcase, which presumably contained damaging evidence. From the fact that Grimes hailed these two at a time when he was least likely to want any but a confederate to recognize him, we gather that he was the "man higher up." Jarrett's change of plan for the trip down town gave Grimes no opportunity to call off the two. And he unquestionably dropped the briefcase over the back of the bus, knowing that these two would pick it up and dispose of it.

As Grimes joined Jarrett in the enclosed vestibule he slugged the old man with the butt of his gun, then "planted" the weapon in his victim's pocket.

It was a lifeless body Grimes carried up the stairs.

When Burns unexpectedly put in his appearance, Grimes realized he had to act quickly. Grimes' action at this moment alone is sufficient to absolve Burns from complicity in any plot against the old man.

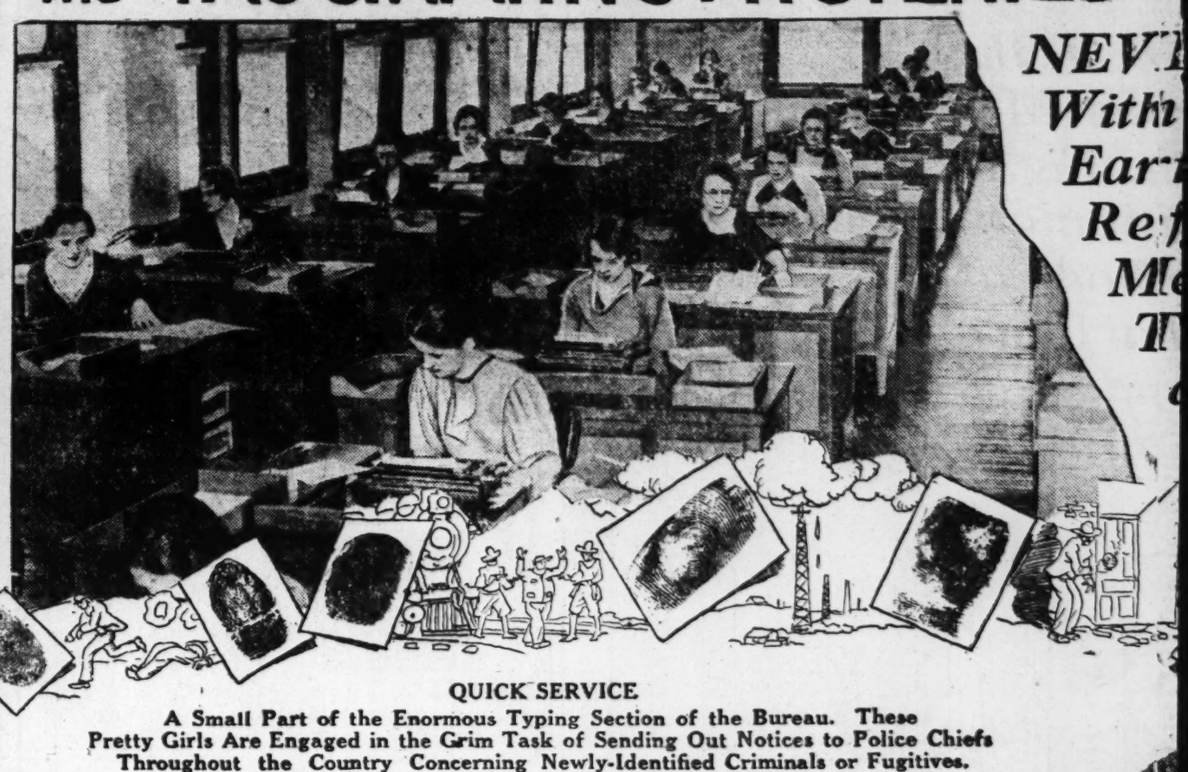

A snowball, thrown by one of the "rowdies," probably struck Jarrett's hat, accounting for the puddle on the floor.

The girl, of course, had nothing to do with the murder.

QUICK SERVICE

A Small Part of the Enormous Typing Section of the Bureau. These Pretty Girls Are Engaged in the Grim Task of Sending Out Notices to Police Chiefs Throughout the Country Concerning Newly-Identified Criminals or Fugitives.

IN THE BELIEF that information concerning the strength and efficiency of the Federal Government in dealing with the criminal elements will serve to stimulate a proper public interest, Mr. James R. McCarthy, special writer for this newspaper, has been acquainted with the work and organization of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation and its efforts to cooperate with police officials of the country.—J. EDGAR HOOVER, director, U. S. Bureau of Investigation.

FROM time to time the criticism is advanced by criminologists that the United States, unlike the countries of Europe and elsewhere, has no national police system. While this is true in a literal sense, the fact is that during the past decade the government has been perfecting one of the most effective, nation-wide crime detecting agencies in the world.

It is known as the U. S. Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. While this bureau, with its twenty-two district offices scattered throughout the country, is chiefly concerned with tracking down violators of Federal crimes, its real scope has a fuller significance.

Through its Division of Identification, its regular "fugitive" bulletins, its crime statistical charts and its scientific laboratory, it is providing a medium through which the police departments of the entire nation are able to present a united front in their unrelenting war against crime. Equipped with the largest fingerprint collection in the world and a ramified system of checking and cross-checking on every known criminal, it is, in effect, a "clearing house" for all law-enforcing agencies.

The author of this series of articles was given the special privilege by Director Hoover of exploring the whole machinery of the organization. He was the first newspaperman to be escorted through every departmental phase of the bureau. Private files were opened to him and secret documents, never before seen by persons other than law-enforcement officials, were placed at his disposal.

The story he tells provides a close-up view of an organization that is fighting lawlessness with science, as illustrated in many thrilling and dramatic cases. Today's article particularly focuses attention upon the remarkable Division of Identification and how the Bureau's national "check-up" system trapped the notorious criminal, Martin Durkin, and others.

THE long, low green roadster, with a man and a girl in the seat, sped through a monotonous expanse of sand, mesquite and sagebrush. The girl, her hair streaming carelessly in the desert breeze, suddenly leaned forward and stared at the speedometer.

"Good heavens!" she exclaimed. "We're making all of seventy—and on this kind of a road, too!"

Without turning his head, his eyes fixed upon the road that slid dizzily under and past him, the handsome young man spoke jerkily out of the side of his mouth:

"Yeah, and it can make ninety. This is one baby the bulls can't catch up with."

The confident, boastful young man was Martin James Durkin, one of the most notorious criminals in the land—wanted for murder, as well as for the theft of scores of expensive automobiles. Time after time he had outwitted police officials in all parts of the country. Just as they were about to close in on him in San Diego, California, he and his fair companion escaped in the green roadster and began a desperate rush across the continent.

But what Durkin did not know, as his car roared perilously through the Arizona desert, was that at that very moment the all-powerful, nation-wide machinery of the United States Bureau of Investigation had gone into action in a determined effort to trap him.

The manner in which Durkin's capture was effected is perhaps one of the most striking and dramatic examples of how the Bureau operates in an emergency. But to appreciate it fully, let me take you behind the scenes in Washington and observe its precise and efficient system of crime detection.

The Bureau of Investigation—which touches the life of the average person more than any other branch of the Secret Service—has two distinct functions. One is to investigate violations of Federal laws NOT including prohibition, smuggling, narcotics or counterfeiting. The other, and more significant one, is to co-ordinate the law-enforcement agencies of the country through a clearing house of identification data.

LET'S ignore the bureau's functions with regard to Federal laws, for the moment, and consider it as a clearing house for every police department in the country. Until July, 1924, there was no organized method in the United States of exchanging fingerprints between police departments. A police chief, seeking to arrest a fugitive, would have to send separate copies of fingerprints to every city in the United States where he THOUGHT the criminal might be. Many a police chief had the discouraging experience of learning, too late, that he had not circularized a print to the right city.

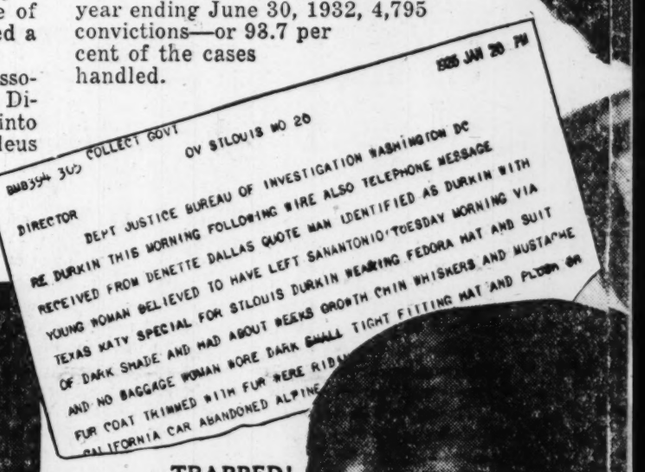

Through the efforts of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the Identification Division of the Bureau of Investigation came into existence on July 1, 1924. It possessed a nucleus of 810,188 fingerprint records, taken from Federal prisons. Today it has more than three and a half million such records. In addition, the bureau organized its system of sending out "fugitive" bulletins to all the police of the country. A scientific laboratory was established to study ballistics, handwriting, typewriting, photography and other phases of scientific investigation. Finally, the bureau placed at the disposal of the police of the country its widely scattered field offices directed by highly trained men.

These men, both in the field and in Washington, pretend to no special omniscience as regards crime detection. They do not talk scientific theories. They are concerned only with positive factors, the tools of their trade, such as:

FINGERPRINTS, of which there are no two exactly alike in the whole world; the ultra-violet ray, which makes visible "invisible" writing, shows up counterfeit bills and hidden spots on cloth; the helixometer, an optical instrument through which lands, grooves and other markings on the interior of gun barrels may be examined and accurately measured; the binocular microscope, for analyzing handwriting, typewriting, etc.; the comparison microscope, which can identify bullets from a suspect's gun.

But most important of all is the Fingerprint Division. Fingerprinting, in the United States at least, began to be developed systematically only in recent years—and then under the inspiration of the Bureau of Investigation. The old Bertillon system of measurements and photographs was chiefly adhered to, although its deficiency soon became apparent. For it is an established fact that the physical appearance, particularly the facial characteristics, of any individual changes over a period of years.

Fingerprinting, on the other hand, provides the medium of positive identification. There are criminologists who question its efficacy in a court of law, but the Bureau of Investigation has found no trouble with it. Fingerprinting enabled the Bureau to secure, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, 4,795 convictions—or 93.7 per cent of the cases handled.

During a recent month it identified, through fingerprints alone, 355 fugitives.

Only a few weeks ago the efficacy of fingerprints was demonstrated unexpectedly in connection with the case of Irene Schroeder, who was electrocuted for the murder, three years ago, of a Pennsylvania police officer. Her brother, Thomas Crawford, believed to have aided her in the crime, escaped. Irene swore, from the day of her arrest until her execution, that her brother was dead.

RECENTLY, however, two men were killed in a battle with Missouri police. Fingerprints of the dead men were forwarded to the Bureau of Investigation's fingerprint division. One was identified positively as Thomas Crawford!

It was by fingerprints as well as good sleuthing that Detroit police, working with the Bureau's special agents, trapped Louis Fleish, whose racket was to hijack trucks loaded with valuable goods. A single fingerprint found on a car led to the arrest and conviction of a notorious gang of bank robbers and murderers headed by J. Fleagle, of Colorado. The fingerprints of two vagrants picked up in St. Paul, Minnesota, led to their identification as the murderers of a Federal prohibition agent, killed two years before while raiding a brewery in Elizabeth, N. J.

prints? First, it was discovered that systems of parallel ridges sweep in bold curves across the palmar surface of the hand. Wherever the boundaries of two systems of such ridges diverge, the interspace is filled up by an independent, compact little system. This system is curved and whorled, resembling somewhat an eddy between two currents. Such an interspace, with a compact systems of its own, is found in the "bulb" of each finger or toe.

The patterns which are made by the ridges on this "bulb"—or tip—afford the means of identification. For it is from them that police take the prints which serve to fix human personality and give to every human being an individuality differentiating him or her from all others. According to the system in use in the United States, all fingerprint impressions are divided into these types of patterns: Loops, Twinned Loops, Central Pocket Loops, Lateral Pocket Loops, Arches, Tented Arches, Whorls and Accidentals.

By utilizing these patterns, together with the ridges intervening and surrounding two fixed points on the finger tip—known as the "core" and the "delta"—a classification for the ten fingers is developed.

THIS classification permits the filing of fingerprint records in sequence, even without reference to the name or description of the individual. It enables the fingerprint expert, in a Bureau containing millions of prints, to establish an identification in less than five minutes.

Thus, when a fingerprint is received at the Bureau of Investigation it speedily goes to the Technical Section, where it is classified according to the fingerprinting system outlined above. Then it is "searched"—that is, an expert seeks to find out if he has on file any print exactly like the one just received.

If an identification is established, each name and alias of the individual is indexed and added to the more than 4,300,000 index cards. Then the police chief who sent in the fingerprint is immediately notified of the identification. Meanwhile copies of the fingerprint with identification are sent to more than 5,300 law-enforcement agencies in this country and abroad.

Approximately 2,000 sets of prints are received each day and 45 per cent of these are found to belong to individuals with previous criminal records.

While all this is going on in Washington, the twenty-two field offices of the Bureau of Investigation are cooperating with police in following up the crime in which the person with the fingerprint under discussion may have had a part. If it appears from the Technical Section's report that the person identified is a fugitive, the whole nationwide machinery of the bureau moves into concerted action.

LET us see, for example, how it worked in the case of boastful, confident Martin Durkin. We left him with a girl, early in this article, driving at terrific speed through the Arizona desert. Behind that ride was a career as black as any that has stained the police blotters of the nation.

Durkin had a long record as a desperate criminal who would shoot to kill at the slightest provocation. When he first came to the attention of the United States Government, he already had a record of having shot and wounded three policemen in Chicago and a fourth in San Francisco.

His special racket was the stealing and interState transportation of high-powered automobiles, which he sold after all the serial numbers thereon had been changed. Durkin's system was to present himself as a prospective purchaser at sales agencies handling expensive cars. There he would dicker for the purchase of a high-priced car and would agree to buy the same. He would arrange to have the car serviced and filled with gasoline and oil, ready for delivery the following day, when he promised to pay cash. But that night he would burglarize the garage of the sales agency and drive the car to another state

The Bureau of Investigation had received fingerprints of Durkin from California police and were now keeping their eyes open for him.

Then one day a handsome, well-dressed young man visited a sales agency in a New Mexico town and arranged to buy a car. That same night the young man broke into the agency and drove away. The following morning a salesman, noticing the car had been stolen, notified the police. In a desperate hope of identifying the thief, the police took fingerprints found on the wall which the thief, in an unthinking moment, had leaned against.

The fingerprint was rushed to the Bureau of Investigation in Washington and was identified as belonging to Martin James Durkin. Immediately, the Bureau sent out an alarm throughout the nation that Durkin had left New Mexico and was heading probably North. A day later the Chicago police wired the Bureau that Durkin was known to stop occasionally in a certain garage just south of "The Loop," and was expected there. Washington informed its Chicago office to dispatch a special agent to the garage. All day long, Special Agent Edward B. Shanahan, accompanied by police officers, waited in vain.

THEN, just as the detail of police officers was changing, Durkin drove in with the stolen car. Shanahan attempted to arrest him single-handedly but Durkin pulled an automatic pistol, killed the special agent, and escaped. A few weeks later, information was received that Durkin and a woman, not his wife, would appear at the home of a friend. Police officers attempted to arrest the gunman, but again he bested them in a gun battle, killing one officer, wounding another—and escaping once more.

By this time the Bureau of Investigation had notified auto agencies throughout the United States about Durkin. One day a San Diego, California, agency informed the Los Angeles office of the Bureau that a green car had been stolen under circumstances identical with the system employed by Durkin. Los Angeles got busy with wires and telephones and all roads leading from California were covered by shotgun squads in the hope of stopping Durkin.

A few days later a sheriff in Pecos, Texas, wrote the Bureau's field office at El Paso, stating that a young man and woman in a green car had acted under suspicious circumstances, driving away before he could question them. The El Paso special agent went into action. Special agents from the office were dispatched to comb the country in the remote western section of Texas for Durkin and the green car.

The deserted car was found in a clump of desert mesquite trees near Fort Stockton, Texas. Punctured tires told the story of Durkin's desertion. A hurried check-up brought information from a nearby rancher that he had hauled a smooth-talking stranger, with a woman, to Girvin, Texas, where they had caught a train for San Antonio. The San Antonio Bureau agent was notified and he ascertained that Durkin and the mysterious young woman had secured transportation on the Texas Special, bound for St. Louis, Missouri.

AT ABOUT daylight, on the morning of January 20, 1926, special agents of the Bureau at St. Louis were notified by telephone from the San Antonio agent, that Durkin and his mysterious woman companion were in a certain stateroom in a certain car of the Texas Special. The St. Louis police arranged to stop the train in a town outside of St. Louis. The train was surrounded with police armed and waiting, because Durkin was dangerous.

Then a special agent, accompanied by a detective, knocked on Durkin's stateroom door. The auto thief turned to his fair companion: "It's that damned porter again." He opened the door, but the look of petulance on his face turned to one of horror. Before he could speak, before he could reach for a gun, the police and the Bureau agent pressed him and the woman against the wall.

"I arrest you, Martin Durkin," said the Bureau agent, "for the murder of Special Agent Shanahan."

Durkin was terror-stricken. He had no gun....

"You have the wrong man. My name's Curtis ....How dare you accuse me——"

But there was one thing Martin Durkin had overlooked. As he opened his stateroom door to greet, not the porter but the police, he left on the inner knob an indelible fingerprint of his hand—which no argument, no protest, could change.

DIRECTOR HOOVER swung forward over his broad desk. "Durkin was convicted of murder and sentenced to 35 years in the penitentiary in Joliet," he said. "He also was convicted of violating the National Motor Vehicle Act and given a term totaling an additional 15 years...I suppose that the sentence should have been more severe. But there is, after all, a more trying fate for such a man than death."

The director leaned back and passed a hand through his hair:

"When Durkin gets out, he'll be—let me see—seventy-five years old. That will be in the year 1980. I think then he will not feel much like stealing cars—or airplanes, for that matter."

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

FAIR AND SQUARE.

(Seck Hawkins and his Fair and Square Club have organized a High Order Spy System, because Judge Granbery expects them to keep peace and quiet on the old river bank, where their little clubhouse stands. A bad boy named Stapoulos has moved down here from Watertown. In his houseboat is found a piece of thick paper on which is a sketch of a sun dial.

Hawkins and Shadow search for the secret headquarters of Stapoulos and crew. On Burney's Field they meet Old Gray Harry Duke, who has just been released from prison. He tells them he wants to find an old houseboat that years ago lay on the river bank. Later they spy him in the dugout, playing a guitar and singing about his troubles which he expects will be ended when he finds the "old sun dial." The boys discover the stones on which were printed the hour numbers. Under the six-stone they find a tin box filled with gold bonds. Stapoulos comes up and demands the box. They fight and Hawkins succeeds in flooring the bully. Before the rest of his crew can come up Hawkins and Shadow escape.)

WITH the little japanned box under his arm, Shadow followed close to my heels as I ran from the spot where the old sun dial had been discovered. Instead of cutting across Burney's Field by the shortest route to the river, where our little motor boat waited, I struck out towards the southern end of the field, where the dugout lay.

"Where are you going?" Panted Shadow from behind me. "This is not the way to the boat—"

"We're not going to the boat, Shadow," I answered.

"Oh, I see," he said, quickly, "you don't want to lead Stapoulos to find our boat—"

"I'm not worrying about him just now," I said. "I've got something else on my mind, Shad. We'll stop Stapoulos later—depend upon that. But for the present, let's forget him."

"I'll be glad to forget him—but why are we heading for the dugout?"

"You ought to be able to figure things out, Shadow. But wait! You'll see!"

We arrived at the dugout. The door stood partly open. But the music that we had heard there before was missing. My heart pounded a little—what if I was too late? I hurried down the sunken stair of rough limestone and shoved open the rickety door. It sang a sorry tune upon its hinges, and banged against the wall with the heavy shove I had given it.

"He gone!" I shouted, as I ran through the first little room, and stared into the larger one beyond. "We're too late, Shadow—too late!"

"Oh! you wanted to see Gray Harry!" exclaimed Shadow.

"Who else?" I said. "Of course it was Gray Harry I wanted to see—now he's gone—perhaps he'll not return to this old river bank—maybe he's found out what we know—"

"Wait!" whispered Shadow. "Wait, Hawkins—I don't think he's gone—"

"No, I ain't gone!" came a voice from the wall beside me. I turned quickly. There, looking from behind a moldy curtain that hid the entrance to a tunnel running from the dugout to a farther burrow, was the timid face of poor old Gray Harry. And now all the wrinkles of his old age and hard usage were accentuated by a doubting fear—a wonderment—a questioning look—

"Thank goodness you haven't gone, Harry Duke!" I said, as I leaped forward and took his arm and pulled him into the room. "Come out here, where we can talk to you! For we have something to say to you—"

"I'm afraid!" he protested, in a high, trembling voice.

"Come on out, Harry Duke!" I broke in upon him. "You've got to listen to me. You hear?"

"All right," he said, in a sad voice. "All right, sonny, I guess you got me—"

"You bet I've got you—and maybe you think I'm not glad! Why I was afraid that you had got wind of what I was going to do, and skipped out before I'd find you again—"

"Well, now you've got me," he said, and his poor old pinched face wrinkled up even more, as he looked from me to Shadow, and from Shadow back to me again, before he continued: "Now, what you goin' to do with me?"

"Sit down Harry Duke," I said, and I almost had to make him sit down on the low bench that had been made my Androfski the Silent, when he was helping poor old Harkinson, who first had his headquarters in this old historic dugout. "Now, then, hand me that box, Shadow."

Shadow took from under his arm the old black tin box that we had unearthed on the ravine's edge, under the six-stone of the sun-dial. I took the box and held it out in front of Gray Harry's eyes.

"Here," I said, "ever see this b fore, Harry Duke?"

He looked blankly at the bo: and then slowly shook his head.

"No," he said, slowly, "neve seen it before in my lifetime."

"He's lying!" snapped Shadow.

"No," I said, "I don't think he is, Shadow. Look here, Gray Harry, you never saw this tin black box before?"

"No," he said, his eyes glued on the box.

"I believe you," I said. And he looked up quickly, as though he were surprised to hear me say so. "But you know what's in this box, don't you, Gray Harry?"

"Yes," he said, and now the wrinkles of his face had softened, and he stared me full in the eyes.

"What!" exclaimed Shadow. "You know what's in that box, but you never saw it before?"

"That's so," said Gray Harry, turning his eyes upon Shadow. "I never seen it afore in my lifetime."

"Well, then, what's in it?" demanded Shadow.

"Ten thousand dollars in gold bonds," readily answered Gray Harry, looking into Shadow's face. "That's what's in that there box. It was under the sun dial. I been lookin' fer it, but I ain't a ver' good looker, I reckon. I'm gettin' too old—too old!"

"Would you like to have this tin box, Gray Harry?" I asked. And then came the strangest look of amazement in his eyes that I had ever beheld. "I'm the one who found it, Gray Harry. I offer it to you, without any reward whatsoever. This tin box and what it contains is yours, if you want it?"

"You mean—" he began, "you mean—you would let me have it—even after you found it, and it belongs to you—finders is keepers, you know—I wouldn't—"

"Listen, Gray Harry," I cut in. "I found this under the six-stone of the sun dial—"

"Under the six-stone!" he exclaimed. "How did you know?"

"Never mind! I knew! And I found the six-stone and lifted it out of its circle of stones that marked the hours of the old sun dial. It's yours, if you'll take it. Because I know you were looking for it. I knew you before you went to prison, when I was a very little boy. I was the pal of the Skinny Guy, on whose houseboat you slept those few nights before the police came and took you. And I found this box now, and I want to give it back to you. You'll take it, won't you?"

"Yes," he said slowly, as he took the box from my hands, "and I'm mighty glad to get it. I ain't had much to eat for the last few days—maybe now—"

"Maybe now you'll go back to prison where you belong!" broke in a loud official voice. And the three of us turned to the doorway, down which had silently come a uniform figure of a Lieutenant of Police. It was Phillips! Good old Phillips, who had been the right hand of my good old friend, Detective Jeckerson, back in the days when we had gone through the adventures of the Ghost of Lake Tapaho, and other mysteries which we boys of the Fair and Square Club had helped to solve. "I'm glad I waited outside there, Gray Harry. I wanted to be sure to catch you with the loot in your hands. I knew the only way I'd get back that bunch of stolen bonds would be—"

"You tricked me!" cried Gray Harry, as he turned to me and tried to force the tin box back into my hands. "You knew it all the time. You just wanted me to be caught with this tin box of bonds in my hand—"

"Hold on there!" broke in Lieutenant Phillips. "Hawkins didn't know a thing about this, Gray Harry. In fact, I spied upon Hawkins and his high order spy system until I knew they would lead me right into the solution of this case—"

"You tricked me!" cried Gray Harry, as he turned to me and tried to force the tin box back into my hands.

"I did not think that of you, Phillips!" I cut in, with a bit of scorn. "I like to remember you as you were in the days when Jeckerson led us through adventures of this kind. He always played fair and square—"

"Don't get me wrong, Hawkins," said the officer. "This case has been hanging fire for many years. Ever since the bonds were stolen We knew they were buried somewhere, for we had their serial number and watched for them to turn up. But they didn't. And I want to say right here and now, Seck Hawkins, that Jeckerson would be proud of you, could he see you at this moment. He always said you used your head to figure out mysteries better than any boy he had ever known, and better than most men that worked with him. And in that I think he included me."

"I'm afraid he wouldn't be very proud of me now," I said, as I stared at poor old Gray Harry, the picture of utter despair. "And I don't think you believe I use my head to figure things out, Phillips—"

"Why, Hawkins!" exclaimed the Lieutenant. "You know I do—"

"Well, then, let Gray Harry say something I cut in. "Go ahead, Gray Harry, why were you searching for the bonds—in that little tin box—that lay hidden under the sixth hour-stone of the sunken sun dial?"

"I was searchin' fer 'em," came Gray Harry's voice, "ever since they let me out of prison fer stealin' 'em. I was hungry. That's all gennelmun! That's all I got to say!"

I took Lieutenant Phillips by the sleeve and drew him over to a corner.

"Look here," I said, "I want you to let that old man alone!"

"What? Let him alone?"

"Yes, and let him have that tin box and the bonds—"

"But, Hawkins, they—"

"I know, but won't you trust me? Won't you let me feel sorry for an old man who's spent many years in prison—"

"But, Hawkins, I can't do that!"

"Remember your old chief—Jeckerson the Great! He trusted me, didn't he?"

"Yes—but he's not here now!"

"He taught me all I know, Phillips—"

"All right! I'll let the old duffer go—but I hate to let him get away with the bonds—"

"He goes free, and the bonds go with him, Phillips—"

"It's most unusual, Hawkins—"

"Very, Phillips! Very unusual! In fact, if you could see it my way—"

And Phillips saw it my way, somehow. All of a sudden he broke away from me and went back to Gray Harry.

"Look here, Harry Duke," he said, "you're fingerprinted in every city within 20 miles. I ought to run you in with the goods in your possession. But for once in my life I'm taking a chance, because I believe in a kid. You've got to thank Seck Hawkins for it, if you know what I mean."

Shadow helped Gray Harry into his checkered coat. The poor old man's eyes were bleared with tears that slowly made their way down the many wrinkles about his withered lips. He picked up a tattered old hat and put it upon his head. Then turned and lifted the old tin box, which he tucked inside his coat, under his arm. And hugging that old box, he came over to me and took my hand. He started to say something, but his voice would not obey him. And then turning slowly, he made his way to the sunken stair that led out into freedom—for him it meant freedom and wealth for the rest of his days.

He did not look around once. But there came a feeling of deep pity into my heart as I watched the bent figure, stooped not only with age, but with many sorrows with which none of us were fully acquainted—yes, I felt sorry for poor old Harry Duke, poor old Gray Harry of blemished reputation and a blighted life.

"Well," said Phillips, when he had gone. "I hope you're satisfied."

"Yes, I am," I said. "Unless I'm a poor guesser, and unless Jeckerson was wrong when he said I could figure out things my own way, I am happy. Look at this, Phillips."

I showed him the wallet we had found in the Skinny Guy's houseboat. I showed him the letter that Harry Duke's old wallet contained—from his brother Charley—admitting the theft of the bonds, telling of the sun dial and under which stone he had hidden them—and begging his brother Harry, whom the world knew as Gray Harry, to help him because the police were on his track.

"And Charlie Duke disappeared, Phillips. Gray Harry was arrested the next day after he had received the letter from Charlie. Gray Harry Duke was a wonderful fellow for taking the blame, Phillips. He went to prison rather than tell on his brother. He took disgrace himself rather than it should fall upon his younger brother. That's why I worked so hard on this case, Phillips. And that's why I'm so glad you let him get away with the tin box and the bonds. I'm sure I know what he's going to do. I'll bet you that by tomorrow, we will find that he brought those bonds back to Judge Granbery, from whom his brother stole them. And I'll bet you we will find that Gray Harry refused to take a reward for 'em. And I'll bet you further that we will find out that Judge Granbery gave Gray Harry a job and trusted him as an honest man."

Which we did.

Dear Pen Pals:

It has been a great pleasure to read the many letters that came in this week. One of the most interesting things that I've noticed is the fact that many boys and girls who considered themselves poor letter writers have found it not only easy, but most attractive pastime when once they sat down and started to write. It is not difficult to put your thoughts on paper, when you use plain words and write just the way you would talk.

* * * *

A great number of pen pals tell me about their school life, and I think it is a fine subject to write about. There is always so much fun in school days, and even if we are having a hard time with some of our studies that cause us to worry a bit, we always find something pleasant and something to smile about. So, if you are wondering what to write about this week, think of your school. Then sit down and write that letter. You know I'll like it—heaps!

So get busy—write that letter at once and send it in. Don't be discouraged if you have written before and haven't won. Remember, the fair and square fellow is one who meets defeat with a grin and says: "I'll not be a quitter; I'll keep on till I win." And, believe me, that's the kind that does win.

* * * *

And now let's call our club meeting to order and introduce a lucky pen pal who wins a book this week. She has moved to another country, but has not forgotten our Fair and Square Club:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I have been a member of your club for almost a year, but I have gone away from America. I now live on a little island called Guernsey, off the coast of England and France. It is a very small island, and it does not have snow in winter. I am very homesick for America: I do not like this island as much as dear old America.

I lost my club pin and I am very sorry, because I wanted to show it to all my English friends. Will you please send me another pin, as I am very proud of my membership. Are you still giving books to those who write nice letters? If so, I hope I will win one, for I am a real book-worm.

Yours, fair and square,
JUNE LEPAGE, 12.
The Elms, Breck road.
St. Sampsos, Guernsey, C. I.

And now we must adjourn again for another week, when we will all meet again on this same page. Don't forget to write your letter and send it in. You might be in the lucky pen pals' list next week—who knows? And keep smiling till we meet again.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

"SPRING."

When the buds begin a-swelling,
And we have warm, gentle rains,
When the robins start a nestin',
Then we know 'twill soon be spring.

When the daffodils are peeping,
Yellow heads all in a row,
And the modest little violet
Lifts its head above the snow.

When the mocking birds are singing,
And the bob-white calls again,
Then the robins start a nestin',
And we know 'twill soon be spring.

Yours, fair and square,
MARTHA FRANK FRAZIER.

Dear Seck:

I haven't written you in a long time, but I guess you know the reason—school. There are lots of girls and boys in this neighborhood, so I decided that I would organize a club. We are going to name it "The Fair and Square Club." Don't you like that name? I do. We are going to try and be "fair and square." If we get the Seckatary Hawkins book I am going to read it to them and I am sure it will teach us some good lesson.

Yours, fair and square,
THE CLUB.
Written by the president, Myrajean Dan

Dear Seck:

I'm very anxious to join the club,
And boost the Hawkins stories.
It would take a year to tell
About its interest and glories.

I like to write long letters,
Love to read the same,
So come on, fellows,
Sit in on this game.

I guess you'd like to know my hobbies
They are reading and writing, too.
So, I'm waiting for a letter
From everyone of you!

My age is 12, my eyes are brown,
Hair light brown; I'm full of fun.
Like to swap snapshots,
So write, every one.

Yours, fair and square,
ANNA LOIS COOPER.
Route 1, Box 8, Braselton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am 10 years old and in the 5th grade. I go to the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, which is located in the mountains in northeast Georgia. It is a wonderful school. We live about 2 miles from the school. I enjoy living up here very much, because the scenery is beautiful, and, too, I have so many little girl friends; and, too, life isn't worth living if you haven't any friends. I like to sing and play uku.

I have for pets two solid black cats.

I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday.

I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and I try to live up to it.

Yours, fair and square,
HARRIET SUELINDA BURGESS.
Terrora Camp, Tallulah Falls, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am not a member of your club, but am going to join soon. I am 11 years old. I live on the farm. We have a mule. He is 22 years old and when he rests up a few days he sure can kick with both feet.

I like your motto, "Fair and Square."

Yours, fair and square,
JOHN WESLEY DAVIS.
Box 19, Route 1, McFarlan, N. C.

Dear Seck:

Here is a letter from a long lost member. Four years ago I joined your club. Since then I have had many adventures and I have tried to play "fair and square." Doesn't Secretary Hawkins find it hard sometimes to do "fair and square!" I do. But I have almost formed the habit and it's not hard now.

Yours, fair and square,
SARAH WHITESIDE.
265 Barber St., Athens, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Here I am for the first time, but not the last.

I am in the 6th grade and study hard. I made a bad mark in English, of course, but I like history.

I read your writings every day in the daily paper and also on Sunday. I like them very much. I like boys' games, like Jo. I try to follow your rules.

Yours, fair and square,
KATHRYN BLAKE.
Concord, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Our club is getting along all right, except for about 3 boys and they are getting along very well now. The only trouble with them is they just can't keep quiet during the meetings.

Yours, fair and square,
EWART SHULER JR.,
Box 115, Elloree S. C.

Dear Seck:

I go to school at Tallulah Falls Industrial school. I am in the sixth grade. I have brown hair and blue eyes.

I enejoy reading the paper, and hope you won't have any more trouble with the Yellow Y.

VIVIAN BURGESS.
Tallulah Falls, Ga.

Dear Seck:

March is here at last with its winds. But even if it is a windy month, it gets many things ready for spring.

I hope some of the pen pals will write me. I will answer every letter I receive.

Yours, fair and square,
SARA FRANCES SMITH.
Box 181, Oglethorpe, Ga.

Dear Seck:

February 10 the sixth grade had a Georgia program. Lillian Daphne and I made up a play pertaining to early Georgia and enjoyed it. Other girls and boys did parts on the program, and we sang the Georgia state song.

Some time I wish I could be down there with you.

Your pen pal,
HARRIET JONES.
Lafayette, Ga.

Today's Prize.

March 12, 1933.

Dear Seck:

I like your motto, "Fair and Square." We have a club called "Swamp Fox." We call it that because it is in a swamp, and there is a fox in it. We have 12 members. We are now on a mystery about a ghost in a small cave with a green lantern in it. We went over to it yesterday and went in it. We found a pool of water, a scarecrow with a white body and black head. The cave was dimly lighted, so the lantern looked like eyes.

There is a hill close to the club. It is called Dead Man's Hill, because a man fell off of it and killed himself. Our pasture is called Indian graveyard, because it is full of Indian graves.

Yours truly,
JAMES ROBERT HOLLORAN,
Dalton, Ga.

A TALK ON DAHLIAS :-: :-: :-: By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN

THE dahlia holds the distinction of having a greater popularity than any other bulbous plant. This, at least, seems to be true here in Atlanta. From early June until frost in late fall, beautiful dahlias may be found in almost every garden in Atlanta. This is true in spite of the fact that it is not a beautiful garden plant, having gained its popularity and held this same popularity because of its fitness as a cut flower. That statement is not entirely true for under certain conditions the dahlia is a very pretty garden flower, especially is this latter statement true in regard to the pompon dahlias, which have become so popular within the last year or two.

The taller sorts, that is the usual dahlia grown, should be planted as a background, or in the cutting flower garden. There probably is not any other flower in which you may obtain the range of colors or the number of different types of flowers as are obtained in the dahlia family.

There are a number of distinct types of dahlias. The two most popular types are the cactus and decorative types. The finest decorative dahlia is Jersey's beauty. This is a typical decorative type, very double, rather flat, with the petals turned back. The hybrid cactus and the decorative may be illustrated by the varieties, George Walters and Attraction. This hybrid cactus type is somewhat similar to the variety illustrated, except that the petals are longer, more narrow and more curled.

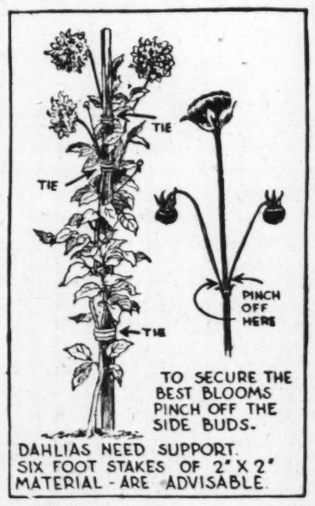

We frankly admit that to us the classification of dahlias is somewhat hazy, and our experience with even the professional dahlia raisers is that the types are somewhat hazy to them as well. However, for the average amateur's purpose and understanding, the three or four types mentioned above will be sufficient for the ground work at least.

The flowers on dahlia plants will grow to enormous size if the plant is disbudded, but if allowed to grow naturally, and when well fertilized, will produce flowers about four to six inches in diameter. In the latter case, it is best to disbud all of the lateral branches, leaving only the terminal bud on each stem. By following this procedure there will usually remain about 12 or 15 branches, all of which may be counted on for one gorgeous blossom.

There is a standard by which all dahlias are compared. This variety has been considered the finest variety for a number of years and it seems that for some time in the future it will be able to hold this position of importance. This variety is Jersey's Beauty. Jersey's Beauty is the finest example of the decorative type of dahlia. As the new decorative dahlias are introduced, they strive to rival this variety and almost every year there is some one variety that apparently will be able to do this. After a year or two this new variety has to accept a second place to the grand old Jersey.

This deserved popularity has come from a number of different reasons. The first reason is its color, a beautiful pink, and pink is one of the favored colors by most of the gardeners. It continually flowers in almost perfect shape. The flowers are very large and oftentimes reach a full 12 inches when properly disbudded. The plant itself is a strong grower, as a rule, reaching more than six feet in height.

This is such a wonderful variety that it is not a bad rule to follow to plant at least three of these plants for each dozen dahlias in your garden.

There is a companion dahlia of a different color, but similar in ease of growth and popularity to Jersey's Beauty that should be found in every garden—Mrs. I. de Ver Warner. This is a very beautiful lavender flower, although it is often called mauve pink, the decorative type. The stems are usually stiff and the flower is held perfectly erect. A great many gardeners are hunting for blue shades and this is a golden opportunity for them, or it may be called a "blue" opportunity.

Speaking of cut flowers, if a few directions are followed, the flowers will last much longer after they have been cut, in the following manner:

The flowers are best cut either early in the morning or late in the afternoon, and at that same time the foliage to be removed should be cut. If there is a difference in morning and evening cutting, the morning cutting is the better, the flowers being a little fresher in the morning. A large, deep vase or bucket of water should have been provided and the stems placed in this cool water up to the base of the flower. It is best, if possible, to remove the vase and place it in a very cool place for an hour or so.

Some other authorities prefer that the stems be first placed in hot water and then allowed to cool in tepid water and much can be said for this method. A couple of inches of the stems may be removed each day and the addition of an aspirin tablet will prolong the life of cut flowers. As a rule dahlias are most attractive when a vase is filled with only one or at the most two colors. For this reason most flower lovers plant several bulbs or tubers of each variety.

There are a number of ways in which dahlias may be procured. The three methods are seeds, tubers and plants.

Some very interesting results may be obtained from the planting of seeds. This is the method by which new varieties are procured. These seeds will seldom flower the first year after planting, as the most of the strength is used in developing a tuber. This is not entirely true, as the new Coltness hybrids will bloom the first year from seeds. These are sometimes called Mignon dahlias and are very pretty. The bushes attain a height of some 18 inches and will flower the entire summer long, in fact, right up until frost. They will return from tubers the following years. This novelty has been quite popular recently in Europe, and is growing in popularity here.

The favorite method of planting dahlias is from tubers. By this method you are assured of a true to name variety that will bloom the first year planted. These should be planted fairly deep. About four inches is usually about right, and the wood should be placed in the natural position. The only thing that should be guarded against is that the tuber contain at least one eye. In the case of dahlias it is not important that there be more than one eye, as a matter of fact, a great many dahlia growers insist that it is better if only one eye is present. If there is only one eye present, it means that there will be only one shoot, which is usually best. In fact, if there are more than two shoots growing from one tuber, they should be removed with a sharp knife, cutting the shoot well underneath the ground.

Another advantage found in planting from tubers is the opportunity for obtaining more plants than one. This may be done by obtaining cuttings from the bulb as fast as they appear and rooting these in sand. These slips should have one or two leaves at the top and particular care must be taken of them on starting the rooting process. The usual length of the cutting is about three inches for best results. The best material to start them in is sand, which must be kept damp. Remember that there is no food stored up in this stock to amount to anything, and this rooting process must be made as rapid as possible. Keep the sand box in a warm place, making certain that the sand is not allowed to dry out. As soon as the small roots are started, transplant them to small clay pots, keeping them in a shady place all of the time. After they have reached a height of some 8 or 10 inches, and the weather is propitious, they should be planted out of doors. Plants started in this manner will bear flowers during their first summer.

There is so much that can and should be said about dahlias that we will be talking about them from time to time for the next 60 days. There are literally hundreds of varieties and numbers of these have a great deal of merit and many of these will be mentioned and described. If you have had some interesting experience with dahlias we will be glad to pass it on through the medium of this page. If you have had trouble with your dahlias in the past, we will be glad to try and help you. Their cultivation, fertilization, planting and choice of varieties are all filled with a great deal of interest.

WHAT TO DO IN MARCH.

MULCHING—This is the last chance for giving the rose and perennial bed a thorough mulching with peat moss and sheep manure. This mulch will hold moisture in the beds throughout the spring and summer, and is of vital importance. A mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth is best.

FERTILIZING—As plants begin to grow rapidly with the spring weather, fertilize them often with a complete, well-balanced plant food. A fairly heavy application of bone meal and sheep manure should be broadcast over the lawn, as well as around the shrubbery, perennials and roses.

PRUNING—March is the best month for pruning all kinds of bush roses. Err on the heavy side of pruning rather than on the light side. Most varieties of roses can be pruned from 8 to 12 inches from the ground. They should be given a thorough spraying with Massey dust directly after this pruning.

Culbertson on Contract

FORCING WITH SHORT SUITS.

By ELY CULBERTSON,

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

I HAVE received many letters recently from players who fail to understand one of the new features of the Culbertson System. Some of these letters go so far as to state that this new addition is pernicious and will cause great trouble and confusion among the average players. Since I heartily disagree with all this, I have decided to discuss the subject through these columns and explain just why the principle is a logical addition to the System. I refer to the use of a Forcing bid on a three-card suit.

In the first place, such a course is seldom necessary. The bid is only used to cover a specific situation, and consequently, the opportunity for its use will not occur once in one thousand deals. When used, it is so valuable that no other bid can be substituted for it without sacrificing one and possibly two important inferences. A brief study of the mechanism of this bid will prove this.

The bid must always be made in a lower ranking suit and is only used when very strong support is held for partner's bid suit. Furthermore, it is only used on hands which are too strong to raise immediately to game—in other words, it is a substitute for an immediate Raise to one more than a game contract. Take the following hand:

Spades	K Q x
Hearts	K x x x x
Diamonds	A x x
Clubs	A K

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. Obviously the hand is too strong to bid only four hearts. If partner holds an absolute minimum, consisting of the Ace-Queen of hearts and the Ace of spades, a Slam will probably be made anyway. On the other hand, an immediate bid of five hearts shuts out any further information which partner may be able to give and automatically prevents the hand from ever reaching seven. There is only one alternative—the Forcing Takeout in the non-biddable suit, to find out what partner can say. Regardless of what he bids, the next bid on the above hand should be four notrumps, demanding a five notrump response if partner has two Aces. Seven hearts may not be reached through this method of bidding, but if the hand actually contains a Grand Slam it stands the best chance of reaching it.

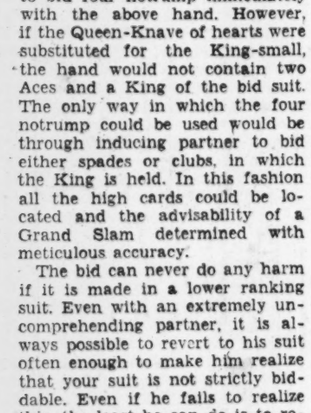

Of course, it would be possible to bid four notrump immediately with the above hand. However, if the Queen-Knave of hearts were substituted for the King-small, the hand would not contain two Aces and a King of the bid suit. The only way in which the four notrump could be used would be through inducing partner to bid either spades or clubs, in which the King is held. In this fashion all the high cards could be located and the advisability of a Grand Slam determined with meticulous accuracy.

The bid can never do any harm if it is made in a lower ranking suit. Even with an extremely uncomprehending partner, it is always possible to revert to his suit often enough to make him realize that your suit is not strictly biddable. Even if he fails to realize this, the least he can do is to refrain from bidding a Grand Slam over your Small Slam bid in his suit. This is why the bid is only possible in a lower ranking suit. In a higher ranking suit the danger of running into a wooden partner would be entirely too great.

* * * *

Mr. V. V. Graves, of Denver, sends in a hand which I consider one of the most unusual I have seen in years of Bridge-playing and analysis. The play involved is exceedingly simple at first glance, and in fact, is so simple that very few players would make it. In the main it consists of deliberately refusing to cash a trick in a certain suit until the Dummy has become completely void of that suit. Strangely enough, the hand cannot be made through any other method of play, and also strangely enough, the bidding gives the perfect clue to the correct play.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4◇	4♠	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

The Opening lead was the deuce of clubs by West. This Declarer won in Dummy with the Ace and immediately led the diamond 9. East played the Knave and South ducked. This was unquestionably the proper play, as the Ace would certainly have been ruffed by West, who had not only doubled four spades, but had also failed to open his partner's suit. East's best return was a club, which was won in Dummy with the King. West forcing with his Queen. The diamond Ten was now led, the Queen played by East, and South ducked a second time. From this point Declarer's road to his contract was quite easy, as the 9 of spades in Dummy was too big a card for West's holding to get around. East could never lead trumps and consequently was forced to lead some suit which enabled Declarer to start the crossruff. Allowing West to obtain the lead after the Opening would have been a losing play, as a lead of trumps would have disrupted the entire hand.

Of course, without the Opening bid of four diamonds, the play would have been much more difficult to read, and it is quite likely that almost all players would go wrong on it. However, the fact remains that East actually bid four diamonds at Mr. Graves's table, and sitting South, he was able to take every advantage of the inferences at his command. I have never seen a hand exactly like this, and recommend it to all for study.

In a recent team-of-four board-a-match tournament a hand was played in which a match was won in a most extraordinary fashion. The team which played North-South at Table 1 felt that it had scored a certain victory on this hand, only to find at the end that it had lost it by 290 points.

North, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.
East-West not vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	South
3NT	4NT
6NT	Pass

Actually, if played from the South seat, a club Opening will assure the contract; if played from the North seat, a club Opening will defeat it. East decided on the Opening of the 9 of hearts. This was won in Dummy with the Queen, a spade led and finessed, and a low diamond led over to the Ace. Declarer then played for his only chance, which was to lead all his spades and hearts and hope that the hand which held the Queen of diamonds also held the King of clubs. This actually happened, and at the 12th trick West was forced to lead into Dummy's Queen of clubs. The hand had been played, but unquestionably this contract should not have been reached, and both players felt that the winning of this particular board was assured.

In the other room, however, rather extraordinary things took place. The Opening bid of one heart was overcalled by East with one notrump. South, of course, doubled, West and North passed, and East for some reason best known to himself failed to redouble. The Opening lead was a low diamond, which was won by North with the Knave. To go up with the Queen in Dummy so early was a little too hard a play to make, and Declarer cannot be criticized for the loss of this trick. North and South now started to take their winning cards, and finally came to a point, 2 tricks from the end, where South was in the lead and so far the Declarer had failed to win a trick. A low club was led, Declarer went up with the King, and the Ace of clubs took the trick. The last trick was won by the Queen. Result: Down 1750. Strangely enough, if East had been able to hold his set to only 6, he would have lost only 1350 points and would have won the match, as his partners scored 1460 on the hand. It was perhaps expecting too much of the clubs right. After losing the first 11 tricks anybody has a right to become demoralized, however.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE.

You hold:

Spades	A 10 7 6
Hearts	J
Diamonds	A Q 9 4 3
Clubs	K Q 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	2◇	2♡

You are South, not vulnerable. What do you bid?

Answer: Two spades. Your hand obviously contains enough strength for a Rebid. However, five diamonds does not look very inviting, and either three notrump or four spades may be the best declaration. The two spade bid practically forces your partner to bid again, and he will bid three notrump if he has the hearts doubly stopped or even singly stopped; four spades if his hand contains four spades; and four diamonds if he can make neither of the other responses.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Each Sunday I am giving a problem in bidding. This is Number 9 of the series. The answer to today's problem will be given next Sunday.

You hold:

Spades	A 10 4
Hearts	J 3
Diamonds	K J 4
Clubs	K J 8 7 5

You are not vulnerable. Your partner deals and bids one notrump. Second Hand passes. What do you bid?

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

WHAT I'M GIVING UP IN LENT :-: :-: By IRVIN S. COBB

WHENEVER Lent comes I give up something. Take year before last. That was the year I gave up Bishop Cannon. It was a wrench but I did it—just shut my eyes and gritted my teeth and gave up the bishop. We no longer had anything much in common except that both of us agreed the United States senate didn't have any spine to speak of and [illegible] it. To be sure, neither of us got toast melba, but that is too small a matter to make any real bond.

Last year I gave up Jimmy Walker, thereby anticipating by months the hour when he would give us up. I said to myself, "Lent has come and we should all deny ourselves something. And besides, Jimmy, if I don't love you in December as I did in May—and I have a feeling that I shan't—we might as well get it over with right now. Select the nearest exit, Jimmy, and in case of Seabury, walk, not run, toward that exit. Oh, yes, and here's another little thought in parting which I copied off a sign on the doorjamb of a hotel: "Look around you and see whether you've left anything."

I think quite a number of others must have given up Jimmy about the same time I did, because the figures show fewer babies were named for him in 1932 than in preceding years. Toward Christmas the number of babies named for him fell off to almost nothing at all.

This year for Lent, I'm taking advantage of the special bargain sales and giving up quite a number of things, beginning with George Bernard Shaw and Gandhi. There was only one person in the world who by his acts and utterances could convince me that George Bernard Shaw wasn't the smartest man in the world—and that person was George Bernard Shaw, and he has done it and, what's more, keeps right on doing it. For months I struggled to hold fast to my tottering idol. I said to myself: "This is heresy. I must hide my growing doubts. I must dissemble." I kept this up until people met me on the street and didn't know me—that's how completely I was dissembled. (Some parts are still missing.) The blow which finally severed us fell when he and Lady Astor emerged from Russia and he began talking for publication and she kept right on. I think here would be as good a place as any to correct a popular misapprehension in regard to Lady Astor. She doesn't talk all the time—only in her waking hours.

Anyhow, I read that emerging interview of Mr. Shaw's and I knew that all was over between us and my chief regret is that he didn't lose his voice when he lost his wisdom and his judgment. If only he and I could have gone right on worshipping him. Then for me he still would be on a pedestal instead of in the ashcan along with most of the economists and practically all the investment brokers and every doggoned one of the international bankers.

As for Gandhi the pique is based more or less on personal grounds. A few weeks ago I was down in Texas on a ranch and I blundered into a branding pen and a large lady beef-critter deliberately picked me out and butted me over when I wasn't looking and walked to and fro on me rather extensively so that I was all tracked-up for days. After I was rescued and got my breath back I said very bitterly: "And so this Gandhi is the one who thinks a cow is a sacred animal. Well, Gandhi, so far as I'm concerned that lets you out, too. I never did like the idea of a man with legs like yours not wearing pants, anyhow. Who do you think you are—Johnny Weismuller?"

So you see I am going into the habit of giving up things rather thoroughly. I'm making a partial list here of what all I'm giving up this Lent. As a matter of fact, it's being Lent is really only an excuse because with practically all of the items enumerated I'm giving them up, not for a season merely, but forever and ever.

I'm giving up all females past 35 years of age who wear those funny little grape-skin hats away down over one eye.

I'm giving up hoping that we can get anywhere by sending delegates to those international conferences that are constantly being called together here and there in Europe to do away with war or adjust overdue reparations and back payments or whatsoever. To observe the spectacle of a large performing troupe of ponderous pachydermic diplomats sitting at Geneva or somewhere devising ways and means to bring about universal disarmament and world-peace at a moment when the Orient is aflame with bloodshed and slaughter and hostile governments are telling the League of Nations to go take a long running jump, smacks to me of closing up the fire department when the orphan asylum next door is burning down. Debt conferences, however, are another matter. Only I'd say the next debt conference should be held over here rather than over there and this time we should ask the boys to bring their check books with them.

I'm giving up purees—puree of spinach, puree of carrots, puree of chestnuts (which includes certain comedy programs on the radio) puree of parsnips, in fact, puree of anything. I make only one exception. I could enjoy seeing a puree of those underwriting financiers who sold us all those foreign bonds back in 1928 and 1929, and I'd especially favor the idea if the pureeing process took place under a steam roller.

I'm giving up all expatriated Americans who go around England and the continent heartily deploring everything that is American and saying America is no fit place for civilized beings to live, and so forth and so on. And with this lot I'm also giving up these stay-at-home Americans who plantively wonder why it is they do not like us abroad. What I say is, why should they like us? No lusty up-and-coming country ever does honestly like any lusty rival nation, nor for its own sake, should it try to like that other nation or expect that other nation to like it. Respect is one thing, loving is another. And while selfishness in an individual may be a deplorable trait, selfishness in a nation I claim is an admirable thing for the good of that nation in its dealings with the rest of creation.

I'm giving up interpretive dancing — particularly the Russian brand of the same. History gives Catherine the Great the reputation of being a reasonably hard-boiled lady but when people bring her name up in the conversation and start knocking, I say: "Hold on, there's some good in all of us, if only you'll look for it. Catharine may have done this and that, but she lived in Russia and yet there's no record that she ever took up interpretive dancing."

I'm giving up the blue plate luncheon. I'm waiting for some genius to think up the startling novelty of a pink plate luncheon and just naturally knock the eating groups off their stools.

I'm giving up after-dinner speeches—whether trying to make them myself or trying to listen while others try to make them. When I think of the precious golden hours I've wasted thinking up after-dinner speeches and the equally precious hours I've spent listening to after-dinner speeches, I start babbling forth in vain regrets until pretty soon I'm as incoherent as alphabetical soup.

I'm giving up any novel written by any author who thought he had to write up to his intellectual equals, if any, or else dip his pen in dirt and write down to the putrid-minded. I'm giving my patronage to the writer who neither fancies himself a flagpole sitter nor yet a sewage inspector.

I'm giving up any faint hope I may have had that, for so long as we elect the kind of representatives we do elect, we can expect any congress, however great the national emergency or however pressing the national crisis, to think in terms of the whole country rather than in terms of narrow partisanism, and sectional prejudice, and personal advantage and political sculduggery. I'm asking you: Did statesmanship go out with the side-bar buggy and Indian heads burnt on sole leather? Or if not, where did it go? And when do you expect it back, if ever?

I'm giving up discussing the question of when beer will return. So far as I am able to judge, it hasn't been away.

I'm giving up technocracy. I'm only about half way through relativity and am now sitting down waiting for Einstein to catch up.

I'm giving up going to plays written to order for matinee idols whose idea of a proper starring vehicle is a three-hour monologue interrupted only by terrific applause. I'm giving up going to all-star revivals with a cast that reads like the posted list at The Lamb. I'm giving up going to any play featuring any veteran actor described by the critics as "sterling," meaning solid or as "finished," meaning finished. I'm giving up any plays written by Eugene O'Neill because I'm committed to the six-hour day.

I'm giving up Charles E. Curtis.

I'm giving up all motion picture productions advertised as "colossal" or "epochal."

I'm giving up Thousand Islands salad dressing. Why, with that many islands to choose from, should they always pick the wrong one?

I'm giving up my battle against having a complete set of uppers installed.

Oh, yes, and just in case it didn't take the other time, all over again I'm giving up modernistic painting, which I gave up the first time I ever saw any of it—and thought for the moment it was an acute bilious attack—back about 1916.

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

"I TOLD Pa he'd just be wastin' his money when he went to them city specialists. I don't care how smart they are, they can't know as much about you as the old family doctor that's been tinkerin' with you for 20 years.

"When folks go to a big specialist, they pay him to find out what's wrong an' then they hide all the facts they're ashamed of. He's got to guess right in spite o' their lyin'.

"But you can't fool the old family doctor. You may have all the symptoms o' typhoid fever, pleurisy an' lockjaw; but if it's just a hangover, he knows it because his wife told him what she heard an' he knows your old tricks, anyway.

"Knowin' medicine ain't half as important as knowin' your patient, an' a doctor that seen your old folks die an' waits on all o' your freak kin folks an' knows all o' your ornery habits has got you diagnosed right before his thermometer is shook down.

"There's nothin' wrong with Pa, anyway, except feedin' the motor too much gas when he's free wheelin'. I could o' told him that, but a man with a pain ain't satisfied until he pays some doctor $30 for the Latin name of it."

GOLF CLOTHES WITH CHIC AT PAR

Conservative Lines and Intriguing Details Mark the New Spring Sports Mode

MARCH—what a gay month in the world of fashions? And with the new season comes the need for replenishing the wardrobe. Since modern women are known for being just a step ahead in their clothes, couturiers realize the necessity for having their showings ready well in advance of any set date.

Therefore, even though we may not have actually bought any clothes for the new season, we've seen and heard a lot concerning what the first mild days will bring us in the way of fashions. Then, too, if we have paid even casual attention to our fashion notes this Winter, we are familiar with what was worn this past season at the Southern resorts.

We've devoted our page to new sports frocks today, so that every outdoor girl will be sure to find a costume that will please her.

THE COTTON FROCK

BELOW, a youthful red and white striped seersucker dress with narrow roll collar closing with one large button, cap sleeves, tie girdle and inverted pleated skirt. Interest is centered in the back of this bright yellow sports frock fashioned of waffle pique. Inverted pleats are set into the deep yoke, allowing freedom and comfort to the golfer. The two-piece dress of green silk rayon is especially smart with its mannish revere collar, narrow buckled belt, pleated skirt.

LINEN IS FAVORED

IN this rose-colored, one-piece tailored frock. The revere collar is used with a side-front closing on the bodice. Note the tie belt, long sleeves and the kick pleats in the skirt. No golf wardrobe is complete without at least one knitted costume and this loose boucle knit frock in green has a high surplice neckline. The clever yoke design on the bodice is achieved with a lace-like stitch. The narrow belt is fashioned of twisted yarn. The yellow mesh frock, at the right, boasts a high turtle neck and sunburst tucking. An inserted godet adds fullness.

TEA FOR TWO

APPROPRIATE for active sports and dressy enough for the five o'clock tea date is the orchid crepe dress, at left, with its revered closing and tiny, pleated ruffles. New features to be noted on the white, two-piece woolen costume above are the extreme side closing, the clever diagonal pocket and the stitched belt. At the right another knitted model in dull blue, one piece, with a surplice closing.

ABOVE we have sketched a very comfortable ghillie tie for the golf course, fashioned of white buckskin, with a brown calf trim and brown heel. There is a perforated design on toe and heel. The white chamois gloves are trimmed with white kid and button in the back.

SMALL HATS—NARROW BRIMS

THE brim, even though very narrow, keeps the sun from interfering with the perfect shot. At the left is shown a chic model of white knitted straw with a rolled brim that dips in front. A striped grosgrain ribbon is used for banding. The white felt cloche, seen at the right, has a narrow brim and round crown. There is a wide banding of red, white and brown grosgrain finished with a bow at the back.

NEW SECRETARY OF THE NAVY AND MRS. SWANSON entering St. John's church to attend the services which preceded the inauguration ceremonies.

GARNER TURNS OVER HOUSE RULE TO HENRY T. RAINEY, of Illinois. Speaker Garner surrenders the gavel of authority, preparing himself to transfer to the senate, where he presides henceforth as vice president of the United States.

IN WORLD SPOTLIGHT—President Hoover, retiring chief executive of the United States, and his successor, President-elect Roosevelt, as they proceed from the White House to the Capitol to transfer the reins of office.

PROMINENT FIGURES OF 35TH STATE CONFERENCE. DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, WHICH CONVENES HERE MARCH 15, 16, 17

(See story in society section of today's Constitution)

MRS. RUSSELL WILLIAM MAGNA, president general of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who will attend the 35th conference of Georgia Society, D. A. R., convening in Atlanta on March 15. (Harris and Ewing)

MRS. JULIAN McCURRY, of Athens, regent of Georgia Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who will preside over the state conference convening in Atlanta on March 15. (Ball.)

MRS. W. F. DYKES, of Atlanta, first state vice regent of Georgia Society, D. A. R., who will preside at several sessions of the convention. (Bascom Biggers)

MRS. JAMES D. CROMER, regent of Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., the hostess organization to the Georgia Society, D. A. R., conference convening in Atlanta on March 15. She will act as official hostess at the conference. (Bascom Biggers)

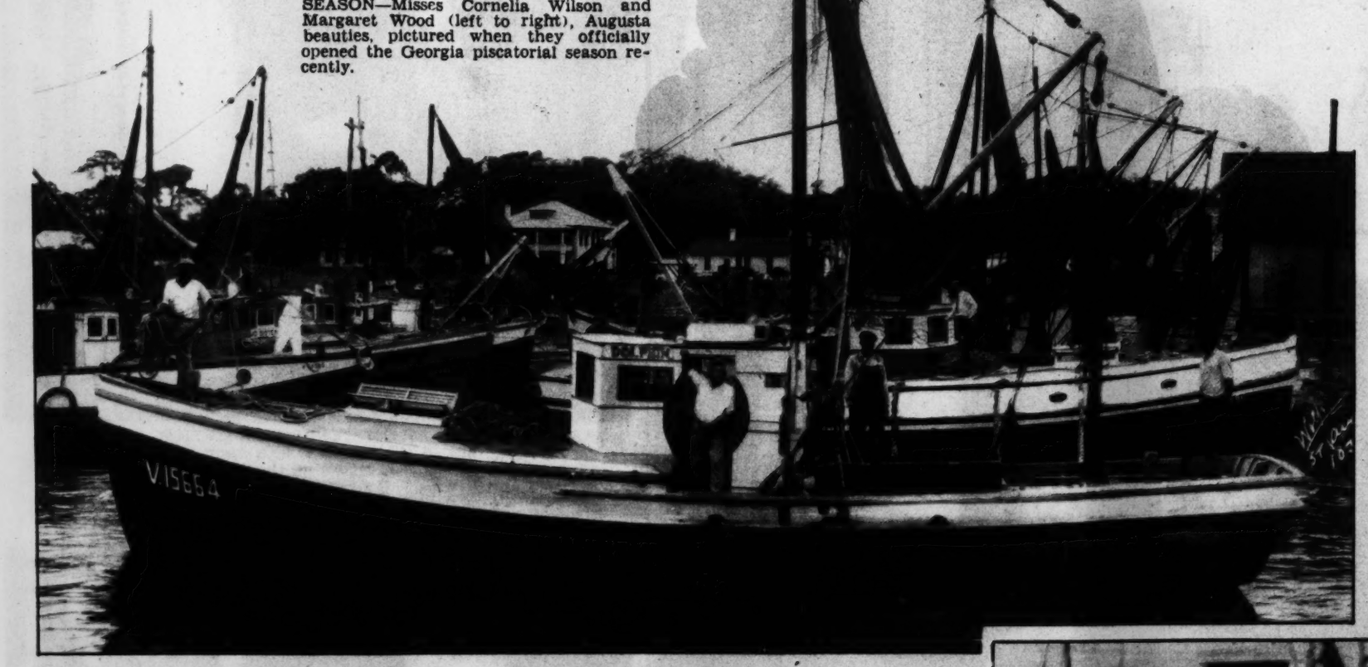

OPENING THE GEORGIA FISHING SEASON—Misses Cornelia Wilson and Margaret Wood (left to right), Augusta beauties, pictured when they officially opened the Georgia piscatorial season recently.

SPENCER TRACY AND JOAN BENNETT in a scene from "Me and My Gal," at the Fox.

THE THREE BARRYMORES, Lionel, John and Ethel, as they appear in the great masterpiece of the films, "Rasputin," now playing at the Grand. The boy is Tad Alexander.

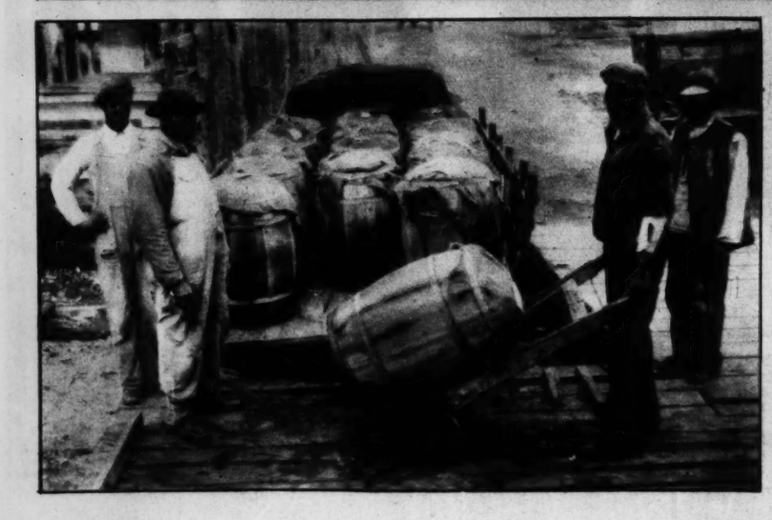

SHRIMP FISHING On the Southern Coast

The lowly shrimp has been the foundation upon which a huge industry has been developed along the southern coast. The center of activity moves with the seasons of the year from North Carolina to Florida. The Georgia coast is one of the key points of the industry. These interesting photos show various phases of the work.

A BUSHEL OF SHRIMP net the fisherman about $1.50. The average daily catch is 25 to 50 bushels.

READY TO PUT TO SEA—Shrimp boats leaving for a night's fishing off the southern coast.

READY FOR MARKET Cleaned shrimp leaving the packing plant for foreign markets. They are packed in ground ice.

SHRIMP FISHERMEN MENDING BROKEN NETS—The nets cost $85 each and they are handled with great care.

LIKE THE LATE WAR! — Building ruins in Neunkirchen, Germany, bear tragic testimony to the fierceness of the explosion of a gasometer that cost 100 lives and injured more than 1,000 persons.

PANAMA CANAL RECEIVES ITS FIRST CLEANING—That magnificent engineering project received its first cleaning recently, since it was first opened in August, 1914.

AN AFTERNOON ENSEMBLE worn by Norma Shearer, lovely Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, brings back memories of the costumes of long ago. It is carried out in crinkly crepe.

THE "SPOILS" AT SEA ISLAND'S FIRST "SCAVENGING" PARTY—The newest society game is "scavengers." This quest included the following articles: A hair from the head of a red-headed woman, live oyster in shell, golf ball from a water hazard, one swan feather, half of a clay pigeon, a sea dollar, etc.

RALPH BELLAMY AND SALLY EILERS in a scene from "Second-Hand Wife," at the Georgia.

GOING TO EXTREMES—The biggest dog introduces the smallest dog at the opening of the Pasadena dog show. They are a Great Dane and a Chihuahua.

IN EXCELLENT "TASTE"—Some of the dust that it has been gathering for 40 years is removed from a full bottle of Cedar Brook sour mash whisky by its owner, Andrew J. Stephens, 85, of Indianapolis.

Matrix Shoes

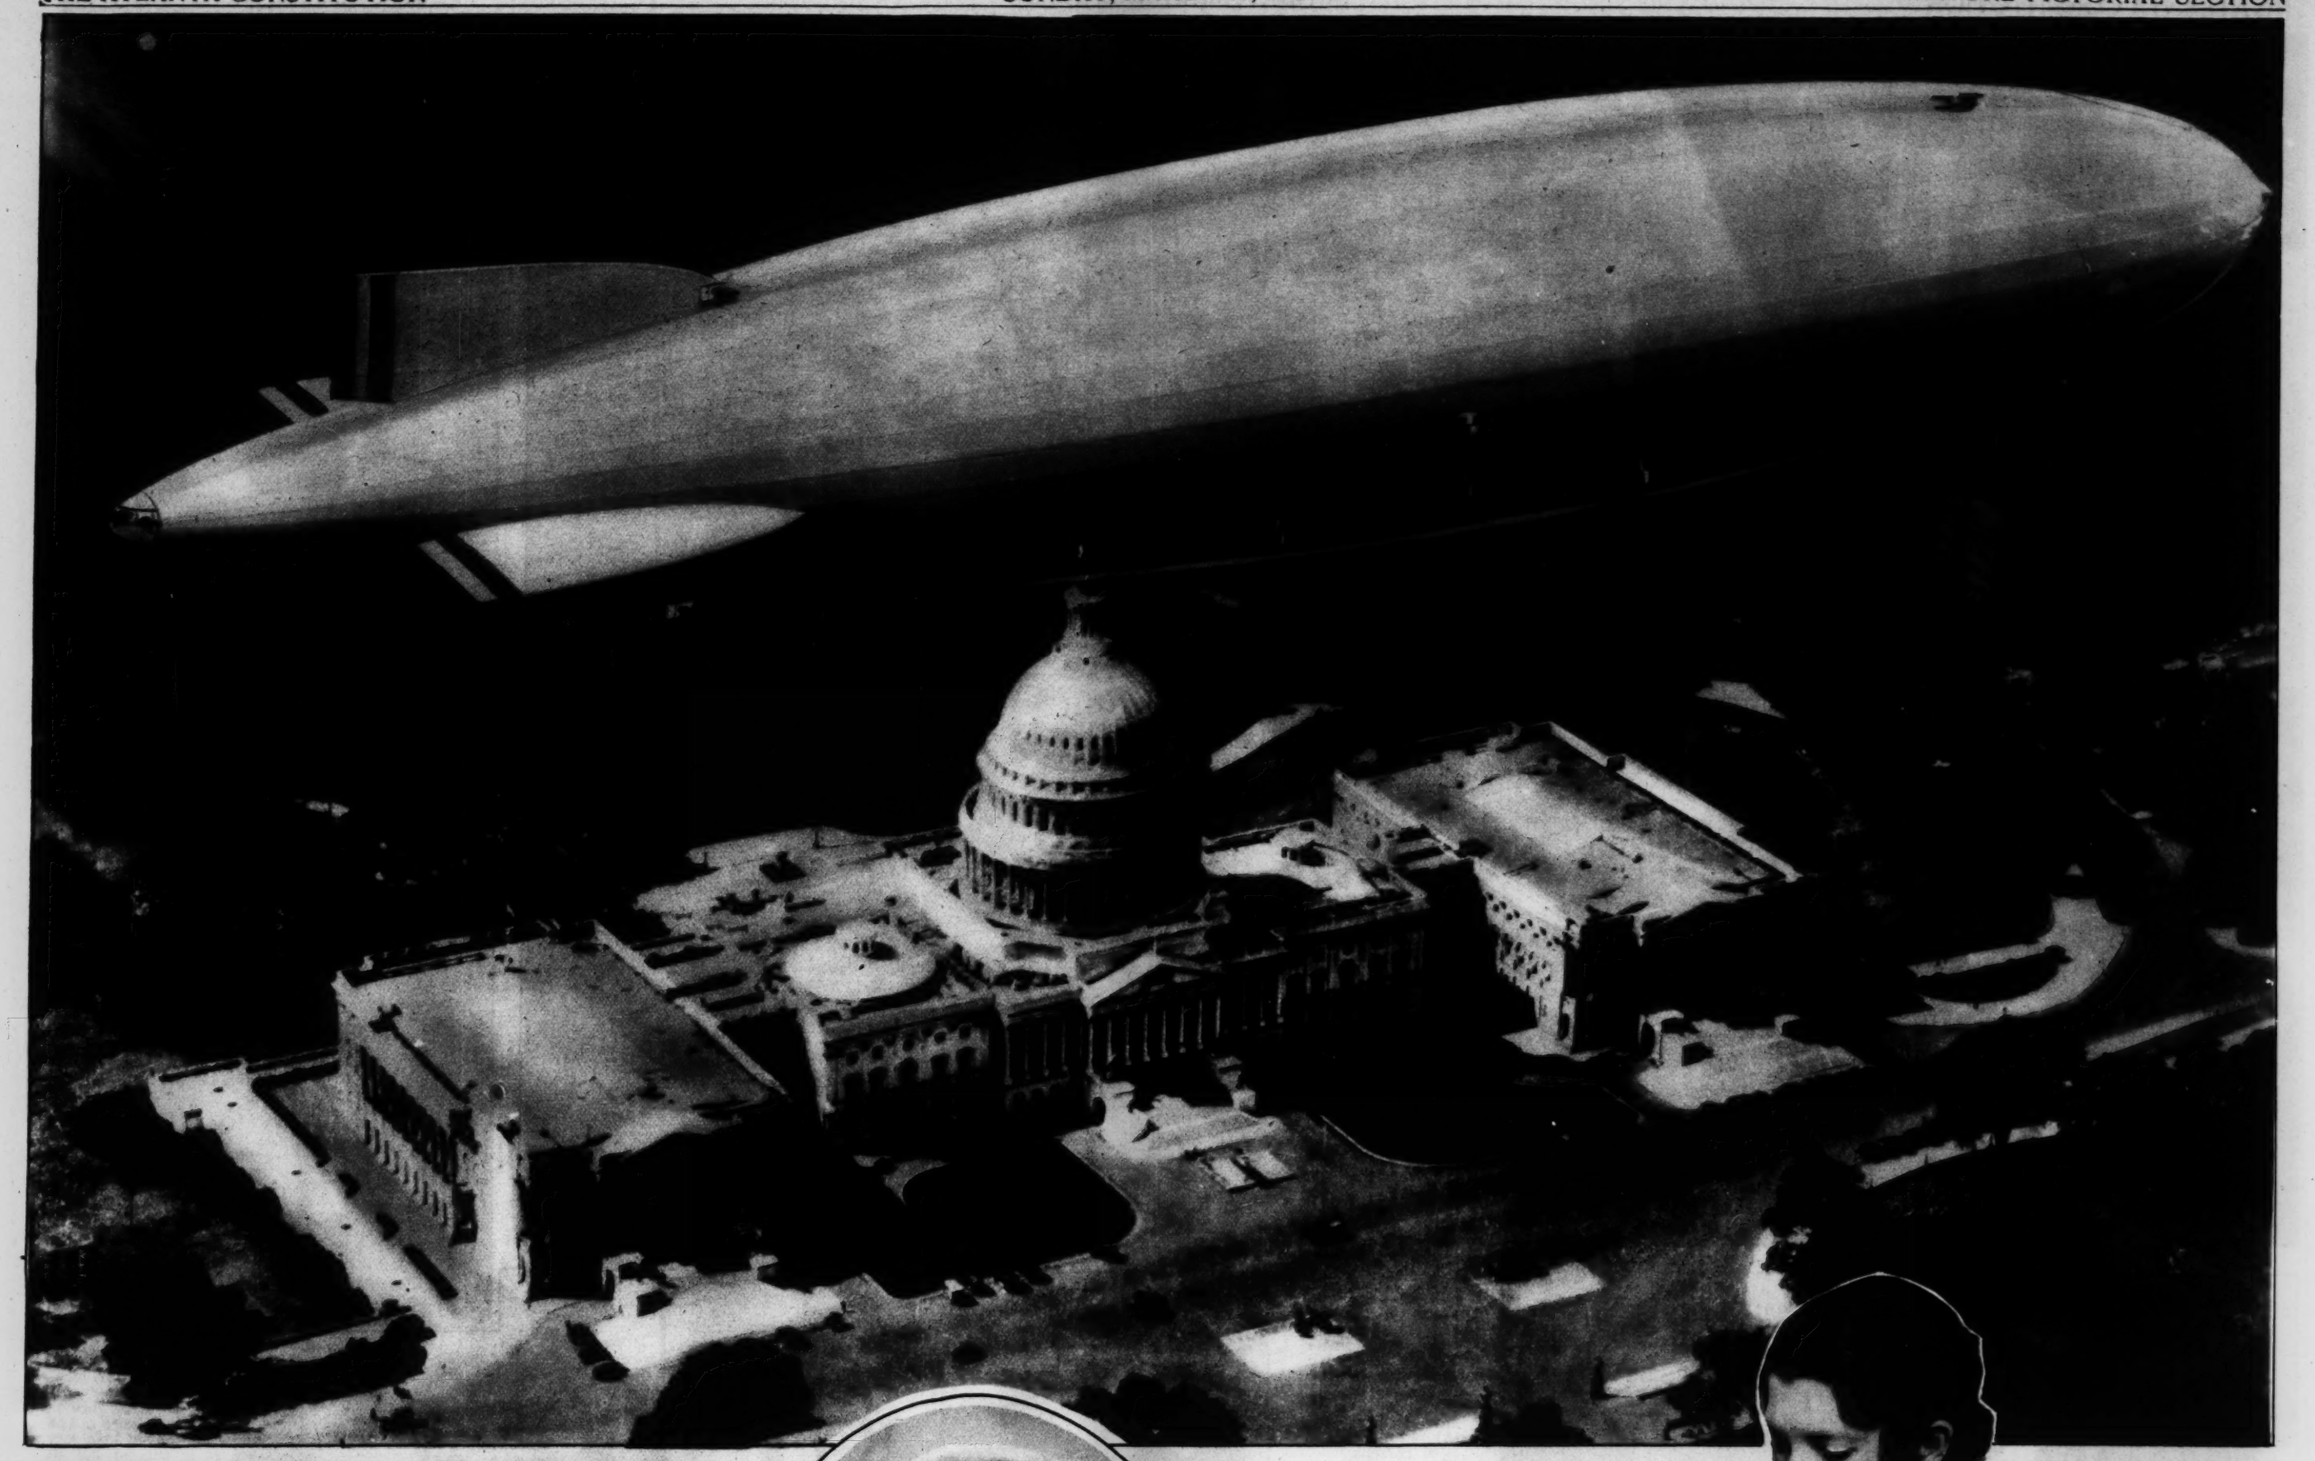

Fashion's smartest is "Lacette," the new Matrix shoe. It's light, it's dainty, it's cool as only a ventilated shoe can be and every one of its 14,174 perforations contributes to its lace-like loveliness. You can enjoy this charming pattern for every type of costume—three-eyelet tie, one-eyelet tie, and one-strap in blue, beige or black. And, of course, "Lacette" assures you the instant, natural ease of a sole moulded to fit every arch and curve of the foot.

Sizes AAAAA to B, 4 to 9.

THE "MACON," WORLD'S LARGEST AIRCRAFT, CHRISTENED YESTERDAY—An artist's conception of the giant navy dirigible named in honor of the central Georgia city, as it would appear in comparison to the United States Capitol. A large delegation of prominent Georgians, headed by Mayor Glenn Toole, of Macon, attended the celebration.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY—Mr. and Mrs. A. Russ, of Atlanta, who recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Mrs. J. L. Solomon, a daughter, gave the celebration dinner. (Jennings.)

"MISS GRIFFIN"—Mrs. Dorothy Hines Greer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hines, was crowned "Miss Griffin" and received a handsome silver loving cup recently in a beauty contest held in that city.

MADE FROM PINE BURRS AND AN OLD LOG! This remarkable piece of work, created by John F. Smith, of Atlanta, shows two wild turkeys resting on an old log. Mrs. Charles Trout is admiring the work. (J. T. Holloway.)

MRS. HOOVER LEAVES—Mrs. Herbert Hoover leaving on the transcontinental journey to her home in Palo Alto, Cal.

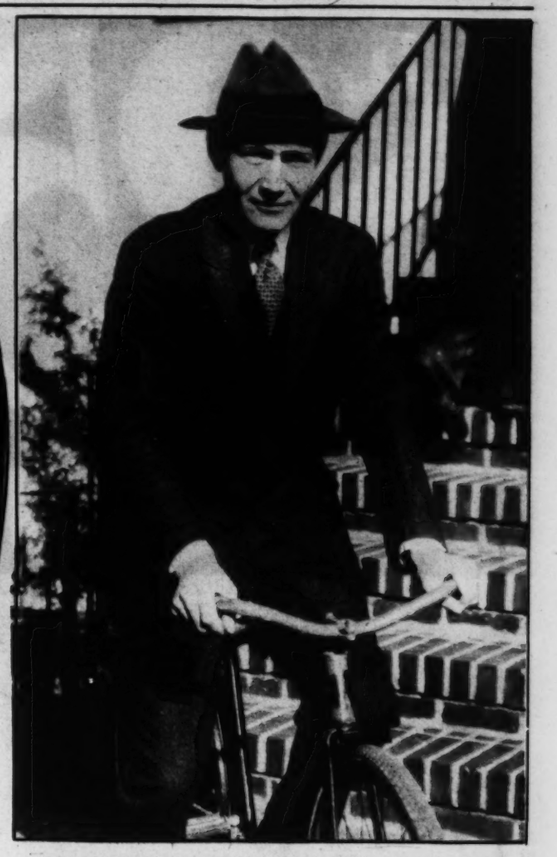

HONORED—Mrs. R. B. Russell Sr., wife of Chief Justice R. B. Russell Sr. and mother of Senator R. B. Russell Jr., was honor guest at a tea given by the Georgia State College for Women Alumnae Club of Atlanta at the Atlanta Athletic Club, is shown with three of the G. S. C. W. alumnae. Reading from left to right: Miss Julia Mae Fillingim, Mrs. R. B. Russell Sr., Mrs. M. L. Wise and Mrs. John Schly Thompson.

MRS. CORDELL HULL, wife of the new secretary of state from Tennessee.

NEW BUDGET DIRECTOR AND HIS BICYCLE—Lewis C. Douglas, of Arizona, was delighted to place his feet once more on the pedals of his bicycle, in Washington.

MR. AND MRS. CARLING DINKLER, of Atlanta, snapped by the cameraman while taking a stroll at Miami Beach. During their stay in Florida they were extensively entertained. (Alexander Studio)

ROOSEVELT'S FRIEND—Andre Lefebvre de la Boulaye, personal friend of President-elect Roosevelt, who will be named ambassador from France to Washington to succeed Paul Claudel.

THE BESSIE TIFT COLLEGE GLEE CLUB, which recently started a tour of Griffin, LaGrange, Newnan, Carrollton, LaFayette, Calhoun and Cartersville.

JUST LIKE HIS DAD—When Palmer Long, son of Senator and Mrs. Huey P. Long, was a duke at the children's carnival ball last year he expressed the desire to be a king. This year Palmer's wish is gratified.

THESE THREE LITTLE MAIDS at the recent Sigma Omega Sigma dance are Misses Le Gay Smith, Dorothy Aiken and Martha Hill. (George Cornett.)

RUTH ST. DENIS in one of the costumes she will wear in her recital to be given at the Atlanta Woman's Club on March 13.

CELEBRATES BICENTENNIAL—Students of Glennwood school, in Decatur, who were among more than 150 who took part in a bicentennial program staged there recently. At left, a group who appeared in a dance number at the entertainment. (George Cornett.)

THE KIPLINGS—Mr. and Mrs. Rudyard Kipling at Nice, noted French resort. Kipling is England's greatest man of letters.

THE GUMPS

HERE HE IS - BOYS AND GIRLS — A COWBOY AT LAST — HOW DO YOU LIKE HIM IN THAT BIG WESTERN HAT AND THE COWPUNCHER'S KERCHIEF? WHAT A LAUGH THOSE BRONCHO BUSTERS HAD WHEN CHESTER STEPPED OFF THE TRAIN IN HIS STORE CLOTHES - BUT COUSIN CHARLEY TOOK CARE OF THAT IN A HURRY — HE FITTED CHESTER OUT IN A COMPLETE OUT-FIT FROM TALL HAT TO HIGH HEEL BOOTS AND SPURS —

CHESTER GUMP —

SIDNEY SMITH

AND LOOK AT THIS PICTURE — IS CHESTER PROUD OF THOSE CHAPS WITH THE REAL GUN POCKET AND STUDDED BELT - JUST LIKE ALL THE REAL COWBOYS WEAR —

AND NOW FOR THE BIG ROUND-UP — THERE GOES CHESTER AND COUSIN CHARLEY OUT TO CORRAL THE PONY — WHAT A THRILL THIS IS GOING TO BE FOR CHESTER — HE HASN'T SEEN THE PONY YET — AND HE CAN HARDLY WAIT —

DO YOU THINK YOU CAN STICK ON HIS BACK?

SURE - I CAN - I WANT TO LEARN TO BE THE BEST RIDER THERE IS OUT HERE -

GYP - THAT'S THE PONY'S NAME — WHEN COUSIN CHARLEY HEARD THAT CHESTER WAS COMING HE BOUGHT THE PRETTIEST LITTLE BLACK PONY FOR HIM — NOT AN ORDINARY MUSTANG LIKE THE COWBOYS HAVE - BUT A REAL BOY'S PONY — JUST CHESTER'S SIZE - WITH A WESTERN SADDLE TO FIT HIM AND A REGULAR LASSO — GYP HAS BEEN RUNNING WILD ALL THIS TIME — IT WILL BE GREAT SPORT FOR CHESTER TO SEE COUSIN CHARLEY CATCH HIM AND PUT THE SADDLE ON —

GEE - ISN'T HE A BEAUTY —

CHESTER'S FIRST GLIMPSE OF GYP — COME ON! SWING THAT LASSO - COUSIN CHARLEY —

A BLACK PONY WITH A WHITE STAR ON HIS FOREHEAD — THAT'S GYP - AND WHAT A TIME THEY HAD CATCHING HIM — ROUND AND ROUND THE CORRAL THEY CHASED HIM — BEFORE COUSIN CHARLEY FINALLY ROPED HIM — AND HOW HE BUCKED WHEN THEY PUT THE SADDLE AND BRIDLE ON HIM —

NOW - TAKE ONE OF ME ON HIS BACK -

CHESTER CAN'T WAIT TILL THE FOLKS BACK HOME HAVE SEEN HIM IN THIS PICTURE — AND NOW FOR THE FIRST TIME HE IS GOING TO GET UP IN THE SADDLE —

BETTER HANG ON TIGHT NOW, CHESTER - HE'S PRETTY WILD TODAY -

LET ME HAVE A GUN IN MY HAND -

NOW JUST SIT UP THERE AND SMILE - PRETEND YOU'RE BUFFALO BILL FOR A MINUTE —

WHOA!

RIGHT OVER THE FENCE —

HOLD ON CHESTER!

STOP HER SOMEBODY!

WHAT STARTLED HIM? WAS IT THE CLICK OF THE CAMERA?

CATCH HER BOYS!

THAT BOY WILL BE KILLED!

HE'S HEADING FOR THE CLIFF -

HEAD HER OFF COWBOY!

STRAIGHT FOR THE MOUNTAINS — THE PONY TOOK OUT LIKE A SHOT - WITH CHESTER CLINGING DESPERATELY TO THE REINS - THIS IS HIS FIRST RIDE - BUT LITTLE DOES HE KNOW THE DANGER HE IS IN — THAT NARROW TRAIL LEADS BY TALL CLIFFS AND ACROSS DEEP CANYONS, WHERE A MADLY GALLOPING HORSE MAY STUMBLE ANY SECOND — BEFORE COUSIN CHARLEY AND THE COWBOYS CAN FOLLOW ON THEIR HORSES, CHESTER IS A HALF MILE OFF — CAN THEY SAVE HIM? TO BE CONTINUED —
